

MARX

NOTES ON INDIAN HISTORY

DS
436
.M3

NUNC COGNOSCO EX PARTE

TRENT UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

WORKERS OF ALL COUNTRIES, UNITE!

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2019 with funding from Kahle/Austin Foundation

Karl Marx

KARL MARX

NOTES ON INDIAN HISTORY
(664 - 1858)

SECOND IMPRESSION

---

FOREIGN LANGUAGES PUBLISHING HOUSE

Moscow

Lawrence and Wishart Ltd
81 Chancery Lane, London, W1C2

PUBLISHER'S NOTE

This English edition of Notes on Indian History (Chronologische Auszüge über Ostindien) by Karl Marx follows the composition of the Russian edition prepared by the Institute of Marxism-Leninism of the C.C., C.P.S.U. in 1947. Due account has been taken of the corrections made by the Institute in the course of its subsequent work on the manuscript.

Unlike the Russian edition, insertions by the author are enclosed in parentheses.

The MS. of Notes was never edited by the author. That is the reason why, in preparing them for publication, certain changes of a technical nature had to be made, changes which naturally affected also material quoted by Marx from English authors in English. Specifically, the following alterations have been made:

1. The spelling of most Indian proper names, borrowed by the author from the works of Elphinstone and Sewall, has been brought into line with modern authoritative sources. Preference has been given to the traditional spelling.

2. Articles, pronouns, auxiliary verbs and conjunctions have been inserted wherever called for, and obvious slips of the pen have been corrected.

CONTENTS

	Page
Preface to the Russian Edition . . . . .	9
[MUSSULMAN CONQUEST OF INDIA] . . . . .	12
(1) Mussulman Dynasties in Khorassan . . . . .	13
(2) Mahmud of Ghazni, and His Invasions of India; Ditto His Descendants, 999-1152, Resp. 1186. . . . .	14
(3) House of Ghur, Establishing Itself and Ghazni on the Ruins of the House of Sebuktegin, 1152-1206 . . . . .	18
(4) The Slave [Mameluke] Kings of Delhi, 1206-1288 . . . . .	19
(5) House of Khilji, 1288-1321 . . . . .	21
(6) House of Tughlak, 1321-1414 . . . . .	23
(7) Government of the Sayyids, 1414-1450 . . . . .	25
(8) House of Lodi, 1450-1526. . . . .	26
[Excerpts from R. Sewell's Book] . . . . .	26
States of India at the Time of Baber's Arrival . . . . .	28
THE MOGUL EMPIRE IN INDIA, 1526-1761 . . . . .	30
(1) Reign of Baber, 1526-1530 . . . . .	30
(2) First and Second Reign of Humayun, with the Inter- mediate Government of the House of Sur, 1530-1556 . . . . .	31
(3) Reign of Akbar, 1556-1605 . . . . .	33
Wars in the Deccan, 1596-1600 . . . . .	37
(4) Reign of Jahangir, 1605-1627 . . . . .	38
(5) Reign of Shah Jahan, 1627-1658 . . . . .	39
(6) Reign of Aurangzeb, and Rise of the Marathas, 1658-1707 . . . . .	41
[Penetration of European Merchants into India] . . . . .	46
(7) Successors of Aurangzeb to the Great Battle of Panipat; Extinction of Mogul Sovereignty, 1707-1761 . . . . .	49
(1) Bahadur Shah, 1707-1712 . . . . .	49
(2) Jehandar Shah, 1712-1713 . . . . .	50
(3) Farrukhshah, 1713-1719 . . . . .	50
(4) Mohammed Shah, 1719-1748 . . . . .	51

	Page
(5) Ahmad Shah, 1748-1754 . . . . .	53
(6) Alamgir II, 1754-1759 . . . . .	54
State of the Country after the Battle at Panipat, 1761	55
[A Survey of Foreign Invasions of India] . . . . .	56
Old Deccan States . . . . .	57
[THE CONQUEST OF INDIA BY THE BRITISH EAST INDIA
COMPANY] . . . . .	60
I. The East India Co. in Bengal, 1725-1755 . . . . .	60
II. War with the French in the Carnatic, 1744-1760 . . . . .	61
III. Events in Bengal, 1755-1773 . . . . .	67
Clive's Second Administration, 1765-1767 . . . . .	73
Events in England . . . . .	75
IV. Affairs in Madras and Bombay, 1761-1770 . . . . .	76
V. Warren Hastings' Administration, 1772-1785 . . . . .	80
Maratha Affairs, 1772-1775 . . . . .	82
First Maratha War, 1775 . . . . .	84
Grand Confederacy between Marathas and Mysoreans	86
Accession of Tipu Sahib, December 1782 . . . . .	87
End of Warren Hastings' Administration, 1783-1785 .	89
[The Affairs of the East India Company in Britain]	91
[VI.] Lord Cornwallis' Administration, 1785-1793 . . . . .	94
Career of Sindhia, 1784-1794 . . . . .	95
Parliamentary Proceedings, 1786-1793 . . . . .	96
[Confiscation of Ryot Lands in Favour of the Zemindars,	97
1793] . . . . .
[VII.] Sir John Shore's Administration, 1793-1798 . . . . .	101
[VIII.] Lord Wellesley's Administration, 1798-1805 . . . . .	103
Great Maratha War, 1803-1805 . . . . .	108
[IX.] Lord Cornwallis' Second Administration, 1805 . . . . .	112
[X.] Sir George Barlow's Administration, 1805-1806 . . . . .	112
[XI.] Lord Minto's Administration, 1807-1813 . . . . .	113
Ranjit Singh . . . . .	113
Second Embassy to Persia . . . . .	114
Expedition against Persian Pirates . . . . .	114
Expedition to Macao . . . . .	114
Seizure of Mauritius and Bourbon . . . . .	115
Rise of the Pindaris . . . . .	116
Ryotwari System in Madras . . . . .	116
Proceedings in Parliament . . . . .	117
[XII.] Lord Hastings' Administration, 1813-1822 . . . . .	118
Extinction of the Maratha Powers . . . . .	121
Fall of the Raja of Nagpur . . . . .	121
Fall of the House of Holkar . . . . .	122

	Page
LAST PERIOD, 1823-1858 (EXTINCTION OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY) . . . . .	125
(1) Lord Amherst's Administration, 1823-1828 . . . . .	125
(2) Lord William Bentinck's Administration, 1828-1835 . . . . .	127
(3) Sir Charles Metcalfe, Provisionary Governor-General, 1835-1836 . . . . .	130
(4) Lord Auckland's Administration, 1836-1842 . . . . .	130
(5) Lord Ellenborough's (Elephant's) Administration, 1842-1844 . . . . .	140
(6) Lord Hardinge's Administration, 1844-1848 . . . . .	143
First Sikh War, 1845-1846 . . . . .	144
(7) Lord Dalhousie's Administration, 1848-1856 . . . . .	145
Second Sikh War, 1848 . . . . .	146
(8) Lord Canning's Administration, 1856-1858 . . . . .	149
Persian War, 1856-1857 . . . . .	149
The Sepoy Revolt, 1857-1858 . . . . .	150
INDEX . . . . .	158
MAPS
(1) India in 1525
(2) The Mogul Empire at the Time of Its Greatest Expansion
(3) India and Adjacent Countries

PREFACE TO THE RUSSIAN EDITION

From the fifties on, Marx carefully studied India as a colonial country where diverse forms and methods of colonial rule and plunder had been practised. He also took interest in India because she still retained, to a certain degree, relations peculiar to primitive communal society. "However changing the political aspect of India's past must appear, her social condition has remained unaltered since her remotest antiquity, until the first decennium of the 19th century," Marx wrote in 1853. ("The British Rule in India," Selected Works, English edition, Moscow, Vol. I, p. 348.)

Marx's Notes cover more than a thousand years of Indian history—from the mid-7th to the mid-19th century: from the first Moslem invasions to August 2, 1858, when the British Parliament passed the India Bill legalizing the annexation of that country.

The early period, ending in the middle of the 18th century, takes up less than one-third of Notes. The rest of the manuscript is devoted to the history of the British conquest of India.

Marx lists the Moslem dynasties which ruled in northern India, in the valleys of the Indus and the Ganges, and from there extended their conquests southwards. He deals in greater detail with the history of the Mogul Empire, which came into being in 1526 following the invasion of Baber, who traced his ancestry back to Tamerlane and Genghis Khan.

Before turning to notes on the history of the British conquest of India, Marx once again lists in brief the various foreign invasions of India, beginning with Alexander of Macedon, and surveys the various Indian states.

Notes on Indian History hold a prominent place among the manuscripts written by Marx in the last years of his life. It is an important supplement to the Chronological Notes on general history published as part of the Marx and Engels Archives (Vols. V-VIII).

As he studied the changing forms of land tenure in India, Marx compiled a chronology intended as a succinct description of the course of historical events on the vast territory of that country. He did not confine himself to the nature of the forms of land tenure but sought to study the concrete historical process as a whole. Among other things, he studied the circumstances under which Moslem law had influenced Indian land tenure, as well as the development of the feudal system in this particular case and the manner in which the British had conquered and oppressed India.

Subsequently Marx analyzed, step by step, the expansion of British rule in India. The conquest of India proceeded under the direction of the British East India Company, founded in the early 17th century as a tool of financiers, merchants, and aristocrats. Marx reveals the imperialist forms and methods of government which the British used in India, and portrays a long succession of British rulers of India.

In the section headed by Marx "Last Period, 1823-1858 (Extinction of the East India Company)," the author lists a series of wars of conquest which the British waged in India and neighbouring countries.

Marx's Notes show how the British colonial empire expanded as the result of ruthless exploitation of the peoples of India, and emphasize the economic and political consequences of British rule for those peoples.

Marx read an immense number of books to compile his Notes. With regard to the early period of Indian history—from the 7th to the mid-18th century—he drew chiefly on Elphinstone's History of India. For the chronology of the political history of the British conquest of India, he used The Analytical History of India by Robert Sewell (London, 1870).

In preparing Notes on Indian History for the press, some absolutely necessary corrections were made where the manuscript departs from generally accepted and indisputable data. In a number of cases concerning which later authoritative research furnishes facts that are at variance with Marx's dates, footnotes give other dates, with reference to the appropriate sources.

---

All the footnotes are by the Editors. Editorial insertions in the author's text are enclosed in square brackets.

Institute of Marxism-Leninism of the C.C., C.P.S.U.

NOTES ON INDIAN HISTORY (664-1858)

[MUSSULMAN CONQUEST OF INDIA]

- First Arab entry into India A. D. 664* (year 44 of the Hegira). Muhallab penetrated into Multan.
632. Mohammed died.
633. Arabs under Abu Bekr invaded Syria; they attacked Persia, which they crushed in 638, driving Persian Shah beyond the Oxus; about the same time, Egypt conquered by Amr, one of the Caliph's lieutenants.
650. Shah of Persia sought to regain his realm, was defeated and killed; the Arabs took the whole country up to the Oxus. Persia and India now separated only by Kabul in the north and Baluchistan in the south, with Afghanistan between them.
664. Arabs [reached] Kabul; in the same year, Muhallab, an Arab general, raided India, advanced as far as Multan.
690. Conquest of Kabul completed by Abdurrahman; sent as general by Hajaj, Governor of Basra, on the Persian Gulf [at the mouth of the Shatt al Arab].
711. Sind conquered by Muhammad Kasim (nephew to Hajaj) (he sailed from Basra).
714. Muhammad Kasim murdered by Caliph Walid out of jealousy; thereby signal was given for the downfall of Mohammedanism in Sind. Thirty years later, not an Arab remained behind.—Mohammedanism made more rapid progress among the Persians than among the Hindus because there priest class was lowest and most degraded class, whereas in India it was the most powerful political agent in the Commonwealth. (Elphinstone.)

(I) MUSSULMAN DYNASTIES IN KHORASSAN

713. Arabs established in Transoxiana<sup>1</sup>. (In 670, they crossed the Oxus, and somewhat later took Bokhara and Samarkand from the Turkomans); there was a great conflict at that time between the families of Fatima (Mohammed's sister) and Abbas (his uncle) for the office of Caliphate over this newly acquired territory; the winners were Abbas' family, and Harun-al-Rashid became the 5th caliph of that race. He died in—
- 809—on his way to Transoxiana to quell a rebellion; his son Mamun re-established Arab dominion in Khorassan, and later became Caliph in Baghdad in place of his father; his minister, Tahir, revolted and—
- 821—proclaimed himself independent Regent of Khorassan, where his family ruled—
- 821-870—as the Tahirid Dynasty; then he was deposed by the Saffarid family.
- 872-903. Saffarid Dynasty; Yakub, its last member, defeated by the House of Samani.
- 903-999. Samanid Dynasty. Various members of this family, who had independent possessions in Transoxiana, crossed the Oxus to the Persian side and conquered a large territory there, but the House of Buya (also called the Deilemites), then in possession of the Caliphate of Baghdad, drove them back into Khorassan, where they remained.
961. Under Abd-al-Malik, 5th rex<sup>2</sup> of the House of Samani, a Turki slave named Alptegin, who had entered royal service as court jester, was finally appointed Governor of Khorassan; Abd-al-Malik died soon after, and Alptegin, in disfavour with the new king, fled with a picked band of followers to Ghazni, where he made himself Governor.
- Sabuktegin*, one of Alptegin's slaves, succeeded the latter in favour at the court of Khorassan. Ghazni was only 200 miles from the Indian frontier, and Jaipal, Raja of Lahore, feeling uneasy about the proximity of a

<sup>1</sup> Modern historians use the Arabic name of that region, Mawarannahr.

<sup>2</sup> Ruler.

Moslem government, led army against Ghazni; compromise concluded; not kept by the Raja; thereupon Sabuktegin invaded India, marching through the Sulaiman Mts. Jaipal made confederacy with the Rajas of Delhi, Kanauj, and Kalinjar, advanced with army of several hundred thousand, and was defeated by Sabuktegin, who withdrew soon afterwards, leaving a Mohammedan officer as Governor of Peshawar, in the Punjab. Meanwhile a Tartar revolt had broken out against the Samanid King Nuh, 7th member of his family, and he was driven to the Persian side of the Oxus. Sabuktegin rushed to his aid, expelled the rebels, and out of gratitude Nuh made Mahmud (Sabuktegin's eldest son) Governor of Khorassan. As the latter was absent at Sabuktegin's death, the throne of Ghazni was seized by his younger brother Ismail; but Mahmud beat and imprisoned him. Mahmud sent an embassy to Mansur, then Samanid King, and demanded to be recognized as Governor of Ghazni; this was refused; Mahmud proclaimed himself independent King of Ghazni; Mansur was dethroned shortly afterwards and—

999—Mahmud of Ghazni assumed the title of Sultan

999-April 29, 1030 (when he died), Mahmud of Ghazni.

999. Ilek Khan, one of Mansur's chieftains, took advantage of the fall of the Samanids to seize Bokhara and all the Moslem possessions in Transoxiana. War between him and Mahmud.

1000. Mahmud made peace with Ilek Khan and married his daughter. His plan in so doing was to have freedom of action for expedition against India.

(2) MAHMUD OF GHAZNI,
AND HIS INVASIONS OF INDIA; DITTO HIS DESCENDANTS,
999-1152, RESP. 1186

1001. Mahmud's First Invasion of India. Lahore. With large force Mahmud crossed the Sulaiman Mts.; attacked Jaipal, Raja of Lahore, near Peshawar; then crossed Sutlej River, taking Bhatinda; returned to Ghazni, leaving Anand Pal, Jaipal's son, as Raja.

1003. 'Mahmud's Second Invasion. Bhatia. Anand Pal kept peace terms imposed on him, but one of the parties to the peace, the Raja of Bhatia, refused to pay tribute. Mahmud went against him and defeated him.
1005. Mahmud's Third Invasion. Multan. Abul Fateh Lodi, Afghan Chief of Multan, revolted; Mahmud defeated him and imposed a contribution. During his absence, Ilek Khan crossed the Oxus and attacked Khorassan with large Tartar army. Mahmud (with Indian elephants) hurried from Ghazni to Khorassan, drove Ilek Khan back to Bokhara.
1008. Mahmud's Fourth Invasion. Punjab. Temple of Nagarkot. Anand Pal of Bhatinda formed powerful combination of Indian chieftains against Mahmud. Hindus fought fanatically; Mahmud defeated them, sacked temple of Nagarkot.
1010. Mahmud conquered Kingdom of Ghur, inhabited by the Afghans.
- Winter 1010. Mahmud's Fifth Invasion. New invasion of Multan, Abul Fateh Lodi brought to Ghazni as a prisoner.
1011. Mahmud's Sixth Invasion. Thanesar (on the Jumna); here he captured rich temple before the princes could gather their army.
- 1013 and 1014. Seventh and Eighth Invasions. In Kashmir, two predatory and reconnoitring incursions.
1013. Ilek Khan died. In 1016, Mahmud took Bokhara and Samarkand, and in 1017 completed the conquest of Transoxiana.
- Winter 1017. Ninth Invasion. Great invasion by Mahmud; he marched through Peshawar into Kashmir, thence to the Jumna, crossed it, Kanauj (ancient city) surrendered to him; he then went on to Muttra, which he razed to the ground; returned after sacking Mahawan and Munj.
1022. Tenth and Eleventh Invasions. Two campaigns in aid of the Raja of Kanauj, who was expelled from this city. During one of these expeditions, Lahore absolutely reduced.

<sup>1</sup> 1004, according to Elphinstone, The History of India, London, 1866.

1024. Twelfth Invasion. Gujarat and Somnath. Mahmud's last great expedition; he marched from Ghazni to Multan, then across the Sind Desert to Gujarat, took the capital, Anhalwar, on his way devastated the territories of the Raja of Ajmer, then captured the temple of Somnath, gallantly defended by Rajput garrison. Then Mahmud returned to Anhalwar, where he stayed for a year. His [withdrawal] through the desert was disastrous.
1027. The Turki tribe of the Seljuks revolted, was crushed by Mahmud.
1028. The whole of Persia brought under Mahmud's rule through reconquest of Persian Iraq from the Deilemites.
- April 29, 1030. Death of Mahmud of Ghazni. The poet Firdausi lived at his court. His army consisted mainly of Turks, who were considered slaves to the Persians and formed into regiments of Mameluke (slave) Guards. The shepherds were mostly Tartars. The nobles and bulk of the higher population were Arabs; they had all powers of justice and religion; civil government was mostly carried on by the Persians.
Mahmud left three sons: Muhammad, Mas'ud, and Abul Rashid; when dying, he appointed the eldest, Muhammad, to be Sultan, but in the same year (1030) Mas'ud, a favourite of the soldiers, caught his elder brother, blinded him, held him captive, and took possession of the throne.
- 1030-1041. Sultan Mas'ud I. Under him the Seljuk Turks beyond the Oxus rose in revolt; Mas'ud drove them back to their country.
1034. Mas'ud I [went] to India to quell unrest at Lahore, then marched against the Seljuks.
- 1034-1039. His war against the Seljuks; he was utterly defeated at Zendegan [Dandankan], near Merv, and fled to India; mutiny of his officers; they placed on throne Muhammad's son Ahmed, who had his uncle Mas'ud pursued, seized, and—
- 1041—put to death. Sultan Ahmed [attacked] by Maudud, son of the murdered Sultan. [He] set out from Balkh, met Ahmed at Laghman, defeated him, had him and the whole of his family put to death, and proclaimed himself Sultan.

- 1041-1050. Sultan Maudud. Seljuks in Transoxiana elected Toghrul Beg their leader, sought conquests in all directions, and scattered their force, so that Maudud was enabled to conquer Transoxiana.—On the other hand, King of Delhi rebelled, wrested from the Mohammedans Thanesar, Nagarkot, and all the territory beyond the Sutlej except Lahore, saved by small Mohammedan garrison.
- 1046. Maudud, who had fought against the Seljuks all his life, was asked by the Raja of Ghur to help him against that tribe, promised to do so, but instead murdered his ally and took possession of Ghur; he himself died in 1050 at Ghazni; was succeeded by his younger brother—
- 1050-1051—Sultan Abul Hasan*; the whole country rebelled against him; he was left with nothing but Ghazni. His general, Ali Ibn Rabia, went to India, where he made conquests on his own account. The entire West [rose up] in arms for the Sultan's uncle, Abul Rashid, youngest son of Sultan Mahmud; the latter deposed Abul Hasan at Ghazni.
- 1051-1052. Sultan Abul Rashid; besieged at Ghazni by the rebel chief, Toghrul, the fort stormed and Sultan with nine royal princes murdered; Toghrul murdered by the infuriated populace and his tribe expelled. The country searched for some prince of House of Sabuktegin; Farrukhzad, imprisoned in a fort, found, released, and set on throne.
- 1052-1058. Sultan Farrukhzad. Peaceful reign; died natural death; succeeded by his brother—
- 1058-1089—Sultan Ibrahim* (the Pious). Uneventful reign; succeeded by his son—
- 1089-1114—Sultan Mas'ud II*; he carried the Mohammedan arms beyond the Ganges; succeeded by his son—
- 1114-1118—Sultan Arslan*; he seized and imprisoned all his brothers, except Bahram, who escaped by fleeing to the Seljuks; these took up his cause, marched against Arslan, defeated him, and set Bahram on the throne.

1118-1152. Sultan Bahram. After some years' reign, he interfered with Ghur, put one of the princes to death; Saifuddin, brother of the murdered man, rose against him, took Ghazni, and drove Bahram into the mountains. Bahram came back, seized Saifuddin, tortured him to death; Ala-uddin, a brother of the slaughtered man, came with army of Ghurians, utterly destroyed Ghazni, razed it to the ground, spared only three buildings—the tombs of Mahmud, Mas'ud I, and Ibrahim. Bahram fled to Lahore, and the Ghaznevid Dynasty came to an end. The royal family of Ghazni ruled at Lahore for 34 years more (till 1186), became then extinct. Thus ended the Dynasty of Mahmud of Ghazni, 187 years after Mahmud had proclaimed himself Sultan (in 999.)

(3) HOUSE OF GHUR, ESTABLISHING ITSELF AT GHAZNI ON THE RUINS OF THE HOUSE
OF SABUKTEGIN, 1152-1206

- 1152-1156. Ala-uddin. Bahram, in escaping from Arslan to the Seljuks, had promised to pay them tribute if they restored him to the throne, and actually paid it till his expulsion. As soon as Ala-uddin proclaimed himself King of Ghazni, Sanjar, the Seljuk chief, demanded that the tribute should be paid as before; Ala-uddin refused, Sanjar led his army against him and took him prisoner; nevertheless, he reinstated him.
1153. Tartar tribe of the Oghuz overran the territories of both Sanjar and Ala-uddin. At his death the latter was succeeded by his son—
- 1156-1157—Saifuddin; he was killed by one of his nobles, whose brother he had murdered. There were two nephews of Ala-uddin, the brothers Ghiyasuddin and Shehabuddin.
- 1157-1202. Ghiyasuddin on throne, made his brother Shehab commander of the armies and allied himself with him. The two brothers conquered Khorassan from the Seljuks, and worked harmoniously together.
1176. Shehab [went] to Lahore, defeated Khusrau II, last representative of the House of Mahmud.

1181. Shehab took Sind, and in 1186 imprisoned Khusrau; then he turned his attention to the powerful Rajput principalities in Hindustan; defeated, in attack on Delhi, by the great Raja Prithwi, who at that time ruled over Delhi and Ajmer, he returned to Ghazni.
1193. Shehab invaded India again, defeated Raja Prithwi, killed him, left Kutbuddin, an ennobled slave,<sup>1</sup> as Governor of Ajmer. The latter captured Delhi, remained there as Governor, and later proclaimed himself independent, becoming the first Mohammedan King of Delhi.
1194. Shehab took Kanauj and Benares (the Raja of the former city [was killed] and his family driven to Marwar, where they established a principality), annexed also Gwalior, while Kutbuddin ravaged Gujarat, Oudh, North Bihar, and Bengal.
1202. Ghiyas died; succeeded by his brother—
- 1202-1206—Shehabuddin; attempted conquest of Khwarezm, was defeated and had to flee for his life.
1206. His second march on Khwarezm; murdered by some Kakars (a robber tribe) when separated from his escort; succeeded by his nephew—
- 1206—Mahmud; was unable to safeguard kingdom against internal dissensions; it fell to pieces; its various parts fell into the hands of Shehab's favourite slaves. Partition of the sultanate: Kutbuddin took Delhi and the Indian possessions. (Delhi had been the capital of a kingdom, a small and insignificant one, for 1,200 years.) Yildiz, a slave, took Ghazni, but was expelled by the King of Khwarezm, and fled to Delhi. Naziruddin, another slave, made himself master of Multan and Sind.

((4) THE SLAVE [MAMELUKE] KINGS OF DELHI, 1206-1288

- 1206-1210. Kutbuddin; succeeded on his death by his son—
- 1210—Aram, who in the following year was overthrown and supplanted by his brother-in law—

<sup>1</sup> The slaves (Mamelukes) of an Eastern ruler often played a prominent role at court, and sometimes led palace revolutions.

- 1211-1236—Shamsuddin Altamsh.
1217. Enormous army of Mongols under Genghis Khan (b. 1164<sup>1</sup>), coming from Turan, attacked Khwarezm, gallantly defended by Jalal [the Shah's son] as far as the banks of the Indus, whither he was pushed. As none of the princes supported him, fearing the Mongols, he collected a band of Kakars, and plundered far and wide. Then Genghis Khan sent large army into Naziruddin's territory of Multan and Sind and ravaged them; when the Mongols had withdrawn across the Indus, Shamsuddin Altamsh took advantage of the condition of the country to attack, conquer, and annex it.
1225. Shamsuddin conquered Bihar and Malwa, and was—
- 1232—recognized as King throughout Hindustan proper; he died in 1236 at the zenith of his power, and was succeeded—
- 1236—by his son Rukneddin; in the same year he was deposed by his sister! who seized throne.
- 1236-1239. Sultana Razia; her love affair with an Abyssinian slave at the court outraged court nobles; Altunia, Chief of Bhatinda, revolted, took her prisoner, she fell in love with him and married him; he then led army to Delhi; nobles defeated him, put her to death; she was succeeded by her brother—
- 1239-1241—Muizzuddin Bahram, terrible despot; he was murdered; succeeded by Rukneddin's son—
- 1241-1246—Ala-uddin Mas'ud; assassinated. Throne now went to a grandson of Shamsuddin Altamsh and son of Muizzuddin Bahram—
- 1246-1266—Naziruddin Mahmud. Slave named Ghiyasuddin Balban was his minister; this Balban formed powerful border confederacy to repel Mogul (Mongol) attacks, and defeated many of the minor Hindu states.
1258. Balban repelled another Mongol attack on Punjab.
1266. King Naziruddin Mahmud died without issue; throne went to his minister—
- 1266-1286—Ghiyasuddin Balban; his court was the only Mohammedan court in India.

<sup>1</sup> In Marx's chronological excerpts from Schlosser, the year of Genghis Khan's birth is given as 1155 (Marx and Engels Archives, Vol. V, p. 219). This date is now generally accepted.

1279. He took the field because of insurrection in Bengal; during his absence Toghrul, the Governor of Delhi, revolted and made himself sovereign of that city; coming back, Ghiyas defeated him, killed him and 100,000 prisoners; he died in 1286, and was succeeded, not by his second son (his first son had died earlier), Bakarra Khan, who was still alive, but by the latter's son—
- 1286-1288—Kaikobad (the eldest son of Balban, Muhammad, had likewise left a son, Kaikhusrau, who was appointed Governor of Multan).
1287. [Kaikobad] poisoned his intriguing Vizier, Nizam-uddin (who at first plotted with Kaikhusrau, then had him put to death; he had also persuaded Kaikobad to treacherously murder all the Mongols at his court during a banquet). On the Vizier's death, confusion at the court. Chief party in Delhi at that time (1287) was that of the old Ghaznevid family of the Khiljies; in 1288, they killed Kaikobad and—
- 1288—set their leader, Jalaluddin Khilji, on throne of Delhi.

(5) HOUSE OF KHILJI, 1288-1321

- 1288-1295. Jalaluddin Khilji; introduced mild regime; pardoned a rebel chief, nephew of Ghiyasuddin; on beating back a Mongol incursion, he released all the prisoners.
1293. 3,000 Mongols joined him, and were settled at Delhi. His nephew Ala-uddin, made Governor of Oudh, planned invasion of the Deccan, marched through Ellichpur to Deogiri (now called Daulatabad), took the Hindu Raja living in profound peace by surprise, plundered his city and treasures, and imposed indemnity on the surrounding country; the Raja made peace with him and he returned to Malwa; then he went to Delhi, where he stabbed his royal uncle to the heart as the latter was embracing him.
- 1295-1317. Ala-uddin Khilji (most ferocious and sanguinary). At his uncle's death, he killed the latter's sons and widow. This led to rising, crushed by him through wholesale massacre of the rebels' women and children.

1297. He conquered Gujarat. Shortly afterwards [came] a Mongol invasion, repelled by Ala-uddin.
- 1298.<sup>1</sup> While on a hunting expedition, Ala-uddin was wounded by his nephew, Prince Suleiman, who left him behind as dead. Suleiman [went] to Delhi and laid claim to the throne; but Ala-uddin, having recovered, appeared before the army, which rallied to him en masse. Suleiman and two other nephews beheaded; thereupon popular uprising, quelled by terrible displays of cruelty.
1303. Ala-uddin took Chitor in Mewar, one of the most renowned hill forts in India, from a rebellious Rajput; ditto, Mongol incursion.
1304. Mongols made three separate attempts to force an entrance into Hindustan; each time repulsed; according to Ferishtah, on these occasions all the Mongol prisoners brought into camp were butchered in cold blood.
1306. As the Raja of Deogiri refused to pay the tribute imposed on him by Jalaluddin, Ala-uddin sent large army under the eunuch and former slave, Malik Kafur. The Raja was defeated and taken to Delhi, where he spent the rest of his life.
1309. Malik Kafur was sent south again, this time to Telingana, where he was victorious, capturing the strong fortress of Warangal.
1310. Malik Kafur conquered Carnata and the entire eastern coast to Cape Comorin, returned to Delhi, loaded with treasures; he had built mosque at Cape Comorin to commemorate the extension of his conquests. This was the first Mohammedan invasion of Tamil soil. Ala-uddin massacred all the 15,000 Moguls living at Delhi. Malik Kafur began to plot for succession; great disorder in the country because the people outraged by Ala-uddin's ferocity and tyranny.
1316. After the "tyrant" had given up the ghost in a fit of apoplexy brought on by rage, Kafur sought to seize the throne, but was "done in," and was succeeded by Ala-uddin's son—
- 1317-1320—Mubarak Khilji; he began by blinding his third brother and murdering the two generals who had helped him to the throne; then he disbanded his whole army, made a slave—Khusrau Khan—his Vizier, and gave himself up to degrading debaucheries.

<sup>1</sup> 1299, according to Elphinstone.

1319. Khusrau conquered Malabar, returned—

1320—to Delhi, killed King Mubarak, and freed the country from the Khiljies by finishing off all their survivors; he then seized the throne; but—

1321—a large army coming from the Punjab under Ghiyasuddin Tughlak, Governor of that province, appeared before Delhi; Delhi was sacked, Khusrau “done in,” and the ex-Governor became King and founder of the House of Tughlak, which ruled in Delhi for more than 100 years. Ghiyasuddin Tughlak was the son of a slave of (ex-slave) Ghiyasuddin Balban, Vizier and successor of Naziruddin Mahmud.

(6) HOUSE OF TUGHLAK, 1321-1414

1321-1325. Ghiyasuddin Tughlak I; extremely mild reign.

1324. He undertook an expedition to Bengal, leaving his son Juna Khan to govern. On his return—

1325—he was killed by a falling pavilion during court festivities; succeeded by his son Juna Khan under the name of—

1325-1351—Muhammad Tughlak; the ablest prince of his time, he ruined himself by his own much too extensive plans. His first action: he bought off the Mongols and conciliated them so far that they made no incursions throughout his reign. Then he reduced Deccan to submission. After that [came] his schemes of universal empire.

[He] formed so vast an “Army of Persia” (to conquer the latter) that he fell short of money to pay it; then he proposed to subdue China, and sent 100,000 men to find a passage through the Himalayas; they lost their lives, almost to a man, in the tarai<sup>1</sup> jungles. As his treasury was empty, he imposed most ruinous exactions on the people; taxes were so heavy that the

<sup>1</sup> Wooded foothills.

- poor fled to the forests; he drew a cordon of troops round these and then had the fugitives slaughtered in a grand battue in which he took part, riding the men down like game. Result: total failure of crops and a terrible famine. Rebellions broke out on all parts; those in Malwa and the Punjab were easily put down, but—
- 1340—rebellion in Bengal was successful. The Coromandel Coast (eastern coast of India from River Kistna to Cape Comorin) revolted and won freedom. Telingana and Carnata revolted successfully. The Afghans ravaged the Punjab, Gujarat rebelled, and famine was at its height. The King [marched] on Gujarat, ravaged the whole province, and then hurried about the country, trying to suppress each rebellion in turn; while at it—
- 1351—he died of fever in Tatta, Sind. (Elphinstone says in The History of India: “There is in general so little scruple about getting rid of a bad king in the East that it is seldom such extensive mischief is brought about by the misgovernment of one man.”) He was succeeded by his nephew—
- 1351-1388—Firuz Tughlak; after futile attempt to recover Bengal, he recognized the independence of that province and of the Deccan; unimportant reign of slight rebellions and slight wars.
1385. Too old to rule, he appointed a Vizier.
1386. he made his son Naziruddin King in his place; but the ex-King’s nephews—
- 1387—expelled Nazir from Delhi, declaring that Firuz had abdicated in favour of his grandson Ghiyasuddin; Firuz d. 1388, at the age of 90.
- 1388-1389. Ghiyasuddin Tughlak II; at once quarrelled with the cousins who had elevated him to the throne, was deposed by them soon after; the throne went to his brother—
- 1389-1390—Abu Bakr Tughlak; his uncle Nazir marched on Delhi with a large army, and took him prisoner.
- 1390-1394. Naziruddin Tughlak died after four years’ reign; his eldest son Humayun caroused himself to death during his 45 days’ reign, was succeeded by his brother—
- 1394-1414—Mahmud Tughlak. Revolts, factions, wars. Malwa, Gujarat, and Khandesh at once shook off submission. Even Delhi was the scene of continuous fights and disturbances between the groups [when]—

- 1398—[came] Timur's (Tamerlane's) first invasion (after he had overrun and subdued very nearly the whole of Genghis Khan's empire, then overrun Persia, Transoxiana, Tartary, and Siberia). Timur entered [India] via Kabul, while his grandson Pir Muhammad attacked Multan. The two armies joined on the Sutlej and advanced on Delhi, devastating the country on their way. Mahmud Tughlak fled to Gujarat; meanwhile Delhi was sacked and burned, and its inhabitants were massacred. Then the Mongols took Meerut and—
- 1399—returned by way of Kabul to Transoxiana, loaded with spoil. Mahmud then came back to Delhi, where he died in 1414. Tamerlane had left as Governor Khizr Khan, who proclaimed himself sovereign under the name of the Sayyid, or lineal descendant of the Prophet, the same word as seid or sidi, mot arabe qui veut dire le seigneur,<sup>1</sup> same as Cid, honorary title assumed by all who claim to be descended from Mohammed; il est porté aussi par tous les Ismaéliens.<sup>2</sup>

(7) GOVERNMENT OF THE SAYYIDS, 1414-1450

- 1414-1421. Sayyid Khizr Khan; nothing was left of Kingdom of Delhi but the city and a small territory around, all of Ala-uddin Khilji's acquisitions having been lost. Khizr Khan played role of a mere deputy acting for Timur, was indeed a petty little monarch. He effected a levy of tribute on Rohilkhand and Gwalior; succeeded by his son—
- 1421-1436—Sayyid Mubarak. A great deal of disturbance in the Punjab, he was not concerned. Was murdered by his Vizier in 1436; succeeded by his son—
- 1436-1444—Sayyid Muhammad; territory of Delhi invaded by King of Malwa; the Sayyid beat him back, calling the Governor of the Punjab, Bahlol Khan Lodi, to his aid; succeeded by his son—

<sup>1</sup> Arabic word meaning lord.

<sup>2</sup> It is also borne by all Ishmaelites.

1444-1450—Sayyid Ala-uddin; he moved his residency to Budaun, beyond the Ganges; Bahlol Khan Lodi, Governor of the Punjab, took possession of Delhi.

(8) HOUSE OF LODI, 1450-1526

1450-1488. Bahlol Lodi; he united Punjab with Delhi. In 1452, the Raja of Jaunpur laid siege to Delhi, which led to war that lasted for 26 years (this is important; it shows that the native Indian princes had become powerful enough [to oppose] the old Moslem rule) and ended in the total defeat of the Raja and annexation of Jaunpur to Delhi. Bahlol made further conquests; at his death the realm comprised the land from the Jumna to the Himalayas, eastwards to Benares, westwards to Bundelkhand. Succeeded by his son—

1488-1506—Sikandar Lodi; he re-annexed Bihar; an able and peaceful sovereign; succeeded by his son—

1506-1526—Ibrahim Lodi; ferocious; murdered all the chiefs at court; attempted the same proceeding against the Governor of Punjab; the latter called the Moguls under Baber to his aid.

1524. Baber's invasion of India; Baber imprisoned the Governor of the Punjab who had called him, took Lahore where Ala-uddin, brother of Ibrahim of Delhi, joined him, and at head of Mogul army was sent to conquer Delhi. Ibrahim utterly routed him; then Baber came himself; the two armies met at Panipat (near the Jumna, north of Delhi).

1526. First Battle of Panipat. Ibrahim was defeated, he himself and 40,000 Hindus remained on battlefield. Baber occupied Delhi and Agra.

. . . . .

Robert Sewell (Madras Civil Service) says in The Analytical History of India (1870):

Three big races in Asia: (1) Turks (Turkomans), living about Bokhara and westwards to the Caspian Sea; (2) Tartars, inhabiting part of Siberia and Russia, with their main tribes in Astrakhan and Kazan and over-spreading the whole country north of the Turki tribes; (3) Moguls, or Mongols, occupying Mongolia, Tibet, and Manchuria; shepherd tribes all. Western Moguls, or Kalmucks, and eastern Moguls, divided into many tribes, or ulus. These ulus, or clans, frequently united under one leader by a sort of mutual alliance.

1164. Genghis Khan born; chief of insignificant clan paying tribute to the Khitan Tartars; plus tard<sup>1</sup> the Tartars joined his armies after he had thrashed them, and his host outnumbered the Mongols. With this force Genghis Khan conquered Eastern Mongolia and North China, then Transoxiana and Khorassan; he conquered the Turki country, i.e., Bokhara, Khwarezm, Persia, and invaded India. At that time his empire extended from the Caspian Sea to Peking, southwards to the Indian Ocean and the Himalayas, Astrakhan and Kazan being western boundary. On his death his empire was divided into four parts: Kipchak, Iran, Jagatai, and Mongolia with China; the three first governed by khans; the ruler of the last, as being the original dominant country, was Supreme, or Great Khan.
1336. Timur born in Kesh, Jagatai, not far from Samarkand; he succeeded—
- 1360—his uncle Saifuddin as Prince of Kesh and chieftain of the Barulas tribe, under the suzerainty of Tughlak Timur, Khan of Jagatai.
1370. Tamerlane took possession of that khanate, etc. He died in 1405. After his death his empire was divided among his sons; the largest share went to Pir Muhammad, second son of Timur's eldest son. According to same author (Sewell), principal families of the Turks were the Ottomans (they moved westwards in the 14th century, establishing their power in Phrygia, whence they were never expelled), the Seljuks (mainly in Persia, Syria, and Iconium), and the Uzbeks

---

<sup>1</sup> Later.

(arose in 1305); these were Kipchak Turks, and derived the name Uzbek from their Khan, b. 1305 They wielded great power in Baber's time.<sup>1</sup>

1526. Baber, sixth in descent from Timur (Tamerlane); he was son of Omar Sheik Mirza, King of Ferghana (province of present-day Kokand). Sole Mogul monarch who wrote his own biography; it was translated by Leyden and Erskine (1826). B. 1483, d. 1530.
- . . . . .

States of India at the Time of Baber's Arrival

1351. With break-up of the Delhi Kingdom of Muhammad Tughlak, various new states came into being. About 1398 (at the time of Timur's invasion), the whole of India, except a few miles round Delhi, was free from Mohammedan domination; the chief Indian states were:

- (1) Bahmani Kings of the Deccan; founded by a poor man named Gangu Bahmani, who rose to independence at Gulbarga.

1421. The Bahmani King expelled the [Raja of] Telingana Hindu from Warangal (Telingana comprised the provinces of the Northern Circars, Hyderabad—Balaghat, Carnatic. The langue telinga<sup>2</sup> still spoken between Ganjam and Pulicat), and later took Rajahmundry, Masulipatam, and Conjeeveram. Soon after, internal commotions through [the enmity of] the two religious sects of Shiahhs and Sunnis; the [former], under Yusuf Adil, <sup>1</sup> Robert Sewell's book contains a number of inaccuracies. First, he affirms that the Siberian Tartars and the Mongols are two different peoples. Second—see p. 22 for the date of birth of Genghis Khan. Third, on Timur's death, it was his son Shahrud, the ruler of Khorassan, Seistan, and Mazanderan, who attained to the greatest power, and not Pir Muhammad, as Sewell affirms. Fourth, the migration of the Ottoman Turks from Central Asia to Asia Minor is questioned by many historians. In the 14th century, the Ottomans rose to power in the area about Bursa, whence they extended their authority to the surrounding country. Fifth, speaking of the Uzbeks, Sewell mentions Uzbek Khan, who ruled over the Golden Horde from 1313 to 1340. The name Uzbek was borrowed from him by a section of the Yuehchi tribes, who adopted Islam at his instance.

<sup>2</sup> Telinga, or Telugu, language.

went to Bijapur and founded a kingdom, calling their leader King Adil Shah.

(2) Bijapur-Ahmadnagar.

1489-1579,<sup>1</sup> period of reign of the dynasty. It was in this small kingdom that the Marathas arose, and a famous Brahmin, withdrawing from here with his disciples, founded the Kingdom of Ahmadnagar.

(3) Golconda<sup>2</sup>-Berar-Bidar. These three small states arose in much the same manner, and lasted till the late 16th century.

(4) Gujarat (1351-1388). Under Firuz Tughlak, Muzaffar Shah, a Rajput, was appointed its Governor; he made it into an independent state. Later his successors annexed Malwa after hard fighting (1531). This kingdom lasted from 1396 to 1561.<sup>3</sup>

(5) Malwa became independent simultaneously with Gujarat, was ruled by a Ghurian family till 1531, when Bahadur Shah of Gujarat annexed it permanently.

(6) Khandesh; became independent state in 1399, reannexed to Delhi by Akbar in 1599.

(7) Rajput States. Several Rajput states in central India, Hindu generally formed of wild mountain tribes, magnificent soldiers; the more important of them were: Chitor, Marwar (or Jodhpur), Bikaner, Jaisalmer, Jaipur.

<sup>1</sup> Marx here gives the time when the last representative of the dynasty began to rule. His reign ended in 1595.

<sup>2</sup> From the late 16th century on, Golconda virtually depended on Bijapur, having lost much of its political importance. It became a vassal of the Mogul Empire only in 1636, and was finally annexed to it in 1687.

<sup>3</sup> Marx here gives the year when the last representative of the dynasty began to rule. His reign ended in 1572.

THE MOGUL EMPIRE IN INDIA, 1526-1761<sup>1</sup>

(Lasted 235 Years)

(1) REIGN OF BABER

1526-1530. Reign of Baber.

1526. Within a few months, Baber's eldest son Humayun subdued the whole of the territory held by Ibrahim Lodi.

1527. Sangram, King of Mewar, a Rajput prince, who had brought Ajmer and Malwa under his rule and was recognized as feudatory leader of Marwar and Jaipur, led a large army against the Delhi State; [he] took Biana near Agra and defeated a unit of Baber's force. Battle of Sikri ("the Indian Hastings").<sup>2</sup> Big victory of Baber, who established his power in India. (In his later battles, Baber used gunpowder along with arrows; he mentions his mortars and matchlockmen, and his bowmen; was himself a fine shot with bow and arrow.)

1528. Chanderi (Chendari; Sindhia), belonging to a Rajput prince, was taken with great loss, the whole garrison being killed to a man. At the same time, Humayun was beaten by the Afghans in Oudh; Baber marched from Chanderi to his assistance, defeated the enemy, and returned to Delhi. Soon afterwards, [son of] Sangram surrendered the fortress Rantambhor.

---

<sup>1</sup> The so-called Mogul Empire was founded by Baber in 1526 and lasted till 1761. Baber called himself a "Mogul" (distortion of "Mongol") as one who was supposed to be descended (in the sixth generation) from the famous Tamerlane, and from Genghis Khan on his mother's side. In reality neither he, who came from Persia, nor his army, which consisted of Turks, Persians, and Afghans, were Mongols. The official language of the Mogul Empire was Persian. On the death of Aurangzeb in 1707, the empire virtually began to disintegrate, although the Great Mogul, or Emperor, stripped of all authority, retained the throne of Delhi till 1857.

<sup>2</sup> In that battle the Moslem Moguls' troops defeated the Hindu troops and conquered India.

1529. Hearing that Mahmud Lodi had taken Bihar, Baber marched against him, routed him, and annexed his territories; he then beat the King of Bengal (who held North Bihar) at the fords of the Gogra River, and finished the campaign by decimating a tribe of half-wild Afghans, who had seized Lahore.

December 26, 1530. Baber died of fever at Delhi, was buried at Kabul in compliance with his wish, at a spot chosen by him for the purpose, a holiday resort of the Kabul people to this day. (See Burnes.)

(2) FIRST AND SECOND REIGN OF HUMAYUN, WITH THE INTERMEDIATE GOVERNMENT OF THE HOUSE
OF SUR, 1530-1556

1530. Baber left four sons: Humayun, Emperor (his successor); Kamran, then Governor of Kabul, proclaimed himself independent after his father's death; Hindal was Governor of Sambhal; and Mirza Askari, an intrepid soldier, of Mewat. Humayun's first action was to quell rebellion in Jaunpur (Chanpur); [he] then waged war against Gujarat, whose King, Bahadur Shah, on receiving the news of Baber's death, had declared war on the Moguls. In the course of five years, i.e., by—

1535—Humayun had destroyed the army of Gujarat; he then took Champanir, fort to which Bahadur had retired.

1536. That fort was soon captured, and Bahadur feigned reconciliation with him.

1537. Humayun being actively engaged against Sher Khan, who was operating against Bengal, Bahadur Shah retook Gujarat and attacked Makwa.

1537-1540. Humayun's Campaigns Against Sher Khan. Sher Khan, alias Sher Shah, was a descendant of the Ghurian kings of Delhi.

1527. after overthrowing the Lodis, he joined Baber's army as an officer, distinguished himself, Baber entrusted him with a command in Bihar.

1529. Mahmud Lodi took Bihar, and Sher Khan joined him; on Mahmud's death he became master of Bihar.
1532. when Humayun was in Gujarat, Sher Shah advanced into Bengal, therefore—
- 1537—Humayun set out with army against him; there, despite the manoeuvres of both—
- 1539—in camp on Ganges, Humayun was surprised by Sher Shah, thoroughly worsted, had to flee, while Sher Khan, alias Sher Shah, seized Bengal.
1540. Humayun took initiative by marching on Kanauj; was defeated again, almost drowned in Ganges during his flight; Sher Khan pursued him to Lahore; Humayun escaped to Sind; after one or two fruitless sieges, he fled to Marwar (Jodhpur), but Raja refused to admit him, and he tramped in the deserts of Jaisalmer, where his and his few followers' encampments were attacked continuously; there—
- October 14, 1542—Hamida, a dancing girl of great beauty in his harem, gave birth to the famous Akbar; after roaming the desert for 18 months, they arrived at Omercote (Umarkot), where they were hospitably received. After another futile attempt to reduce Sind, Humayun was allowed to go to Kandahar; found that province in the hands of his brother Mirza Askari, who refused to help him. Humayun fled to Herat (Persia). In Persia, he was treated as a captive, Shah Tahmasp forced him to adopt the Safavi religion. (The Safavid, or Sufi, kings descended from a family of sainted dervishes, of the Shiah sect, who attained sovereignty, and established a scheme of religion called after their name; this became the religion of Persia.) Nevertheless—
- 1545—Tahmasp assisted Humayun with 14,000 horse. Humayun entered Afghanistan, wrested Kandahar from his brother Mirza Askari, whom he spared despite his officers. He then took Kabul, where Hindal, Baber's third son, joined him.
1548. Kamran, his third brother, who had rebelled [against him, now] joined him. (However, he was again subdued in 1551 after revolt; in 1553, after fresh troubles, he was made prisoner, and had his eyes put out.)

Humayun thus at the head of his family again; resided at Kabul.

Interregnum of the House of Sur at Delhi, 1540-1555

1540-1545. Sher Shah at Delhi.

1540. [He] took possession of the Kingdom of Delhi and renamed himself Sher Shah instead of Sher Khan; he seized all of Humayun's dominions.

1541. He conquered Matwa; in 1543, [the fortress of] Raisin, and in 1544, Marwar.

1545. He laid siege to Chitor; killed by chance shot from one of the town batteries. Succeeded by his younger son—

1545-1553—Jalal Khan; he became Shah of Delhi under name of Selim Shah Sur. Sher Shah's eldest son Adil sought to assert his rights, was defeated, and fled. Fine public works under Selim Shah Sur.

1553. Selim Shah Sur died, the throne was seized by his elder brother Adil.

1553-1554. Muhammad Shah Sur Adil; murdered his young nephew, Selim Shah's son; indulged in amusement; soon outbreak of rebellion, headed by one of his own family, Ibrahim Sur, who drove him off, and took Delhi and Agra, Punjab, Bengal, and Matwa at once threw off all subjection. Hearing of these disturbances—

1554—Humayun gathered army, and came from Kabul to claim his throne.

January 1555. Humayun set out from Kabul, invaded Punjab, took Lahore, Delhi, Agra without difficulty.

July 1555. Humayun restored to all his original grandeur.

January 1556. Humayun killed by accidental fall on some smooth marble; at that time his son Akbar (13 years old) was in the Punjab with his father's Minister, Bahram Khan; he was at once brought to Delhi by Bahram Khan.

(3) REIGN OF AKBAR, 1556-1605

1556. At first Bahram Khan was naturally the actual Governor; but while he was engaged in settling the home government at Delhi, Mirza Suleiman, King of Badakh- shan, took Kabul, and simultaneously Hemu, Minister of Shah Adil, raised a rebellion.

Second Battle of Panipat. Hemu took Agra, Bahram went out to encounter him, both armies met at Panipat; defeat of Hemu, whom Bahram killed with his own hand; thus the family of Sher Khan done with.

Bahram returned to Delhi with a swelled head, had many persons, who presumed to oppose him, "done in.", in particular friends of Akbar's too; so that—

1560—Akbar took reins of government into his own hands; Bahram went to Nagar in Rajputana, and as soon as Akbar had formally divested him of his office, he revolted. Akbar sent army against him, he was beaten, pardoned, but was killed by [son of] one of the nobles treacherously murdered by him. Akbar 18 years old; his territory restricted to country round Delhi and Agra, plus Punjab.

Almost immediately after acceding to the throne, he conquered Ajmer, Gwalior, and Lucknow; he then—

1561—reconquered Malwa from its rebellious Governor, Abdullah Khan, whom he sent into exile. That khan was an Uzbek, hence—

1564—his exile led to a rising of the Uzbek tribe, put down by Akbar in person in 1567.

1566. Hakim, Akbar's brother, seized Kabul, of which he remained master for a long time.

1568-1570. The Rajput States.

1568. Akbar besieged Chitor; it fell after courageous resistance and death of its leader, killed by arrow. The surviving [nobles fled] to Udaipur, where their chieftain's family founded a new state and where they [continue] to this day. Thereafter Akbar married two Rajput queens in order to have peaceful connection with Jaipur and Marwar.

1570.<sup>1</sup> Akbar annexed Rantambhor and Kalinjar, two more Rajput [fortresses].

<sup>1</sup> 1569, according to Burgess, The Chronology of Modern India, Edinburgh, 1913.

- 1572-1573. Gujarat. Disturbances there (three groups, the strongest being the Mirzas,<sup>1</sup> descendants of Tamerlane, hence relatives of Akbar's; in 1566, they had revolted in Sambhal, had been defeated, and had fled to Gujarat). Governor Itimad Khan insisted on Akbar's coming.
1573. Akbar [went] to Gujarat, placed it under direct imperial rule, beat the Mirzas, and returned to Agra. Fresh rebellion by the Mirzas; Akbar crushed them finally.
1575. Bengal. There Prince Daud threw off dependence (no longer paid tribute, etc.). Akbar [went] to Bengal, drove Daud to Orissa; as soon as he retired, Daud advanced again, regained his territory; Akbar defeated him in pitched battle, Daud killed fighting.
- 1575-1592. Bihar; ruled by family of Sher Khan since 1530, re-annexed [by Akbar] in 1575.—Shortly afterwards, rebellion among the imperial troops in Bihar and Bengal, not properly quelled during three years. Hence the Afghans expelled from Bihar seized the Province of Orissa and held it for some time.
1592. The Afghans in Orissa finally crushed by one of Akbar's generals.
1582. Prince Hakim invaded the Punjab from Kabul. Akbar drove him off, seized upon Kabul, pardoned his brother Hakim, made him Governor-General of the Kabul Province, subject to him as Emperor of Delhi.
- 1582-1585. Quiet; Akbar settled the empire. Was indifferent in religious matters, therefore tolerant; his chief religious and literary advisers were Faizi and Abul Fazl. Faizi translated old Sanskrit poems, including Ramayana and Mahabharata (later, after Akbar had brought a Roman-Catholic Portuguese priest from Goa, Faizi also translated the Evangelists. Indulgence towards the Hindus; Akbar only insisted on abolition of suttee (burning of widows on the husband's funeral pyre), etc. He abolished jeziah, i.e., capitation tax, which every Hindu had been compelled to pay to the Mussulman Government.

---

<sup>1</sup> Descendants and relations of Mirza (Prince) Muhammad Sultan, who came to India with Baber. They were Ulugh Mirza, Shah Mirza, and Ibrahim Husain Mirza, and they sought to seize the throne.

Akbar's Revenue System (author, Raja Todar Mall, the Finance Minister); to collect revenue from the cultivators—

- (1) First a uniform standard of measurement was established and then a regular survey system set on foot.
- (2) To ascertain the produce of each separate bigha, and hence the amount it ought to pay to the Government, the land was divided into three different classes, according to their varying degrees of fertility. Then, for each bigha, the average yield of its class was taken and the King's share made equal to one-third of this amount in kind.
- (3) To settle the equivalent of this amount in money, regular statements of prices were taken over all the country for 19 years, and the average was the amount demanded in coin.

The abuse of authority by petty officers was put down; the amount of revenue decreased, but the expenses of collection lessened, so that net revenue remained same. Akbar abolished the custom of farming the revenues, which had been source of so much cruelty and extortion.

Division of Empire into 15 provinces; the chief officer in each called Viceroy.

Justice: Kazi represents the law, states the cases after full trial; Mir-i-Adl (Lord Chief Justice) represents the will of the Sovereign, hearing the conclusion and passing sentence. Akbar reformed the Code of Punishments, founding them partly on Mohammedan custom, partly on the laws of Manu.

Army: Pay system in army in great confusion; Akbar stopped abuses by regular payment of the troops from the Treasury and keeping of lists of all the soldiers enrolled in each regiment.

He made Delhi into the greatest and finest city then existing in the world.

1585-1587. Kashmir; in 1585, disturbances in Kabul, occasioned by fear of Uzbek invasion; Akbar put them down by a great display of force.

1586. Failed in attack on Kashmir; in 1587, he succeeded, and annexed Kashmir.

1587. Peshawar and Neighbouring North-West Districts. This country was held by the Yusufzais, a powerful Afghan tribe, belonging to the fanatic Raushani sect; they gave so much trouble to Kabul that Akbar sent two divisions against them, one under Raja Bir Bal and the other under Zain Khan. Both were all but annihilated; remnants of the imperial army fled to Attock. Akbar had these Afghans driven back into their mountains by sending another force; this was the only success he ever attained over them.
1591. Sind: invaded and annexed by Akbar on pretext of some internal troubles.
1594. Kandahar reconquered [by Akbar] from the Persians, who had retaken it on the death of Humayun. Thus, in 1594, entire north of India under Mogul rule.

Wars in the Deccan, 1596-1600

1596. Attack by two armies under Prince Murad (second son of Akbar) and Mirza Khan on Ahmadnagar, which was in the hands of the illustrious Sultana Chand; its siege and assault failed; Akbar was only allowed to annex Berar.
1597. New hostilities; Akbar reinforced through submission of the Raja of Khandesh, who joined his forces. Action by Murad on the Godavari River indecisive; Akbar joined his army on the Narbada.
1600. He sent his youngest son Daniyal ahead for the investment of Ahmadnagar, joined him then, garrison murdered the gallant Sultana and abandoned the city to the Moguls.
Selim's revolt brought Akbar back to Hindustan; during his father's absence, Selim had seized Oudh and Bihar; Akbar pardoned him, gave him Bengal and Orissa; cruel administration by Selim, Akbar about to go against him, Selim asked his forgiveness at Agra.
1605. The sudden death of his sons Murad and Daniyal hastened Akbar's death at age of 63. His only surviving son Selim assumed as Emperor the title of Jahangir ("conqueror of the world").

(4) REIGN OF JAHANGIR, 1605-1627

1605. At Jahangir's accession to the throne, Hindustan quiet, but disturbances in Deccan and a war with Udaipur proceeding. Jahangir kept all his father's chief officers in their posts; restored the Mohammedan faith as the established church; declared he would maintain the law as before. He defeated and imprisoned his son, Prince Khusrau, who during Jahangir's presence at Agra raised standard of revolt at Delhi and Lahore; impaled 700 of his followers on spikes and paraded Khusrau between the ghastly rows.
1610. Jahangir despatched two armies, one to the Deccan, the other to Udaipur. As regards the one sent to the Deccan, Malik Amber, Minister of the young King of Ahmadnagar, whose capital had been transferred to Aurangabad, had in 1610 recaptured Ahmadnagar (the Mogul garrison left there by Akbar defeated); not until—
- 1617—did the armies sent against Malik Amber succeed in defeating him, and that not in open fight, but solely through his allies' desertion.
1611. Jahangir married Nur Jahan (daughter of an emigrant from Persia), who dominated him completely, and plotted against his sons from earlier marriage.
1612. Prince Khurram (later Shah Jahan) conquered Udaipur and reduced Marwar.
1615. Sir Thomas Roe, first Englishman at court of Delhi, went there from James I on embassy concerning the embryo East India Company. Jahangir appointed Khurram (his third son) successor (the eldest, Khusrau, remained in prison, where he died in 1621; and his second son, Parviz, he considered incompetent), made him Viceroy of Gujarat and sent him against Malik Amber, who had risen in arms again.
1621. Nur Jahan persuaded Jahangir to send Khurram (Shah Jahan) to Kandahar in order to remove him from Delhi and raise her favourite son Parviz to throne. Hence rebellious but futile attempts by Shah Jahan, who—

1624—reappeared in Delhi as a repentant sinner. Soon afterwards, Mahabbat Khan, sent against Shah Jahan, fell into disfavour with Nur Jahan, was recalled from the Deccan, and received cold treatment at Delhi. Jahangir, about to leave for Kabul, made Mahabbat accompany him, and treated him so harshly that Mahabbat took the opportunity, when all the imperial troops had crossed the Hydaspes (Jhelum, second of the five rivers of the Punjab from west to east), of seizing Jahangir and abducting him as captive to his own camp. Nur Jahan crossed the river, attacked Mahabbat at once, was defeated with heavy loss, whereupon she submitted, and joined Jahangir in his captivity. Mahabbat took the royal captives with him, treating them with distinction, while Nur Jahan recruited adherents in his army.

1627. On Nur Jahan's advice, Jahangir cantered away from the staff surrounding Mahabbat at grand review, and drawing near a unit entirely loyal to him, was rescued by them. Mahabbat was forgiven and sent against Shah Jahan, with whom, however, he fraternized at once.

October 28, 1627. Jahangir died on his way to Lahore. Asaf Khan, Governor of Delhi, sent at once for Shah Jahan, who arrived shortly after with Mahabbat Khan, and was solemnly crowned at Agra; Nur Jahan compelled to retire into private life.

(5) REIGN OF SHAH JAHAN, 1627-1658

1627.<sup>1</sup> Khan Jahan Lodi's Revolt. One of Prince Parviz's generals, he joined the armies of the defunct Malik Amber's son; he then returned to Delhi on promise of pardon, but feeling distrustful, fled to Chambal River, engaged the royal troops there, was beaten, crossed the river, and fled through Bundelkhand to Ahmadnagar.

1629. Shah Jahan went in person to the Deccan against him; at Burhanpur he met him, and drove him back to Ahmadnagar; at Bijapur, Khan Jahan believed he would be safe under protection of his friend Muhammad Adil Shah, but the latter refused to admit him; he fled to Malwa, tried to force his way to Bundelkhand, but was defeated and slain. The Emperor then marched on Ahmadnagar.

<sup>1</sup> 1628, according to Burgess.

- 1630<sup>1</sup>. While the latter was invested by the imperial army, Fateh Khan murdered the King of Ahmadnagar, whose Minister he was, and surrendered the place to Shah Jahan. Then the latter made fruitless attempt to take the city of Bijapur; he returned to Delhi, leaving Mahabbat Khan to besiege Bijapur and perform the duties of commander in the Deccan.
1634. After futile siege of Bijapur, Mahabbat Khan was recalled.
1635. Bijapur besieged by Shah Jahan himself—without success.
1636. Shah Jahan, therefore, made peace with Muhammad Adil Shah, King of Bijapur, and gave him the territories of Ahmadnagar, which state thereby became extinct as independent sovereignty. Adil had foiled the entire Mogul army for six years.
- 1637.<sup>1</sup> Shah Jahan [went] to Kabul; thence he sent army under Ali Mardan Khan (Governor of the new Mogul province of Kandahar, wrested from the Persians by Akbar in 1594) and his son Murad against Balkh.
1646. As both successful, Balkh was annexed and entrusted to Aurangzeb, third son of the Emperor.
1647. Aurangzeb besieged at Balkh by the Uzbeks; fled with great loss to India.
1648. Persians under Shah Abbas retook Kandahar; Aurangzeb sent to recover it; enemy cut his supplies off, he was forced to retire to Kabul.
1652. New attempt to recover Kandahar failed; ditto 1653, when Dara Shikoh, the Emperor's eldest son, launched final attack on it. Moguls retired, Kandahar Persian again.

<sup>1</sup> 1631, according to Burgess.

<sup>2</sup> 1644, according to Elphinstone.

1655. The Mogul armies back in the Deccan at application of Mir Jumla, Vizier of Golconda, threatened with death by his master, Raja Abdullah Khan. Thereupon Aurangzeb took possession of Hyderabad and—
- 1657—laid siege to Golconda; Abdullah Khan promised submission and yearly tribute of £1,000,000. Aurangzeb, on receiving word of Shah Jahan's illness, hurried back to Delhi. Shah Jahan had four sons: Dara Shikoh, Shuja, Aurangzeb, and Murad. Dara now Viceroy; Shuja, Governor of Bengal; Murad (the youngest), Governor of Gujarat. Aurangzeb, the third, calculating and cold, aspired to power and as he saw that religion was the great motive power of the empire, he sought popularity as champion of Islam. Being taken ill, Shah Jahan entrusted government to Dara; Shuja revolted, marched on Bihar, ditto Murad, seized Surat. Aurangzeb let Dara Shikoh and Shuja weaken each other through struggle, and led his army to Murad on pretext that, while he wished to retire as monk from the world, he wanted first to help his youngest brother to the throne. Shuja was defeated by Dara Shikoh, who marched then on Murad and Aurangzeb, and was defeated.
1658. Contrary to Shah Jahan's explicit wish, Dara Shikoh took the field again; armies met at Samagarh, near Agra; beaten thanks to Murad's courage, [Dara Shikoh] fled to his father at Agra; Aurangzeb went there, imprisoned both in a secure spot within the palace, treacherously seized Murad and jailed him at Salimgarh, a fort on the river opposite Delhi, removed him then chained to the fortress of Gwalior; Aurangzeb proclaimed himself Emperor in place of Shah Jahan, whom he had dethroned; he assumed the title of A lamgir.

(6) REIGN OF AURANGZEB, AND RISE OF THE MARATHAS,
1658-1707

1658. Dara Shikoh escaped from prison and fled to Lahore (where his son Suleiman tried to join him, but was intercepted and kept prisoner at Srinagar, capital of Kashmir). Dara then [proceeded] to Sind, while Shuja marched on Delhi and was defeated by Aurangzeb at Khajwah despite desertion, during the battle, of a body of imperial troops under Raja Jaswant Singh, who fled to Jodhpur after Shuja's defeat.

Presently Dara Shikoh took the field again [was defeated], fled to Ahmadabad, Cutch, Kandahar, and finally Jun, in Sind, whence he was treacherously delivered to Delhi and executed; riot among the inhabitants of Delhi, put down by force.

1660. Prince Muhammad Sultan (Aurangzeb's son) and Mir Jumla, the late Minister of Golconda, were successful against Shuja in Bengal. Shuja escaped to Ara-kan,<sup>1</sup> and no more was heard of him. Muhammad Sultan had revolted from Mir Jumla [and joined Shuja], then returned to duty. Aurangzeb kept him a prisoner for years until he died in gaol. The Raja of Srinagar delivered Suleiman, Dara Shikoh's son, as prisoner to Agra, where he died soon after, poisoned by Aurangzeb. Simultaneously Murad was murdered. From now on Aurangzeb was complete master of the situation (Shah Jahan still "under lock and key"). Mir Jumla, made Vizier, died at Dacca while on expedition against Assam [1663]; his place was taken by Muhammad Amin, his eldest son.

1660-1670. Rise of the Marathas.

One of Malik Amber's officers, namely, Maloji Bhonslay, had a son named Shahji; the latter married a daughter of Jadu Rao, an officer in high command; issue of this marriage, a son, named Shivaji; being always in contact with the rude soldiers of his father's jagir (tract of land given by the sovereign to an individual as a reward for special merit), he acquired habits of a robber, which he practised early in his retainers' company. He seized his father's own territory, captured many forts; he then began open rebellion by seizing a convoy of imperial treasure; his lieutenant took the Governor of Konkan prisoner, and occupied the whole province with its capital, Kalyan. After this success, Shivaji made overtures to Shah Jahan, which were not received unfavourably. He then seized South Konkan and—

<sup>1</sup> Old name of Burma.

- 1655—went on extending his authority. Aurangzeb was sent to humble the pride of the Maratha. Shivaji plotted and cajoled, was forgiven; immediately after departure of the imperial force, he repeated his attacks on Bijapur. Afzul Khan, [commanding the troops] of Bijapur, agreed to have, unattended, private interview with Shivaji, who murdered him with his own hand, and then defeated the Khan's panic-stricken army.
- After army had been sent against the now numerous bands of Shivaji's followers, the new military commander of Bijapur—
- 1660—went with force against the Maratha country, defeated Shivaji, and—
- 1662—made advantageous peace with him, leaving the rebel secured in a jagir in the Konkans.
1662. Shivaji began again to ravage Mogul territory. Aurangzeb sent against him Shaista Khan, who marched from Aurangabad to Poona and took it; he stayed there in winter quarters throughout the winter; one night Shivaji stole his way to him in order to murder him; Khan escaped, however. After the rains Shaista Khan went to Aurangabad, and Shivaji at once sacked Surat.
1664. Shahji, father of Shivaji, died, and in right of his father the latter became possessed of [Shahji's jagir] and [the territory near] Madras, as well as the Konkans, which he himself had conquered. He now assumed the title of Raja of the Marathas, and plundered the country far and wide.
1665. Aurangzeb, furious, sent army against him in two divisions. Shivaji submitted; still, under the treaty, this crafty man obtained another jagir, consisting of 12 out of the 32 forts he had captured, with their territory. Besides, he obtained the chauth, a sort of black-mail to be levied on all the Mogul land in the Decan, which afterwards [furnished] the Marathas [with] pretext for quarrelling with all the nations surrounding them and for encroaching on their territory.

1666. Shivaji in Delhi as guest; he was received so coldly (despite his "calculating," Aurangzeb did not assassinate him and in general behaved from the very beginning as an "ass" towards the Marathas) that he soon returned indignant to the Deccan. In the same year, Shah Jahan died in prison.
1667. Through crafty intriguing, Shivaji was recognized under treaty as Raja; he then overawed Bijapur and Golconda, and levied tribute on them.
- 1668 and 1669. Shivaji settled his kingdom; made advantageous treaties with the Rajputs and other neighbours.
1669. Thus the Marathas became a nation, governed by an independent sovereign.
1670. Aurangzeb violated the treaty; Shivaji first commenced operations by seizing Poona, and sacked Surat and Khandesh, while Muazzam, Aurangzeb's son, inactive at Aurangabad. Mahabbat Khan was despatched, and terribly beaten by Shivaji. Aurangzeb recalled his armies and suspended hostilities. From then on, decline of Aurangzeb's influence; all parties irritated against him; his Mogul soldiers furious over his futile Maratha campaigns, and the Hindus, because he had re-introduced the jeziah and persecuted them on all sides.
1678. Finally he estranged the best warriors of his army, the Rajputs, by his conduct towards widow and children of their great chief, Raja Jaswant Singh, who died in 1678. Durga Das, the Raja's son, plotted with Prince Akbar, Aurangzeb's son, marched on Delhi with 70,000 Rajputs. The combination was broken by intrigue and defection, and the army disbanded before any action; Akbar and Durga Das fled to the Marathas under Sambhaji, son of the famous Shivaji.
1681. Peace in Mewar and Marwar, after the struggle between the two parties had gone on in desultory way. Meanwhile—
- 1673—Shivaji had seized the Konkans; in 1674, he ravaged the Mogul provinces of Khandesh and Berar; idem Shivaji—
- 1677—captured one after another Kurnul, Cuddapah (he passed close to Madras, where the office-boys of Eng- lish factories were in a blue funk—May 1677, Madras records), Jinji, and Vellore.

1678. Shivaji took Mysore and Tanjore, in 1680 he made a dash on Bijapur, cutting off the supplies of the Mogul army, and—
- 1680—Shivaji died on this expedition; his son Sambhaji took command of the Maratha forces. Sambhaji was a cruel and debauched prince; his power declined at once; had the Moguls had a good general, they would have broken Maratha power, but Aurangzeb continued like an “ox.”
1683. Sambhaji defeated Prince Muazzam, who had been sent into the Konkans; the Marathas ravaged the country in the rear of the Mogul army, burnt the town of Burhanpur; thereupon Muazzam plundered Hyderabad and made treaty with King of Golconda, while the Marathas, marching northwards, sacked Bharoch.
Afterwards Aurangzeb, at head of another army, destroyed city and raj<sup>1</sup> of Bijapur, wantonly broke peace with Golconda, and captured that city. From then on, Aurangzeb was afraid of his own sons and suspected everyone; his fear—
- 1687—became half madness; without any provocation he shut up his son Muazzam in prison, where the latter [spent] seven years.
Fall of the Mogul Empire dates from that time; Deccan in confusion, the native states were broken up, country covered with bands of marauders; the Marathas were a great power; the tribes of the North—Rajputs and Sikhs—permanently alienated.
1689. A Mogul officer, Tokarrab Khan (Governor of Kolhapur, near the Ghats), hearing that Sambhaji was near by on hunting expedition, managed to seize him, sent him prisoner to Aurangzeb, who had him beheaded at once. Saho (or Sahu), Sambhaji's infant son, followed him, with the bold and prudent Rajah Ram as Regent.
1692. Rajah Ram, the Regent, reorganized the Maratha predatory bands, put the chieftains Santaji and Da-

<sup>1</sup> Kingdom.

- naji* in command, and sent them against the Mogul armies in a number of small engagements; that war lasted for about five years—1694-1699—of which three were occupied with siege of Jinji, finally occupied by the Marathas.
1694. Aurangzeb sent his general, Zulfikar Khan, to invest Jinji; the Khan asked for more troops, which were refused him; instead, Prince Kambakhsh was sent to take superior command; the Khan, hurt, spun out the siege; he held constant communications with the Marathas, and so, for three years, useless attempts by Kambakhsh to take the place.
1697. Santaji raised the siege; finally—
- 1698—as Zulfikar Khan realized that he would otherwise be disgraced by Aurangzeb, he let the Maratha leader escape and then stormed the fort without effort. Thereupon dissensions among the Marathas themselves; Danaji murdered Santaji with his own hand. Hostilities resumed; Rajah Ram himself headed a big army, and Aurangzeb on his part led the Moguls.
1700. Aurangzeb took Satara and till—
- 1704—captured a great many Maratha fortresses. Rajah Ram died in the same year [1700]. Aurangzeb now [1704] 86 years old. In the last four years of his life, whole government disorganized; Marathas began to recover their forts and gather strength; a terrible famine exhausted the provisions for the troops and drained the treasury; soldiers mutinous over want of pay; hard pressed by the Marathas, Aurangzeb retreated in great confusion to Ahmadnagar, fell ill, and—
- February 21, 1707—Aurangzeb died at the age of 89 (“refused to let any of his sons approach his bedside”).

[Penetration of European Merchants into India]

1497. In December, the Portuguese Vasco da Gama rounded the Cape of Good Hope and—
- May 1498—cast anchor at Calicut. Thereafter Portuguese colonies of merchants were established at Goa, Bombay, and Point de Galle in Ceylon.

1595. (A century later) the Dutch obtained settlement near the present city of Calcutta.
1600. London East India Company—City Merchants Co.—[founded].
- December 30, 1600, charter from Elizabeth for trade with the East in silks, cottons, and precious stones. The company to be managed by “a governor and 24 committees”.
1601. Their first ships sailed [to India].—The Great Mogul, Jahangir—
- 1613<sup>1</sup>—granted those merchants a trading port at Surat by firman, and—
- 1615—allowed Sir Thomas Roe to come on embassy to Delhi.
1624. The Company, without any parliamentary interference whatever, solicited and obtained from James I the authority to punish, by martial as well as by municipal law, their servants [in India], hence, in fact, “unlimited power over the lives and fortunes of the citizens” (James Mill<sup>2</sup>). This was the first judicial authority given by the Crown to the Company; it extended only over European British subjects.
1634. First factory established in Bengal by firman of Shah Jahan.
1639. The English allowed to trade at Madras.
1654. The Company's monopoly, after 50 years' enjoyment of exclusive trade, imperilled by the formation of a new society, incorporated as “The Merchants Adventurers.”
1661. To have no competition on Indian market, the old Company allowed the “Adventurers” to be incorporated with them.
1662. Charles II wedded to the daughter of the King of Portugal; she brought as part of her dower the trading port of Bombay, which thereby became Crown possession, but—
- 1668—“the Merry one” presented the East India Co. with the port of Bombay. In this year, the first order for tea (then called tchay after the Chinese) was sent from

<sup>1</sup> 1612, according to Burgess.

<sup>2</sup> Mill, The History of British India, Vol. I, London, 1858.

England to Madras. At the same time, Charles II gave them a charter, climax of monopoly doctrines, empowering the traders belonging to the East India Co. to imprison and send to England any unlicensed person whom they found there trading on his own account, etc.

1682. The Court of Directors at home constituted Bengal into a separate presidency (presidency meant then the few factories and trading marts scattered throughout a province), having a governor and council residing at Calcutta.

1688.<sup>1</sup> Charnock, the founder of Calcutta, was expelled from Bengal by the Moguls and, scared to death, fled up the river with the ousted merchants.

1690. The "dogs" returned from exile with Aurangzeb's permission; Charnock now established permanent settlement in Calcutta, erecting forts and planting garrisons.

1698. Aurangzeb allowed the "dogs," i. e., the "Company," to purchase the three villages of Calcutta, Chutternutty, and Govindpur, which were fortified afterwards. Sir Charles Eyre christened the new fortifications Fort William in honour of the "Dutch liberator"; even now all public documents drawn up are marked "Fort William, Bengal."

In the same year, a new company was founded in England under Charter of 9 and 10 William and Mary; it gave power to any number of persons to combine and open commerce with East India on a loan of £2,000,000, at 8%; the subscribers allowed to trade, but their exports not to exceed individually their separate shares of the loan. Title of this company: The English East India Company.

1700. The new company all but flopped through costly and utterly useless embassy (to Aurangzeb) with Sir William Norris at the head.

1702. The "old London Co." incorporated with the "new one"; from then on there existed only one, under title of The United Company of Merchants Trading to East India.

<sup>1</sup> 1687, according to Burgess.

In the same year,<sup>1</sup> Aurangzeb appointed one Mir Jafar dewan under title of Murshid Kuli Khan. (The dewan of a province was an officer of the Mogul Governor, who had to superintend the collection of revenue and try all civil cases arising within the boundaries of his province.) [Afterwards Jafar Khan] became Subahdar of Bengal, Bihar, and Orissa. (The subahdar was viceroys of a district; the two officers were often combined in one person.)

This gentleman hated les agréables Anglais,<sup>2</sup> interfered with their trade, and harassed them continuously. (In 1715, they lodged a complaint against him with Farrukhsheer, who gave the English merchants a present of 38 towns! and an immunity from tax, under a dustuck, or official pass, for each bale of goods, saving it from examination by the officials.)

Murshid Kuli Khan famous revenue officer; through unscrupulous systems of extortion and oppression, he created a large surplus out of the revenues of Bengal, which was punctually remitted to Delhi. He divided the province into chaklas, in every one of which the chief collector was an officer, appointed by himself, who farmed the revenue. Afterwards these officers managed to constitute their posts hereditary; and claimed the title of "Zemindari Rajas."

Aurangzeb was succeeded by Prince Muazzam as heir apparent.

(7) SUCCESSORS OF AURANGZEB TO THE GREAT BATTLE OF PANIPAT; EXTINCTION OF MOGUL SOVEREIGNTY,
1707-1761

- (1) 1707-1712. Bahadur Shah (this title was assumed by Muazzam).—Prince Azim, [Aurangzeb's] second surviving son, as well as Prince Kambakhsh, the third, rose in rebellion; they were both defeated and killed—each in the battle he fought with Muazzam. Bahadur rallied his energies against the Marathas, fomented internal dissensions among their chiefs, and finally forced an unfavourable treaty upon them.

<sup>1</sup> 1704, according to Ramsbotham, Studies in the Land Revenue History of Bengal, Calcutta, 1926.

<sup>2</sup> The agreeable British.

1709. He made favourable treaties with the Rajput states of Udaipur, Marwar, and Jaipur.
1711. He undertook expedition against the Sikhs, drove them from the Punjab into the hills.—The Sikhs were religious body of deistical Hindus, arose in the time of Akbar; the “founder’s” name was Nanak; formed into sect, directed by their gurus (spiritual chiefs), and remained quiet until the Mussulmans began to persecute them and in 1606 killed their leader. Then they became fanatical haters of everything Mohammedan; they formed military power under famous Guru Govind, and overran the Punjab.
1712. Bahadur died at 71 years of age, and after much fighting and many murders was succeeded by his half-witted son—
- (2) 1712-1713—Jehandar Shah; he made Zulfikar Khan his Minister; raised slaves to the posts formerly held by nobles. His nephew Farrukhsheer—
- 1713—revolted in Bengal, defeated imperial army near Agra, and put Jehandar Shah and Zulfikar Khan to death.
- (3) 1713-1719. Farrukhsheer. His two chief accomplices among the nobles, Sayyid Abdullah and Sayyid Husain, forced him to grant them high posts at the court; he was secretly afraid of them. Husain went to Deccan, where the Governor, Daud, secretly instigated by the Emperor, opposed him, but was killed at the time of victory. Husain then [went to war] against the Marathas, failed to achieve anything, and finally made peace with the young Raja Sahu, which peace Farrukhsheer refused to recognize, considering it disgraceful.

1715. (See p. 56.<sup>1</sup>) The English businessmen of Calcutta sent deputation to Delhi against the Viceroy, Murshid

<sup>1</sup> P. 49 of this edition.

Kuli Khan; one of the delegates was surgeon Hamilton, who cured the Great Mogul of a disease, hence, etc., see p. 56.

1719. Husain, called from the Deccan by the "threatened" Sayyid Abdullah, assassinated Farrukhsher in the seraglio with his own hand. During the first two months after his death, the rebel nobles raised and deposed two minor princes, and finally fixed upon a prince of the royal blood, namely, Mohammed Shah.
- (4) 1719-1748. Mohammed Shah. Several revolts broke out at once.
1720. Asaf Jah, Governor of Malwa, proclaimed himself independent.

(His real name: Chin Kilich Khan, son of a Turki noble, Ghazi-uddin, a favourite officer of Aurangzeb's; he became Governor, first of the Deccan, then of Malwa; also called Nizam-ul-Mulk, and his descendants became Nizams of the Deccan.) He defeated, at Burhanpur and Balapur, the imperial troops, commanded by the Sayyids; the Great Mogul, fearful of these, made Asaf Jah his Vizier soon after, but later felt him to be a nuisance, and—

- 1723<sup>1</sup>—[Asaf Jah] retired to the Deccan.—Sayyid Husain murdered by a Kalmuck (under orders from the Emperor, it appears); (Sayyid) Abdullah tried to set up a new emperor, was defeated and imprisoned.—At that time the Rajputs wrested Gujarat from the empire.
1725. Mohammed Shah instigated Mubariz, Governor of Hyderabad, to go against Asaf Jah; the latter beat and killed him, and sent his head to Delhi.

1720. Death of Balaji Viswanath, who as Raja Sahu's Minister had consolidated the latter's empire. He was the first "Peshwa," title borne by the Minister of the Maratha Raja. (Later the peshwas seized all real power, while the royal family lived quietly at Satara, losing importance and becoming in time merely "rajās of Satara.") He was succeeded by his energetic son Baji

<sup>1</sup> 1724, according to Elphinstone.

Rao (the greatest of the peshwas and the ablest Maratha save Shivaji); he advised Sahu to strike at the Mogul Empire itself. Sahu left him all power. Baji Rao ravaged Malwa.

- 1722.<sup>1</sup> Baji Rao attacked Asaf Jah (then Governor of the Mogul) at Hyderabad; defeated him signally.—In addition, he ravaged Gujarat.
The leaders of the Maratha armies at that period were the founders of the three great Deccan families: Udaji Puar, Malhar Holkar, and Ranaji Sindhia.
- 1733.<sup>2</sup> Secret pact between Baji Rao and Asaf Jah on mutual support.
1734. Malwa and Bundelkhand captured by the Marathas. The Emperor ceded them the conquered districts and gave them a right to levy chauth on Asaf Jah's dominions; this broke up the alliance [between Asaf Jah and Baji Rao], and Asaf returned to his allegiance.
1737. Baji Rao ravaged the country beyond Jumna and appeared suddenly before Delhi, but retired without attacking. Asaf Jah marched against him, was defeated near [Fort] Bhopal and compelled to cede whole country between the Narbada and the Chambal to the Marathas. Thereby the Marathas established themselves in the North.
- 1739-1740. India invaded by Nadir Shah. (He was originally a freebooter; had with a few followers joined the exiled Shah of Persia, Tahmasp, when the latter was expelled by the Khiljies. Nadir helped Tahmasp to regain the crown, then pushed him aside and made himself Shah. He reduced Kandahar and Kabul, and then invaded India.)
1739. Nadir Shah took Lahore, and defeated Mohammed Shah at Karnal. The Emperor submitted, and accompanied Nadir to Delhi. Hindus murdered many Persians in Delhi, whereupon wholesale massacre of Hindus; Nadir's rapacity and violence.
1740. Nadir, loaded with treasures, [returned] home, and left the Mogul Empire tottering to its fall. In the same

<sup>1</sup> 1727, according to Elphinstone.

<sup>2</sup> 1731, according to Burgess.

- year, the Marathas resumed offensive, Peshwa Baji Rao died, and was succeeded by his son Balaji Rao.
1743. Balaji Rao marched on Matwa, and renewed his demands on the Court of Delhi; Emperor gave him Matwa, belonging to Raguji Khan, who had revolted.
1744. Balaji beat Raguji, drove him off, and then retired to Satara.
- 1744.<sup>1</sup> First invasion of Ahmad Khan Durani. Nadir Shah murdered; the Afghan tribe of Abdali, or Durani (as it was called afterwards), under Ahmad Khan seized the Punjab; he was beaten by Mohammed's son Ahmad Shah.
1748. Asaf Jah died, ditto Mohammed Shah; succeeded by his son Ahmad Shah.
1749. Raja Sahu died; Balaji placed on throne Rajah Ram, grandson of Rajah Ram the elder and his wife Tara Bai.
- (5) 1748-1754. Ahmad Shah. He soon had quarrels with the Rohillas, who were Afghans of [the vicinity of] Oudh. (The Rohillas, Afghan tribe, emigrated from Kabul—apparently first to the north-west Himalayas, named Rohilla Himalayas—settled in the late 17th century in the north-eastern part of Delhi, between the Gogra and the Ganges, in what they named Rohilkhand.) He was unable to cope with them; they forced their way into Allahabad, and the Vizier, Safdar Jang, called in the Marathas to help him against them; the Marathas repelled [the Rohillas], and in recognition of their help the Maratha leaders, Sindhia and Holkar, were rewarded with jagirs.
- 1753.<sup>2</sup> Second invasion of the Punjab by Ahmad Khan Durani; quietly ceded to him. He assumed the title of Shah.
1754. Ghazi-uddin—[son of] Asaf Jah's eldest son—with whom the Great Mogul had had quarrel, seized him, put out his eyes, deposed him, and proclaimed one of the princes of royal blood [Emperor] under the title of—

<sup>1</sup> 1748, according to Elphinstone.

<sup>2</sup> 1751, according to Elphinstone.

- (6) 1754-1759—Alamgir II (Aurangzeb called himself Alamgir I), making himself the latter's Minister; Ghazi-uddin governed execrably, several attempts by the people to murder him; this very same Vizier—
- 1756—treacherously seized a son of [the Governor of the Punjab, appointed by] Ahmad Shah Durani, who came to Delhi, sacked it, and when he returned to Lahore—
- 1757—Ghazi called in the Marathas, and with their aid retook Delhi.
1758. Raghoba, the Maratha leader, took the Punjab from Ahmad Shah Durani, and conspired with Ghazi-uddin to bring all Hindustan under Maratha rule.
1759. Ghazi-uddin murdered Alamgir II, the last Great Mogul with any real power.
1760. Sadasheo Bhao, a Maratha chieftain, then commanding the armies of the Peshwa (having made extensive preparations for the conquest of Delhi and then marched northwards), took Delhi. At once the Afghan [Rohilla] leaders under command of Ahmad Shah Durani crossed the Jumna at the height of the rainy season, while Sadasheo Bhao took up strong position at Panipat; there the two gigantic armies of invaders, each bent on the conquest of the capital of India, confronted each other.
- January 6, 1761. Third Battle of Panipat. On that day the Maratha leaders informed Sadasheo Bhao that he must offer battle at once or the Marathas would disperse. (Until then, the two armies had confronted each other in fortified camps, constantly harassing each other and cutting off supplies; the Marathas suffered severely from starvation and disease). Sadasheo marched out; furious battle; the Marathas had all but won the day when Ahmad Shah Durani ordered his own centre to charge, and at the same time had his left flank by-pass the Marathas' right flank and attack it. This movement [proved] decisive. The Marathas fled in disorder, their army almost annihilated; they (appear to have) left some 200,000 dead on battlefield, and the remnants of their troops fell back over the Narbada.—Ahmad Shah's army, too, was so shattered in the contest that he retired to the Punjab without reaping the fruits of his victory.

Delhi was deserted; there was no one to govern it; the governments all around were shattered; Marathas never recovered from the blow.

State of the Country after the Battle at Panipat:

Mogul Empire gone; the nominal Emperor, Ali Gohar, wandering in Bihar.—The Peshwa of the Marathas, Balaji Rao, died of grief; his power was divided among the four great chieftains: the Gaekwar in Gujarat; the Raja of Nagpur (Bhonslay), Holkar, and Sindhia. The Nizam at Hyderabad became independent sovereign, but his power crippled through losses and weakened by the French policy of protection towards him.

In 1761, the year of the Battle of Panipat, the English had ousted the Frenchmen from southern India; on January 16, 1761, the French abandoned Pondicherry invested by Coote, who had its fort pulled down; thus every vestige of French power in India was destroyed. The Nabob of the Carnatic was completely dependent on good will of the English Governor of Madras; the Nabob of Oudh had become independent, with large territories and fine army; the Rajputs splendid soldiers, but scattered; a united Rajput sovereignty unheard of; the Jats and Rohillas became powers of some consequence, and later played prominent role in Indian history.—Haidar Ali, with whom the English soon in contact, was great authority in Mysore.—The English were already then probably greatest force in India. They had appointed the crowns of two large possessions—the Subahdari of Bengal, Bihar, and Orissa, and the Nabobship of the Carnatic; soon after, their ally, Nizam Ali, imprisoned his brother, the Subahdar of the Deccan, and seized his throne, placing all of southern India under British influence. (See p. 68.)<sup>1</sup> (Continued, p. 84.)<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> The passage in question appears on pp. 97-101.

<sup>2</sup> Here Marx gives, following his chronological notes, an abstract of Kovalevsky's book, whose chapters he entitles: (D) The Process of Feu-

[A Survey of Foreign Invasions of India]

- 331 B. C. Darius Codamanus finally defeated by Alexander Magnus in Battle of Arbela, near the mountains of Kurdistan.
- 327 B.C. Alexander reduced Afghanistan, then crossed Indus into territory called Taxila; its chief concluded alliance with Alexander against the great Raja Porus, or Puru, reigning in Kanauj over all Hindustan.
- 326 B.C. Alexander opposed by Porus on the eastern bank of the Jhelum, or Hydaspes; Hindus defeated in pitched battle; but Alexander's army would not advance farther into India; hence Alexander took his whole force on board of a vast number of galleys and sailed down the Hydaspes to the Indus; he reached—after severe fighting on the route—the mouth of the Indus and divided his army into two parts, one division, under Nearchus, having orders to sail up the Persian Gulf, while Alexander himself returned by land with the other. This was the last invasion of India before the Mohammedans came<sup>1</sup>.
Of the old kingdoms of Hindustan, Kingdom of Bengal destroyed in 1203 A. D. by the Mohammedans (Ghur Dynasty, Shehabuddin), under the reign of the 6th, or Sena, Dynasty.
1231. Kingdom of Malwa destroyed by Mohammedans (by Shamsuddin Altamsh, one of the slave kings of Delhi).
1297. Kingdom of Gujarat destroyed by the Mohammedans (by Ala-uddin Khilji); its kings were Rajputs; according to legend, the kingdom was founded by Krishna.
1193. Kingdom of Kanauj (very rich in 1017, when Mahmud of Ghazni seized its capital) was destroyed and its capital sacked (by the brother of Ghiyasuddin— dalization of Agriculture in India under Mussulman Rule (pp. 62-67); (E) British Domination and Its Effect on Indian Communal Property (pp. 68-76). After these two chapters comes an abstract of the two closing chapters of Kovalevsky's book on Algeria. The chronological notes are continued on p. 84 of Marx's note-book.

<sup>1</sup> This assertion is borrowed from Elphinstone, who apparently knew nothing about the invasions of India by the Yuchi, Sacae, Huns, and other tribes between the 4th century B. C. and the 7th century A. D.

Ghur Dynasty—Shehab). The reigning prince, Shivaj, fled to Jodhpur in Marwar and established a Rajput state, now one of the wealthiest.

1050. Principality of Delhi, then very insignificant, conquered by Visal, King of Ajmer.
1192. Kingdom of Ajmer, insignificant, and Delhi, which was dependent on it, overthrown by the Mussulmans (under Ghiyasuddin, Ghur Dynasty). The old states—Mewar, Jaisalmer, and Jaipur—still in existence; the Mewar family oldest in India.
1205. Sind fell into Mussulman hands, being conquered by Shehabuddin Ghuri. (In 325 [B.C.], in the days of Alexander Magnus, independent state; afterwards divided and again reunited; in 711, invaded by Mohammedans, who were beaten back by the Rajput leader at head of the Sumera tribe.)
1015. Kashmir fell into Mahmud of Ghazni's hands. (Kingdom of Magadha was a most interesting one. Its Buddhist kings wielded extensive power; they belonged for many years to the Kshatriya caste, until one of the Sudra caste—the fourth and lowest of Manu's four castes—named Chandragupta—called Sandracottus by the Greeks—murdered the King and made himself sovereign; he lived in Alexander Magnus' time. Later we find three more Sudra dynasties, which ended with one Andhra in 436 A.D. One of the kings of Makwa was Vikramaditya; the Hindu calendar still bears the date of his era; he reigned in 58 B. C.)

Old Deccan States. There are five languages in the Deccan: (1) Tamil, spoken in the Dravira land, i.e., the extreme south, bounded by line running through Bangalore, along the Ghats to Coimbatore and Calicut; (2) Kanarese, a dialect of Telugu, in North and South Kanara; (3) Telugu, spoken in Mysore and the countries to the north; (4) Marathi, written in the Devanagari alphabet and having the following limits: north, the Satpura Hills; south, the Telugu country, called Telingana; east River Wardha; west, the hills; (5) Oriya, a rough dialect spoken in Orissa. Between Orissa and the Maratha country are the Gonds, who speak a rough jargon.

The Ramayana glorifies the exploits of Rama, King of Oudh; he is supposed to have lived about 1400 B.C.; according to the poem, he was the Hindus' conquering leader in the march on Deccan and Ceylon; in the course of that legendary invasion, the Hindus found in Deccan many civilized nations: Tamils speaking the Tamil language, and others in the Telinga country, whose vernacular was Telugu. The most ancient kingdoms were the Tamil.

About 5th century, B. C., Pandya was founded by a shepherd king of that name; small country; capital, the ancient town of Madura, and territory, the present districts of Madura and Tinnevelly in the extreme south of the Carnatic; remained independent till 1736 A. D., when conquered by Nabob of Arcot.

Chola, where Tamil language spoken; capital was Conjeeveram; in 1678, a Maratha chieftain, Venkoji, supplanted the King, and became the first of the present rajas of Tanjore.

Chera was a little state including Travancore, Coimbatore, and part of Malabar.

Kerala, colonized by Brahmins of Hindustan, governed by an aristocracy of that caste; included Malabar and Kanara; by and by split up into factions, and went to pieces; Malabar became possession of the Zamorins (rajas of Calicut), while Kanara was seized by the rajas of Vijayanagar.

Carnata, mentioned in earliest accounts [as divided] between the princes of Pandya and Chera. It had one great and powerful family, the Belala Rajas, overthrown by the Mohammedans in 1310 (under Ala-uddin Khilji).

The Yadavas mentioned, their locality obscure, nothing known of them.

The Chalukyas of Carnata, a Rajput family living at Kalyan, to the west of Bidar; another branch of the same family—

The Chalukyas of Calinga—ruled over tract in East Telingana, extending along the coast up to the borders of Orissa; they were overthrown by the rajas of Cuttack.

Andhra, capital was Warangal; several dynasties (one of which, the Ganapati Rajas, attained great eminence), ruled for more than 400 years, and in 1332 were overthrown by the Mohammedans (under Muhammad Tughlak).

Orissa: first notice of this raj, in Mahabharata; the earliest authentic date, 473 A. D. (expulsion of the invading "yavanas"<sup>1</sup> by the ruling family). Thirty-five "Kesari" Rajas succeeded each other until, in 1131, the dynasty overthrown by that of Ganga Vansa, which family on throne till 1550, when country seized by Mohammedans (under Selim Shah Sur—Jalal Khan, see p. 49).<sup>2</sup>

Lastly, Greek author of Periplus mentions two great cities as important trading marts on the coast, named Tagara and Plithana; nothing known of them, their site supposed somewhere near the Godavari River. For the "ancient" in Hindustan, cf. also Hastinapuram (the petty state concerning which the war [described] in the Indian Iliad, Mahabharata, was waged); the ancient religious city, Muttra and Panchala (p. 6).<sup>3</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> At that time all foreigners in India were called yavanas. It is not clear who are meant in this particular case. The first authentic date is that of the reduction of Orissa by Asoka, who ruled approximately from 270 to 232 B. C.

<sup>2</sup> See pp. 33 of this edition.

<sup>3</sup> This and subsequent references by Marx are to the pages of Robert Sewell, The Analytical History of India, London, 1870.

[THE CONQUEST OF INDIA
BY THE BRITISH EAST INDIA COMPANY]

I. THE EAST INDIA CO. IN BENGAL, 1725-1755

(Great Moguls: Mohammed Shah, 1719-1748; Ahmad Shah, 1748-1754.)

1725. Death of Murshid Kuli Khan, Subahdar of Bengal, Bihar, and Orissa and Dewan (collector of revenue) for Bengal; succeeded in the Bengal and Orissa appointments by his son Shuja-uddin.
1726. Trading on the Hooghly were: the English, at Calcutta; French, at Chandernagor; Dutch, at Chinsurah, and the Ostend East India Co., established by German Emperor, had founded [a factory] at the village of Banki Zabar; the other companies rallied and threw the interlopers<sup>1</sup> out of Bengal. In the same year (under George I), Mayor's courts were set up in each presidency town; see p. 79 for more about this extension of English common and statute law to India—quoad<sup>2</sup> English.
1730. In England a new society, formed on free trade principles, begged charter from Parliament for East India trade; simultaneously the old East India Co. asked for prolongation of their monopoly charter, as their period of incorporation had expired by then; hard parliamentary battles, the old monopoly company won; their charter prolonged till 1766.

---

<sup>1</sup> Merchants who traded with India on their own, thereby violating the East India Co.'s monopoly.

<sup>2</sup> Concerning.

- 1740.<sup>1</sup> Subahdar Shuja-uddin died, and was succeeded by Aliverdi Khan, Governor of Bihar, who thus reunited the three provinces of Bengal, Bihar, and Orissa; he was—
- 1741—attacked by the Marathas, who plundered factory at Murshidabad, etc. (pp. 79, 80). As a result the English—
- 1742—obtained from Aliverdi Khan permission to dig the celebrated Maratha Ditch.
1751. Marathas, bought off by Aliverdi Khan, retired to Deccan. From then on, the British settlements on the Hooghly enjoyed peace till 1755 (cf. pp. 79-80 for the Maratha affair)
- . . . . . , . . . . .

II. WAR WITH THE FRENCH IN THE CARNATIC, 1744-1760

1744. Great war declared in Europe between England and France; the English troops in Madras Presidency only 600; the French troops, under Labourdonnais, more numerous at Pondicherry and Ile de France.<sup>2</sup>

September 20, 1746. Labourdonnais captured Madras; he neither imprisoned the English merchants, nor injured them personally; this enraged his rival Dupleix, the Governor of Pondicherry. (This fellow was son of a French East Indian Director); in 1730, Governor of a large French factory at Chandernagor, on the Hooghly; was made Governor of Pondicherry in 1742. His rivalry against Labourdonnais ended in the downfall of French in India.

The fleet under the command of Labourdonnais having been destroyed by a storm, Dupleix sent him no assistance. Labourdonnais taken prisoner by the English. Returning to France, he died in Bastille in 1749. (In 1735, he had been sent as Governor to Ile de France and Bourbon<sup>3</sup> and in 1741, his term having expired, was sent out in command of an expedition of nine vessels to damage the trade of the English in India; on the declaration of war in 1744, he sailed to take the command of the French in the South.)

<sup>1</sup> 1739, according to Burgess.

<sup>2</sup> Old name of Mauritius.

<sup>3</sup> Old name of Réunion.

1746. State of Parties in the Deccan. Under Great Mogul Mohammed Shah (1719-1748) was Asaf Jah, alias Nizam-ul-Mulk, Subahdar of the Deccan, who founded the Dynasty of the Nizams, and resided at Hyderabad. Thanks to him, Anwaruddin became Nabob of the Carnatic in 1740, at the death of its minorennis<sup>1</sup> hereditary Nabob, whose guardian the same Asaf Jah had appointed him earlier. By marriage with the daughter of Dost Ali, former Nabob of the Carnatic, Chandar Sahib had become Governor of Trichinopoly, whence he was ousted by the Marathas in 1741, and fled to the French at Madras.
1746. Anwaruddin (Nabob of the Carnatic) with 10,000 men attacked Madras, where Dupleix was at head of the French; the Nabob pushed back by about 1,000 Frenchmen under Dupleix, who ravaged town, burned several [English] factories, and sent the more prominent English inhabitants to Pondicherry.
- December 19, Dupleix attacked Fort St. David, 12 miles south of Madras (where English had a garrison of 200), with 1,700 men, but Anwaruddin marched against the besieging French and forced them to retreat to Pondicherry.
1747. Dupleix won Anwaruddin to his side; he attacked Fort St. David again in March, [but] retired at approach of English fleet under Captain Peyton, who left reinforcements.
- June 1747. Admirals Boscawen and Griffin arrived from England at Madras with fleet, thereby increasing British force in the South to 4,000; English invested Pondicherry, [but] retreated empty-handed.
- October 4, 1748. Word received of the Peace of Aachen; Dupleix had restored Madras to the English.—Sahuji, Maratha Prince at Tanjore, fifth in descent from Shahji (father of Shivaji), whose jagir was [Tanjore], invoked English support against his younger brother Pratap Singh, who had wrested power from him and the [centre] of whose rebellion was the stronghold of Devikota, in the mouth of the Coleroon.

<sup>1</sup> Juvenile

- 1747.<sup>1</sup> Sahuji promised the English to cede them that stronghold if they took it. Major Lawrence, with Clive serving under him as young officer, took it; thus Devikota became English. But Pratap Singh, for his part, finally forced Sahuji to abdicate on promise of annuity of Rs 50,000.
1748. Death of Nizam-ul-Mulk, Subahdar of the Deccan; he was succeeded by his son Nazir Jang, whose title was disputed by the son of a defunct elder brother, Muzaffar Jang. A war broke out between the two.
1749. New war between English and French. Muzaffar Jang turned to French for help and obtained it, as well as the alliance of Chandar Sahib, whom he promised to make Nabob of Arcot if he assisted him to the subahdari.—On the other hand, Nazir Jang (the Nizam) had the English and Anwaruddin (Nabob of the Carnatic) for allies.—Anwaruddin was killed in first skirmish, and his troops fled to Trichinopoly; but mutiny broke out over pay in the French army, which left Dupleix in the lurch; Nazir Jang advanced, Muzaffar Jang was defeated and captured, while Chandar Sahib desperately fought his way to Pondicherry. After the victory Nazir Jang entertained himself in Arcot. English retreated to Madras.
1750. Mohammed Ali, son of Anwaruddin, succeeded him as Nabob of the Carnatic; this fellow, secured in his office by English, remained their willing servant, hence his sobriquet, "the Company's Nabob."—Dupleix victoriously launched the campaign of that year by capturing the fortresses of Jinji, Masulipatam and Trivadi, and defeating Mohammed Ali. Incited by him, some traitors, Pathan nabobs, in the Nizam's (Nazir Jang's) camp finished him [the Nizam] off; the latter was succeeded by his nephew Muzaffar Jang

<sup>1</sup> 1749 according to Burgess.

(ally of the French), Subahdar in his own right. He made Dupleix Nabob of the Carnatic and Chandar Sahib, Nabob of Arcot; but—

January 4, 1751—while journeying with large retinue in the State of Hyderabad, Muzaffar Jang was killed by the same Pathan nabobs who had finished off Nazir Jang. Muzaffar Jang had no direct issue; next heirs apparent were Nazir Jang's sons; Bussy, who was in command of the French contingent, conferred the vacant post [of subahdar] on Salabat Jang, Nazir Jang's youngest son, held as prisoner in the camp at the time of Muzaffar Jang's murder.

Meanwhile Chandar Sahib, marching from Arcot, attacked his former seat of government, Trichinopoly, but Captain Clive countered him by marching on Arcot, which he took, and forcing him into a hasty retreat. After seven weeks' fruitless besieging of Arcot, Chandar Sahib returned to Trichinopoly, whither—

1752—Clive followed him; he stayed there with Mohammed Ali and Major Lawrence; Chandar Sahib, fugitive, was treacherously finished off by the Raja of Tanjore, an English protégé.

1753. The English ally, Mohammed Ali, had promised Trichinopoly to the Raja of Mysore, but was unable to keep his word, for the place was now held by the English. Dupleix took advantage of this to [make] an alliance with the Raja of Mysore and, through him, with the Marathas under Morari Rao.

May 1753–October 1754. Dupleix with his allies invested Trichinopoly, successfully held under Lawrence and Clive.

In the same year (under George II), the Mayor's courts, which had fallen into disuse since the capture of Madras by Labourdonnais in 1746, were re-established in Madras. They acquired jurisdiction in all matters between Europeans, as well as between Hindus, but only on their consent, expressly exempting those who refused to be subject to this tribunal. “This charter is the first instance we find of the reservation of their own laws to the people of India.” (Grady's Hindu Law of Inheritance, Introduction, p. XLIV.)

1754. Peace; recall of Dupleix (this was signal of the downfall of the French in India). For there had been dispute in Europe since 1751 as to who should be recognized as Nabob of the Carnatic: Mohammed Ali, "the Company's Nabob," or Dupleix, officially appointed by the hereditary Subahdar; but English Government contended that it should be Mohammed Ali as heir to the former Nabob and because none but the phantom Great Mogul Ahmad Shah (d. 1754; succeeded by Alamgir II, 1754-1759), could by express firman transfer the office from the hereditary line. Dupleix' enemies in France plotted against him "because of the heavy expenses" he had incurred. Dupleix superseded by Godeheu (1754). (Dupleix died a few years later in dire poverty in France! The envy of those French poodles is the undoing of able men.)

December 26, 1754. Peace treaty signed between Godeheu and Sanders (Governor of Madras), whereby Mohammed Ali was recognized as Nabob of the Carnatic.—Meanwhile Bussy, the cleverest of all French leaders in India, [was] in Aurangabad with Salabat Jang, the Deccan Nizam, assisting him in managing the affairs of the subahdari.—In the same year—1754<sup>1</sup>—Salabat Jang was attacked by Ghazi-uddin Khan (elder brother of the former Subahdar, Nazir Jang) at head of a large army, joined by the Marathas. Bussy beat the latter and had Ghazi-uddin poisoned; the Nizam thanked him by giving the Northern Circars<sup>2</sup> to the French.

1755. Contrary to Bussy's advice, Salabat Jang attacked the Raja of Mysore, who had refused to pay him tribute (the Raja of Mysore, then French ally, was thereby urged into alliance with English); expedition successful; Raja of Mysore bought off Salabat Jang with large sums of money and presents. The Nizam then joined with the Marathas under the Peshwa, Balaji Rao, and defeated the rebel Maratha chieftain, Morari Rao.

<sup>1</sup> 1752, according to Elphinstone.

<sup>2</sup> Province in the north of the Coromandel Coast; it belonged to the Nizam of Hyderabad.

- 1749-1756. Maratha Affairs. In 1749, Raja Sahu died at Poona without issue; Balaji Rao, the Peshwa, became the real ruler; [he] left the remaining prince of the blood. Rajah Ram, nothing but title keeping him virtually as prisoner. At the same time he sent his bold and refractory son—Raghoba—away from Poona, on pretext of plundering the dominions of the Gaekwar of Gujarat.
- 1756. Bussy, ordered by the Nizam, Salabat Jang, away from his court, went to Masulipatam; he heard that the Nizam proposed to ally himself with the English in order to expel the French from the subahdari. He at once took offensive and entrenched himself at Charmal, near Hyderabad. Salabat came of terms, and declined the English alliance.
- 1757. The Nizam again sent Bussy away to the Northern Circars. But soon he had to recall him: on his return—
- 1757—Bussy* found four opposing armies collected round Hyderabad, under the Nizam's two elder brothers, viz., Basalat Jang and Nizam Ali, with the latter of whom, moreover, Salabat Jang's Minister conspired; Bussy had him slain in an apparently accidental struggle; thereupon Nizam Ali fled from the battlefield, while Basalat Jang was bought off by presenting him with the fortress of Daulatabad.
- 1758. Bussy now dictator of the entire Deccan; just then the enviously dull-witted rabble of Louis XV removed him, replaced him by the Irish adventurer Lally, good soldier but no general.
- May 1, 1758. Lally landed near Fort St. David and at once ordered Bussy to march south with all the French under his command; Bussy obeyed; Lally took Fort St. David, and was about to attack Madras; the French merchants at Pondicherry refused him the smallest pecuniary assistance; he therefore decided to "loot" Tanjore, reputed to be very rich, and besieged it closely; Raja of Tanjore appealed to the English; these sent fleet from Madras to Karikal, cut off the French supplies, and landed an army that proceeded to draw lines round the parallels of Lally's attack. French siege raised, and the French Admiral, in direct contradiction to orders, sailed with fleet to Mauritius, leaving Lally to his fate.—Lally took Arcot, was joined there by Bussy; the latter advised him to remain at Arcot in order to consolidate French power and collect funds for the final descent on the English headquarters; but the “crazy” Lally insisted on his plan and—

December 12, 1758—invested Madras, where garrison, commanded by Lawrence, held out for two months; on December 14, French captured “Black Town” and drew parallels round the fort.

February 16, 1759. A British fleet appeared in the roads, siege raised; Lally fled, leaving 50 guns behind him Colonel Coote, who had come with the fleet, landed unhampered at Madras, marched out with the garrison, captured Wandiwash, and shattered Lally, driving him to Pondicherry.

1760. Lally at Pondicherry, waiting in vain for supplies from France; his troops mutinous for pay; at end of 1760, Coote began siege of Pondicherry.

January 14, 1761. Garrison evacuated Pondicherry; Coote razed the fort to the ground, completely destroying every vestige of French power in India. Lally was terribly maltreated and at last executed in Paris; Labourdonnais died in gaol, Dupleix in misery, Bussy stayed in India until forgotten.

III. EVENTS IN BENGAL, 1755-1773

1740, when Aliverdi Khan, following death of the Subahdar, Shuja-uddin, united the three provinces of Bengal, Bihar, and Orissa under himself (p. 85<sup>1</sup>), saw the death of Baji Rao, the Maratha Peshwa. (His armies were led by Puar, Holkar, Sindhia, and a powerful adventurer, Raghoji Bhonslay.) With his death Raghoji Bhonslay's power became so great that the other leaders entered private contract to crush him; [they] had him sent on an expedition to the Carnatic. The Pesh-

<sup>1</sup> P. 61 of this edition.

wa (Baji Rao) left three sons: Balaji Rao, who succeeded him, Raghunath Rao (later famed as Raghoba), and Shamsher Bahadur, who was ruling in Bundelkhand. The grants of land which the new Peshwa, Balaji Rao, received brought him into direct opposition to Bhonslay, who thereupon invaded Bengal, but was defeated by the royal troops. Aliverdi Khan was compelled by these hostile occurrences in his own country to defend himself against the Marathas of both parties; he was reinforced with imperial troops; Bhaskar, an officer of Balaji Rao's, opposed him successfully, fought him as far as Katwa, advanced to the Hooghly, and plundered a factory at Murshidabad.

In 1744, Bhaskar assassinated by Aliverdi Khan, who in 1751 bought off the Marathas.

1755. English made alliance with Balaji Rao, the Peshwa, in view of his growing might and the weakness of the Great Mogul.

April 8, 1756. Aliverdi Khan died; succeeded as Subahdar by his grandson Suraj-ud-daula; [he] at once sent message to Mr. Drake, Governor of Calcutta, to raze all the British fortifications. On Drake's refusal he came down on Calcutta in force. As the fort garrison only 120 English artillerymen, etc., and no supplies in the fort, Drake gave the inhabitants the order of "sauve qui peut."<sup>1</sup>

Evening, June 21, 1756. The clerks, etc., decamped; in the night, fort defended by Holwell "by the light of the burning factories," fort stormed, garrison taken prisoners, Suraj gave orders that all the captives should be kept in safety till the morning; but the 146 men (accidentally, it seems) were crushed into a room 20 feet square and with but one small window; next morning (as Holwell himself tells the story), only 23 were still alive; they were allowed to sail down the Hooghly. It was "the Black Hole of Calcutta," over which the English hypocrites have been making so much sham scandal to this day. Suraj-ud-daula returned to Murshida- bad; Bengal now completely and effectually cleared of the English intruders.

<sup>1</sup> Save himself who can.

- January 2, 1757. Fort William recaptured by Clive, sent up from Madras with fleet under Admiral Watson. Subahdar marched on Calcutta, attacked by Clive, in decisive action of many hours. On January 3, Suraj-ud-daula restored the Company to their old privileges and [paid them] compensation.—Clive destroyed French settlement at Chandernagor. Subahdar fixed his camp at Plassey (on Hooghly, near Calcutta). Mir Jafar, Commander-in-Chief of the Mogul army, wrote letter to Clive, offering to desert to English on any day of general engagement if he were made Subahdar of Bengal, Bihar, and Orissa in place of Suraj-ud-daula. Clive accepted offer.
- June 23, 1757. Battle of Plassey. Entire Mogul army defeated, Subahdar fled, Mir Jafar ceased fighting, [deserted] to Clive's camp.
- June 29, 1757. [English] army returned to Murshidabad, where Clive solemnly made the traitor Subahdar of Bengal, Bihar, and Orissa on condition that he would pay the war expenses and protect the Company's possessions on the Hooghly; Dulub Ram became Mir Jafar's Minister of Finance and Ram Narayan, Governor of Patna.
- June 30, a son of Mir Jafar found Suraj-ud-daula disguised as a mendicant, and finished him off.
- Immediately after Battle of Plassey, Clive* made Governor of Calcutta; thus he was now British civil and military commander in Bengal.
- Three revolts against Mir Jafar*—in Midnapore, Purnea and Bihar—put down.
- End of 1757. Arrival of a treasure-ship with £ 800,000 from Mir Jafar; it delighted the Calcutta "dunderheads."
- 1758. Colonel Forde, sent on an expedition by Clive, defeated the French under Conflans in Vizagapatam, and captured Masulipatam.
- 1759. Ali Gohar, the Shah Zada (Prince Imperial), eldest son of the Great Mogul Alamgir II, revolted against his father, was joined by Subahdar of Oudh, and marched on Patna, defended by Ram Narayan; Clive came to the latter's assistance, put the Shah Zada to flight, and received from Mir Jafar a jagir bringing £ 30,000 a year.—Shortly after, a Dutch fleet [coming] from their settlements in Batavia appeared on the Hooghly, and landed some troops; in the night, Clive had Colonel Forde attack them and throw them back into their boats; the Dutch commander withdrew after promising to pay all expenses.

February 25, 1760. Clive sailed for Europe.—Dulub Ram, Mir Jafar's Minister of Finance, assassinated by the latter.—Meanwhile the Great Mogul, Alamgir II, was likewise murdered—by his Vizier, Ghazi-uddin; Shah Zada proclaimed himself Emperor, marched on Patna, and defeated Ram Narayan, who held out in the city till—

February 20, 1760, when Colonel Caillaud, arriving with British force, defeated the new Emperor (Ali Gohar); the Mogul undertook flanking march on Murshidabad, found English drawn up there, and retired to Patna. Caillaud sent Captain Knox to relieve that city; Knox advanced with 200 Europeans, battalion of sepoys, and a small squadron of cavalry. Knox beat Moguls and fixed his camp at Patna, but Nabob of Purnea appeared on other bank of the Ganges with 30,000 men and more than 100 cannons.

May 20, 1760. Victory of Knox, who, supported by his ally, Rajput Raja Shitab Roy, crossed river for the offensive; Mogul army put to flight; Knox and the Rajput entered Patna with only 300 survivors.

January 6, 1761. Battle of Panipat (cf. p. 58<sup>1</sup>) between the Marathas under Sadasheo Bhao and the Durani, or Abdali (Afghan tribe), under Ahmad Khan Abdali. Mogul Empire in India utterly defeated; Maratha strength shattered and Ahmad Khan weakened to such an extent that he had to return to Afghanistan.

1757. Raghoba (called in by Alamgir II's Vizier, Ghazi-uddin) took Delhi from Ahmad Khan; after defeating Prince Timur, Ahmad Khan's son, in the Punjab, the

<sup>1</sup> Pp. 54-55 of this edition.

Marathas returned to the Deccan. On return to Poona, Raghoba quarrelled with Sadashiv (or Sadasheo) Bhao, the Peshwa's cousin, and was removed from the army command, Sadasheo being put in his place.

1759. Ahmad Khan invaded India for the fourth time and took Lahore just when Ghazi-uddin had murdered Alamgir II and when Najib-ud-daula, an Afghan commander, had driven the Maratha leaders, Malhar Rao Holkar and Dataji Sindhia, across the Ganges. Thereupon—

Early 1760—Ahmad Khan [appeared] with army before Delhi. Bhao (Sadasheo) marched against him with immense army, and there was final decision at Panipat.

1760. Vansittart, Governor of Bengal in place of Clive; as a Madras civilian he was “disliked” by the Bengalese officers. — Vansittart removed Mir Jafar and made his son-in-law Mir Kasim Subahdar; this fellow lived in Calcutta scrupulously paying the English his subsidy of £200,000; ceded absolutely to the Company one-third of his territory, viz., the districts of Midnapore, Burdwan, and Chittagong. But afterwards, irritated at the interference of Vansittart, he began increasing and disciplining his army.—Meanwhile Ali Gohar, under title of Emperor Shah Alam, unable to regain Delhi, ravaged Bihar, finally made alliance with the English, was recognized by them at Patna, and confirmed all the appointments they had made.

1762. Mir Kasim imprisoned Ram Narayan, had his collectors torture the ryots, etc., but his sin as the Company saw it was this: the asinine Great Mogul, Farrukhshah (see p. 56.<sup>1</sup>), had in 1715 guaranteed the Company as a collective body the dustuck (immunity of tax for imported commodities); but all private traders (English) had grasped this loan as their right. Mir Kasim was against this usurpation by “clerks”; his collectors sought to carry out his orders, seized goods which had not paid duty, and were insulted by the Company's servants. Vansittart promised privately that Mir Kasim should be paid a duty of 9% [by the Company's servants]; Council of the Company quashed that, and issued formal order to seize and imprison Mir Kasim's officers if attempting to enforce the duty. Mir Kasim countered by granting a firman to all Mogul traders at the port that they should pass their goods free of duty; thereby he put them on even terms with the English "clerks."—Ellis, chief of the English factory at Patna, began openly to prepare for war. Two fellows, Hay and Amyatt, sent from Calcutta to Monghyr to insist on the Company's claims, were seized on orders from Mir Kasim; Hay was held as hostage for the good behaviour of Ellis, Amyatt sent back to Calcutta with written remonstrations from Mir Kasim.—Ellis at once seized city and fort of Patna. Mir Kasim ordered his officers to seize every Englishman who came their way; on his way to Calcutta Amyatt, loath to surrender his sword to Mogul police, fired on them, and was himself killed in the scuffle.

<sup>1</sup> P. 49 of this edition.

1763. Mir Kasim increased his army, and applied for help to the Great Mogul (Ali Gohar) and the Subahdar of Oudh; the English declared him deposed, reappointing Mir Jafar in his place.

July 19, 1763. English victorious (it was opening of the campaign), ditto July 24; on August 2, after taking Murshidabad, the English victorious at Gheria; Mir Kasim finished off all his English prisoners, including the Setts, the great Murshidabad bankers, and also murdered Ram Narayan.

November 1763. English took Mir Kasim's camp at Udwanullah, the Mogul [Mir Kasim] fled to Patna, was there joined by the Great Mogul, Shah Alam, and the Subahdar of Oudh with large force; but English took Patna by assault.

1764. In Patna, because of pay arrears, the sepoys revolted against the English; the sepoys marched out of the city to join enemy; they were attacked and defeated by Major Munro, and marched back to Patna, where the ringleaders were blown from the guns (so this philanthropic operation was employed as early as that first sepoy uprising!).

- October 22, 1764. Mir Kasim, attacked by Munro in his fortified camp at Buxar, was defeated, and fled for his life to Oudh.
1764. Through this victory at Buxar (north-west of Patna), entire Ganges bank [fell] into English hands, the English becoming virtual masters of Hindustan. Vansittart at once recognized Shuja-ud-daula as Nabob of Oudh; Mir Jafar, as Nabob of Bengal, Bihar, and Orissa (Mir Jafar had to pay subsidy of 53 lakhs); Shah Alam, as Great Mogul, with residence at Allahabad.
1765. Mir Jafar died; his son Najm-ud-daula recognized as his successor.—Vansittart's term of office expired in the same year; Clive, made peer, became his successor; in the interim, Spencer appointed President [of the Calcutta Council of the Company].
- Clive's Second Administration, 1765-1767.* (Clive quarrelled in London with the Directors of the East India Co., who at once sent orders to Calcutta to stop the rent-payment of his jagir.)
- May 3, 1765. Lord Clive landed at Calcutta, vested with combined powers of Governor of Bengal, President of Council, and Commander-in-Chief.
- Corruption, which Clive found in Calcutta, etc. (p. 103). The Committee of Four, appointed to assist Clive, were General Carnac, Mr. Verelst, Mr. Sumner, and Mr. Sykes.—Clive induced the Nabob of Bengal, Orissa, and Bihar, the debaucher Najm-ud-daula, to abdicate for annual income of 53 lakhs of rupees, transferring over all his powers to the East India Co.; he also gave the Great Mogul annuity of 26 lakhs of rupees for the free cession of all territorial rights in those three districts, and secured the revenues of Kora and Allahabad; furthermore, Great Mogul ceded all jurisdiction over the newly acquired country to the East India Co. Thus English Government acquired Dewani<sup>1</sup> and Nizam.<sup>2</sup> In the same year, Clive made the Adalat System<sup>3</sup> constitutional (see pp. 104, 105). The East India

<sup>1</sup> Department of Finance.

<sup>2</sup> War Department.

<sup>3</sup> Government through native administration.

Co. thereby acquired absolute government over 25 million people, and an annual revenue of 4 crores of rupees. (It was not until 1772 that Warren Hastings was authorized to place the entire administration in the hands of English officers.)

January 1, 1766. Clive ordered that double batta should cease from that day (the extra pay called "batta" was received by the English officers when employed in the field; it had been doubled during the recent war). Thereupon mutiny of the Bengal officers; together they sent in their resignations, something which seemed all the more unfortunate as just then came news of advance of 50,000 Marathas on Bihar. Clive accepted all the resignations, sent the offenders to court-martial, and ordered up in their place all the cadets and officers from Madras. The British troops, desirous of following the example of their officers, were held in check by the faithful sepoys! Sir Robert Fletcher, Commander-in-Chief at Calcutta, was dismissed without more ado, rightly or wrongly, as conniving in the conspiracy.

Inland Trade Disputes. The Directors of the East India Co. had [in the absence of Clive] allowed their servants to monopolize the inland trade in salt and areca-nuts, whole service rushed into speculation, skinning ryots; discontent of the natives. Clive put an end (!?) to it, instituting a society for the promotion of inland trade yielding the Company a steady profit, but preventing individual speculation at the expense of the natives; two years later, the society was liquidated on direction from the board at home and replaced by a regular commission.

1767. Resignation of Lord Clive on account of illness. On his return to England, he was cruelly persecuted by the Directors of the Company.

November 1774, suicide of Clive!

1767-1769. Verelst, President [of the Council] at Calcutta, Governor of Bengal; 1772-1785, Warren Hastings. Was a Bengal civilian, born in 1732, in 1750 sent to Calcutta as clerk. In 1760, member of Calcutta Council.

1769. 300,000 Marathas sent northwards by Peshwa Madhu Rao to avenge the defeat at Panipat; [they] ravaged Rajputana, forced the Jats to pay tribute, and advanced on Delhi, well governed by Zabita Khan, son of Najib-ud-daula the Rohilla, left there by Ahmad Khan in 1756; they [the Marathas] offered Shah Alam to reinstate him in triumph at Delhi if he placed himself exclusively under Maratha protection. He accepted.

December 25, 1771. The fellow [Shah Alam] was crowned Mogul Emperor at Delhi by the Peshwa.

1772. Marathas overran Rohilkhand, reduced the Doab, laid waste the whole province; they imprisoned Zabita Khan and confiscated his property.

Autumn 1772. [Marathas] made treaty with the Rohillas and the Nabob Vizier of Oudh, Shuja-ud-daula; retired on his promise to pay 40 lakhs of rupees, which he did not keep.

1773. Marathas determined to plunder Oudh; the Rohillas under Hafiz Rahmat allied themselves against them with the Nabob of Oudh. The witless Shah Alam attacked the Marathas, was thoroughly worsted; victors forced him to cede the districts of Kora and Allahabad; but those districts included part of the British territory of Bengal. The British "brutes" were in luck, for the Peshwa at Poona recalled all the Marathas to Deccan for expedition to the south.

Events in England. Envy there over the immense fortunes of the Company's servants; besides, the luxurious way of life of the fellows. Source of this wealth, wholesale depositions of native princes, disgraceful system of oppression and extortion, denounced, like the entire system of the Company, in Parliament. The rules under which a holder of £500 stock had one vote at the meetings of the Court of Proprietors had led to system of extensive bribery and corruption in the annual election of new Directors. On one occasion, Lord Shelbourne spent £100,000 merely to have Mr. Sullivan elected to the Directorate. The India House was a constant scene of intrigues and jobbery.

1771. Parliament interfered, appointed a Committee of Three to go to Calcutta to examine the whole machinery of the Company and make reforms. The three—Providence!—viz., Vansittart, Scrafton, and Colonel Forde, lost their lives in shipwreck off Cape of Good Hope.

Soon afterwards, dispute between East India Co. and British Government over the actual ownership of the English possessions in India.

During these discussions, revealed: temporary bankruptcy of the Company; deficit to a million pounds in India and 1½ millions in England. The Directors begged permission of Parliament to contract a public loan; death-blow to the illusions about the inexhaustible wealth of India!

- 1772, select committee appointed; the whole system of fraud, violence, oppression, by which certain individual members had enriched themselves, laid bare. Impassioned debate in Parliament; Lord Clive's celebrated speech on Indian affairs.
1773. Reconstruction Act [on the East India Co.] passed through both houses; amount of stock qualifying for one vote—no proprietor might have at Court of Proprietors more than four votes—raised from £500 to £1,000. Governor of Calcutta was renamed "Governor-General," having supreme command over all the presidencies and nominated by Parliament every five years. New constitution of courts (pp. 109, 110).—Under Warren Hastings' partially adopted plan (in 1780, the Governor-General in Council received from Parliament power to make rules and regulations for the newly acquired countries; at that time the 23d rule of Warren Hastings made law nem. con. The 27th section exacted that the Koran should be the standard of law for Mohammedans; the Vedas or Dharma Shastras, for Hindus), the natives were to have their own laws administered to them; by 23d rule of Warren Hastings, maulavies (expounders of the Mohammedan law) and pundits (interpreters of the Hindu law) were appointed to attend regularly in each court.
- . . . . .

IV. AFFAIRS IN MADRAS AND BOMBAY, 1761-1770

1761. Salabat Jang, Subahdar of the Deccan, seized and imprisoned by his brother Nizam Ali, who proclaimed himself Nizam.—The President of Madras demanded from

Mohammed Ali, "the Company's Nabob" (of the Carnatic), 50 lakhs of rupees for the maintenance of the "English contingent" of troops guaranteed to him; Mohammed told them [the English] to fleece Tanjore; President of Madras threatened the Raja of Tanjore with "confiscation" of his dominions unless he paid the money; the latter consented; in this manner the expense of the Carnatic contingent was defrayed!

1763. "Peace of Paris" recognized Mohammed Ali as Nabob of the Carnatic and Salabat Jang, as Subahdar of the Deccan. Thereupon the latter was finished off by his brother Nizam Ali, who, now Subahdar, declared war on English, and refused to recognize Mohammed Ali as Nabob of the Carnatic. A few English regiments frightened him into quietude. Simultaneously firman was received from the puppet Emperor at Delhi, declaring the Company's ally, the Nabob of the Carnatic, independent of the present or any future subahdar of the Deccan. Thus Carnatic became an independent sovereignty.

August 12, 1765. Clive persuaded the puppet Emperor to give up the Northern Circars to the English; the Nizam refused to recognize this [deal], and sent threatening message to the President of Madras, saying that these lands (which true) had been given to the French; President of Madras sent Colonel Caillaud to Hyderabad where—

November 12, 1766—first treaty with the Nizam [was concluded]; by its terms, Northern Circars to be held by the English from the Nizam; Company had to pay him annual subsidy of 8 lakhs of rupees and to detail 2 battalions of infantry with 6 guns to defend the district.

1761. Haidar Ali became Raja of Mysore, took Bednore in 1763 and South Kanara in 1764.

Haidar Ali born 1702; son of Fateh Mohammed, a Mogul officer, who died in command of small troop in the Punjab, leaving his son as naik (was in Mogul army = capitaine in French army; nowadays, in the native army, a corporal is called naik) with 200 men under his orders. Haidar Ali, with his 200 men, joined army of Mysore in 1750. At that time the Raja of Mysore had resigned all power to his Vizier, Nanjaraj. In 1755, Haidar Ali was made commander of the fortress of Dindigul, with order to raise body of troops and maintain them; he did so by marauding and inviting all criminals and freebooters in the neighbourhood into his fortress; they flocked to him in large numbers. Thus in 1757, when Peshwa invaded Mysore, Haidar had force of 10,000 men, many guns, and ammunition. He received large estate by way of reward. Mysore treasury, exhausted by payments to buy off the Marathas, was depleted, and hence mutinies of the unpaid soldiers, which Haidar had greatly helped to quell. In 1759, Haidar was made Commander-in-Chief in Mysore, received more land as present, thus becoming possessor of half the raj in his own right; Nanjaraj, overawed, resigned, and Haidar became responsible minister of the Raja; he was attacked by Khande Rao, induced Nanjaraj to reassume the viziership pro hunc,<sup>1</sup> went to the army, defeated and captured Khande Rao, whom he—a second Louis XI—shut up in an iron cage like a paroquet, had him fed on crumbs of rice and seeds, in mockery; the bird soon died as a result, and then, in 1761, Haidar forced Nanjaraj and the Raja to resign in his favour.

1765. Peshwa Madhu Rao sent army against Haidar Ali under Raghoji Bhonslay (then Raja of Berar) and the Peshwa's brother Raghoba. Twice defeated, Haidar bought off the Marathas with 32 lakhs of rupees and by cession of all the territories he had conquered beyond the Mysore frontier.
1766. Haidar Ali reassumed offensive, and captured Calicut and Malabar. Peshwa made great alliance with the Nizam and English against Haidar.
1767. First Mysore War. In January 1767, Peshwa crossed Kistna, and his Marathas plundered northern Mysore; by large payment Haidar induced him to withdraw his troops to Poona.—Nizam joined Haidar (see Treachery of the Nizam against Nanjaraj, p. 114). Thus the English under Colonel Smith had to retire. In September 1767, Smith was attacked by the united armies of Mysore and Hyderabad at Chengama (in South Arcot, Madras Presidency); he defeated them and withdrew in excellent order to Madras.

<sup>1</sup> For the time being.

1768. Demonstration by the English against place near Hyderabad; Nizam, cowed, came to terms.

Second (English) treaty with Nizam (exceedingly blameworthy and most characteristic of the East India Co.!). By its terms, the English to "pay tribute" to Nizam for the Northern Circars. The "Guntur Circars," then held by the Nizam's brother Basalat Jang, not to be claimed by the Company until after the latter's death. The English to pay chauth (blackmail) to the Marathas (was paid them only by the surrounding little states in order to buy off encroachments by those marauders, as of old among the Highland tribes of Scotland!). To be able to pay this chauth—voilà le couronnement de l'œuvre<sup>1</sup>—the English pledged themselves to conquer the Carnatic Balaghat from Haidar Ali and pay the chauth out of the proceeds of that annexation!

Autumn 1768. Expedition from Bombay conquered; Mangalore and Onore; reconquered from the English by Haidar one or two months later. But while he was thus engaged on western coast, Colonel Smith marched into Mysore from the east, took almost half of it, and laid siege to Bangalore. The Mysoreans drove him back all the way to Kolar.

1769. At Kolar, for many months, English did nothing; meanwhile Haidar ravaged the Carnatic, Trichinopoly, Madura, and Tinnevely; by the end of 1769, Haidar had regained all his territory and reinforced his army. Colonel Smith marched into Mysore against him, but Haidar eluded him by flanking march, appearing suddenly before Madras. Panic among the "office-boys."

1769. They made offensive and defensive treaty with Haidar, and Colonel Smith, on their orders, was compelled to let Haidar march unmolested past his camp and back into Mysore.

<sup>1</sup> This is what crowns the work.

1770. Haidar Ali now turned against Marathas, was beaten by Madhu Rao in the west. The latter exacted a crore of rupees as compensation; Haidar refused it; Marathas pushed forward again. Haidar spent night drinking, was entangled in the Western Ghats, complete rout of same (cf. p. 116). Haidar fled to Seringapatam, asked help from the English under the treaty (of 1769); but Sir John Lindsay, sent out by Parliament to control the affairs of Madras, insisted upon treaty with the Marathas and upon leaving Haidar Ali in the lurch. In consequence of "this deliberate breach of faith," Haidar Ali and his son Tipu Sahib swore on the Koran everlasting hatred for the English and to crush them. Haidar bought himself peace from the Marathas by immediate payment of 36 lakhs of rupees, and a cession of territory promising an annual income of 14 lakhs.

. . . . .

V. WARREN HASTINGS' ADMINISTRATION, 1772-1785

- April 13, 1772. Warren Hastings commenced his function as chosen Governor of Bengal; [Parliament] appointed the members of the Council: General Clavering, Colonel Monson, Mr. Barwell, Mr. Francis; [Hastings] transferred central office of the Revenue Administration from Murshidabad to Calcutta; made some alterations quoad courts of justice established by Clive (1765), but did not abolish what for the ryots was a ruinous system of farming the revenues.
1773. The Reconstruction Act passed; thereby Hastings became first Governor-General. At the same time, the Supreme Court of Calcutta was established by 13 George III c. 63, and late 1773 saw arrival of the judges, fellows absolutely ignorant of Hindu customs and regarding themselves as chiefs of the entire government [in India]. In the same year, the infamous Rohilla war: Shuja-ud-daula, Nabob of Oudh, informed Warren Hastings that the Rohillas did not pay him the tribute of 40 lakhs promised at the time of the Marathas' retreat to the Deccan (1773); the English should have this money [he said] if they helped him to reduce the Rohillas. On advice of the [Calcutta] Council, Hastings accepted it and made treaty with the Nabob, under which, if the war were successful, he was to be allowed to buy, for 50 lakhs of rupees, the districts of Kora and Allahabad which cost the Company a great deal without yielding any surplus. The brave chieftain of the Rohillas, Hafiz Rahmat, offered to pay the Nabob of Oudh all the outlays entailed by the Maratha war; but the latter demanded the enormous sum of 200 lakhs, which the Rohillas refused to pay, of course.

April 23, 1774. The united Oudh and British troops entered Rohilkhand, battle, in which the brave Rohillas almost exterminated and Hafiz Rahmat killed; the robbers left Rohilkhand after desolating it in addition.

1774-1775. Disorders at Calcutta; intrigues of a majority of the Council (above all Francis), the judges and the Directorate [of the Company] at London against Hastings.

1775. The Resident installed by Hastings with Nabob of Oudh was replaced with Mr. Bristow (appointed by the Directors). The fellow demanded—that was his first act—payment of all the Nabob's arrears to the company within 14 days. Hastings denounced this act of impolicy. Idem Bristow issued the British troops order to leave Rohilkhand at once; Hastings remonstrated; Bristow showed him his secret instructions from the London Directors; such orders could go only straight via Governor-General; Hastings wrote a solemn protest.

In the same year, Shuja-ud-daula, Nabob of Oudh, died; his son Asaf-ud-daula wrote to Calcutta, [asking] for support of the Company. Francis, through his majority in Council, forced Hastings to send Asaf-ud-daula order saying that all relations with Oudh were at end and Asaf's succession must be based on new treaty with the Company, under which Benares, the most sacred city of India, should absolutely be ceded [to the Company] (see p. 120, note). Nabob had to give in while protesting.

The Begums of Oudh. Nabob's zenana (serail) was searched after his funeral, and rupees to the value of £ 2 million were found; the new Nabob took it as public money, but Bristow resolved that he should restore it to the begums, who claimed it as private inheritance. Thus Nabob unable to pay arrears to his troops; terrible mutiny; said to have cost the lives of 20,000 men!

In the Calcutta Council, Francis (with Clavering and Monson) did all to ridicule and exasperate Hastings, and even appealed to the natives to this end. At home he was abetted by the Directors, who kept ready a list of all his frivolous charges against Hastings. One major charge was a fact unheard-of in India—execution of the Brahmin Nunkomar for forgery (but this was handiwork of the Supreme Court, which in its blockheadedness applied English law, thereby turning into crime punishable by death what under Hindu law is a slight misdemeanour). Francis accused Hastings, saying he had wanted to get Nunkomar out of his way because the latter had charged him with embezzlement; later discovered that Nunkomar's charge a fabrication, the letter upon which the evidence depended being a forgery!

1776. In private letter to his London agent, Hastings mentioned his intention to resign; the agent let it out; but through Colonel Monson's death Hastings received casting vote in Council, wrote therefore to the London agent that he would stay; Directors, however, declared that he had resigned.
1777. Supported by this arbitrary act of the Directors, General Clavering sought as senior member of the Council to seize the insignia of power. Hastings treated him as usurper, shut the gates of Fort William against him, Supreme Court took action in Hastings' favour, Clavering pegged out with rage. In order not to hinder Barwell's intended resignation, Francis promised Hastings not to exploit the majority in the Council won in this manner; as soon as Barwell was gone, he did the opposite; Hastings accused him of deceit; duel between the two, in which Francis was wounded; the latter returned soon after to England, and Hastings had peace for a while; but earlier—
- 1772-1775—Maratha affairs; 1772, Madhu Rao, the Peshwa, died. Succeeded by his brother Narayan Rao, at once murdered by Raghoba.

1773. Raghoba seized the throne; made war on the Nizam, who bought peace for 20 lakhs of rupces. Two statesmen, Nana Pharnavis and Sakkaram Bapu, set on throne an infant taken from the zenana and reputed posthumous child of Madhu Rao—under title of Madhu Rao II; the two fellows seized helm of state as regents.

1774. Raghoba utterly routed the two regents; but instead of marching to Poona, he went to Burhanpur and from there to Gujarat to ask co-operation of his countryman, the Gaekwar.

The house of the Gaekwar of Gujarat: forefather—Pilaji Gaekwar (under allegiance to the Peshwa)—d. 1732. Succeeded by Damaji Gaekwar, his son; extended his territory; made himself independent of Peshwa; d. 1768; three sons left after his death: Govind Rao, Sayaji, and Fateh Singh. Govind Rao and Fateh Singh disputed the throne; Raghoba sided with Fateh Singh, was supported in this by the great Maratha chieftains, Holkar and Sindhia.

1775. Nana Pharnavis through intrigues detached Holkar and Sindhia from that alliance; they withdrew. Raghoba now sent overtures to the English in Bombay; the Government of Bombay on its own hook made with Raghoba—

March 6, 1775—Treaty of Surat. By its terms: (1) the English to assist Raghoba to regain the Peshwa's throne; (2) Raghoba to cede Salsette (island) and Bassein (excellent port near Bombay) for trade purposes to the English, to pay annually 37 lakhs to the Bombay Government.—The treaty unconstitutional: the Regulating Act of 1773 provided that “the subordinate presidencies” (those of Bombay and Fort St. George, i.e., Madras), in the particular “cases of concluding treaties and applying revenues, levying and employing forces, and, in general, in all matters of civil and military administration, are placed under the superintendence of the Governor-General of Bengal.” Bombay Government could thus not make treaty without [the authorization of] Hastings and the Calcutta Council; Raghoba's subsidy, too, to be made payable, not to Bombay Government as was the case, but to Company as a whole. On these grounds, Francis forced Hastings to annul the treaty, thus involving the English in great troubles.

1775. First Maratha War. Colonel Keating, at head of British troops of Bombay, was ordered to effect junction with Raghoba; he was attacked by the regents' army on the River Mhye; had complete victory at Arras near Baroda; the Maratha army fled to the Narbada; Fateh Singh, marching out of Gujarat, effected junction with Keating. Success complete. —But, to spite Hastings, the Treaty of Surat [was] declared null and void by majority of the Council, and circular issued to native princes (!) against Bombay Government! The Regency at Poona then demanded restitution of Salsette and Bassein. Colonel Upton, acting on behalf of the Company, refused, [saying that] Raghoba was lawful Peshwa. Upton, on behalf of the Bombay Government, declared war on the Marathas. Thereupon the regents offered treaty, and idem Upton, who had just proclaimed Raghoba to be the lawful Peshwa, concluded with Nana Pharnavis and Sakkaram Bapu as representatives of the Maratha State—

March 1, 1776—the treaty at Purandhar (near Poona):—British army to quit the field on condition of keeping Salsette and giving up all other territory formerly owned by the Marathas; British to receive 12 lakhs a year and to have the revenues of [the district of] Bharoch as long as they recognized Madhu Rao II as Peshwa. Raghoba was dropped, should receive 3 lakhs a year from the Marathas if he stayed beyond the Godavari. Bombay Government, however, insisted on Surat Treaty, broke treaty of Purandhar, offered Raghoba refuge in Surat, marched army to Bharoch. Regency proclaimed war; the British paraded Raghoba at Bombay. Shortly afterwards, Bombay Government received message from the Court of Directors at home, rejecting Treaty of Purandhar and recognizing that of Surat.

1778. Maroba Pharnavis—cousin of the Regent Nana Pharnavis—by agreement with Sakkaram Bapu (who, however, intrigued secretly in Raghoba's favour) formed a party at court with Holkar. This party appealed to Bombay Government; the latter granted its requests and wrote to Calcutta. Hastings approved because Nana Pharnavis was pro-French, and because the Company recognized Raghoba's title under Treaty of Surat. —Nana Pharnavis retired to Purandhar, bribed Holkar to leave the alliance, gathered army on behalf of Madhu Rao, defeated Maroba and Sakkaram, killed the first, and imprisoned the second at Poona, whither he marched after victory. Bombay Government [declared] war on him, after previous treaty with Raghoba.

1779. Second Maratha Campaign. Colonel Egerton was sent to attack Poona, but was hampered by civilians (whose chief was General Carnac). Before Poona, the civil commissioners grew funky and, contrary to Raghoba and Colonel Egerton, ordered them to retreat; the Regent's cavalry attacked them at once; brave Captain Hartley fought in rear-guard and the civilians "took to their heels" in front. At night, their army encamped at Vargaon, their camp was shelled, panic-stricken commissioners implored Sindhia, leading the enemy troops, to spare their lives! and to save them, hence to let them retire!

January 1779. Convention of Vargaon; the army of Bombay allowed to withdraw, extraditing Raghoba (anticipating this cowardice of the commissioners, he surrendered to Sindhia of his own free will) and giving up every acquisition made during the last five years. Supreme Government enraged by the news; proposed new treaty. Meanwhile Raghoba decamped to Surat, where Colonel Goddard the chief in command. Nana Pharnavis demanded Raghoba's extradition, Goddard refused, new war.

1779. Third Campaign. Goddard [went] to Gujarat, was joined there by Fateh Singh and Raghoba, [they] captured Ahmadabad; there they were opposed by the Marathas under Holkar and Sindhia, who were beaten and, during the rains, pitched cantonments on the Narbada.

1780. Hastings ordered a small force to be formed under Major Popham for demonstration against Sindhia's possessions near Agra. Popham took Gwalior, fortress on an almost perpendicular rock of great height. Then Popham's little corps was reinforced and, under command of General Carnac, made successful night attack on the Maratha camp; Sindhia fled, leaving all his stores behind him.

Late 1780. Grand Confederacy between Marathas and Mysoreans to oust the English from India. Holkar, Sindhia, and Peshwa (i.e., in fact, Nana Pharnavis) were to attack Bombay, Haidar Ali to march on Madras, and Madhoji Bhonslay, Raja of Nagpur (Berar), to attack Calcutta. The outcome was (see pp. 128, 129)—

May 17, 1782—Treaty of Salbai (in Gwalior): The English to restore all territory acquired since Treaty of Purandhar (1776), Raghoba to renounce all hostilities, receive 3 lakhs of rupees a year, and choose his own place of residence. Haidar Ali to release all English prisoners within six months and relinquish all his conquests; if not, to be attacked by the Marathas.

Haidar Ali. In 1770, he had bought off the Marathas; stayed at rest. In 1772, after murder of Narayan Rao by Raghoba and the subsequent disorders, he subjugated Kurg with unnecessary cruelty; by 1774 he had reconquered all the districts wrested from him by the Marathas. In 1775, he took Bellary from Basalat Jang (the Nizam's brother) and in 1776 destroyed Savanur (near Dharvas, Bombay Presidency), raj of Morari Rao, the Maratha chieftain. Futile attempt by Poona Regency to crush him.

1778. Kingdom of Mysore was extended to the Kistna River.

1779. War declared between England and France; Haidar declared for France. English conquered Pondicherry and Mahé from the French.

1780. Haidar Ali joined the Grand Confederacy, prepared attack on Madras.

1780. Second Mysore War. On July 20, Haidar marched through Chengama Pass into the Carnatic, devastated it, committed atrocities; smoke of the blazing villages seen from Madras.—English army only 8,000 men, in three divisions, separated at considerable distances. Colonel Baillie, in attempting at Guntur to effect junction with Sir Hector Munro, Commander-in-Chief, was attacked on the way by Tipu Sahib with large troop of Maratha cavalry; Baillie beat him back with difficulty and continued his march, but Haidar, interposed between him and Munro—

September 6, 1780—surrounding Baillie's force, annihilated them almost to a man near little village of Pollilore.—Late in 1780, Haidar captured Arcot.

January 1781. Sir Eyre Coote, with reinforcements, arrived by sea from Calcutta; attacked Haidar at Porto Novo, near Cuddalore, with signal victory.

July 1781. Bengal contingent under Colonel Pearse, assisted by the Raja of Nagpur on its march through Orissa, arrived at Pulicat, effected junction with Coote, and together they gave Haidar indecisive battle near little village of Pollilore (near Pulicat).

September 27, decisive victory of Coote near Solingur (in North Arcot, Madras Presidency); later, during the rains, he went into cantonments near Madras.

Late 1781. Lord Macartney, President in Madras (in lieu of Sir Thomas Rumbold). His first act, storming and razing of the Dutch fortress of Negapatam and destruction of the Dutch factories there; this on secret orders from Court of Directors, jealous of increasing Dutch trade in the South. Also, slight success of the English at Tellicherry. Haidar Ali gave up attempts on Carnatic in order to attack the Malabar coast.

1782. French fleet, met, not far from Porto Novo, an English fleet returning after reduction of the Dutch harbour of Trinkomali in Ceylon; the naval action indecisive; French landed with small force at Pondicherry, and joined Haidar Ali.

July 1782. Two indecisive naval engagements not far from Negapatam.—A French force landed at Point de Galle (Ceylon), marched to Trinkomali, retook the town, and destroyed the [English] garrison there. Admiral Hughes' attempt against French fleet off Ceylon futile; Hughes [took fleet] to Bombay, leaving the French masters of the seas.

Towards end of 1782, Tipu Sahib attacked the English entrenched camp at Palghat (near Coimbatore); he failed in his first attempt at storming, and blockaded the camp till December 7, when he got word of sudden death of Haidar Ali, and marched with all his troops to Mysore.

December 6, 1782. Death of Haidar Ali, 80 years old. His Minister, the celebrated financier Purnaiya, kept his death secret till Tipu arrived.

. . . . .
December 1782. Accession of Tipu Sahib; [he] found splendid army of 100,000 men, and immense treasure in money and jewels.

March 1, 1783. Tipu, who had first quietly consolidated his powers, went off to western coast to operate against Mangalore.

Early June 1783. Bussy, now in command of all the French forces east of the Cape of Good Hope, landed at Cuddalore with a French contingent, found Tipu gone to western coast and Haidar Ali dead; he was at once attacked by General Stuart (successor of Sir Eyre Coote);

June 7, 1783, an outpost of Cuddalore taken by English with heavy loss.—Same day, not far from Cuddalore, naval engagement, in which Admiral Hughes was worsted and put back to Madras to refit, while the French victor, Suffrein, landed 2,400 marines and sailors to form a brigade attached to Bussy's army.

June 18, dashing sortie of the French (with Sergeant Bernadotte, later King of Sweden, present) repulsed; then came news of peace between England and France, whereupon General Stuart returned to Madras; Bussy strengthened his position. Meanwhile Bombay Governmēt had sent expedition, which captured Bednore and many other places on Malabar coast. Tipu marched down, retook Bednore, threw the garrison into prison, and then besieged Mangalore (1,800 men) with 100,000 men and 100 guns; it had to capitulate after nine months' resistance.—Simultaneously Colonel Fullarton led expedition from Madras to Mysore, took Coimbatore, and was marching on Seringapatam when he was recalled by Lord Macartney, who doltishly (see p. 133) began peace negotiations.—The first overtures based on mutual cessation of hostilities; Macartney recalled the English troops, Tipu continued to ravage the country round; [he] man-handled the commissioners and forbade them to retire until they signed Treaty of Mangalore at his dictation, on the basis of mutual restitution of conquests.

1770-1775. Mr. Wynch, President of Madras. Sordid Tanjore business<sup>1</sup> (p. 134).

1775-1777. Lord Pigot, President of Madras. This "aged" chap took the liberty (under order of the Directors) of not only reinstating the Raja of Tanjore in the raj stolen from him by Mchammed Ali, "the Company's Nabob" (of the Carnatic) in 1776, but also intervening in the corruption and peculation in the various branches of public service; then there was, in particular, his investigation against a certain Paul Bensfield because of a fraudulent claim of that "dog" to a part of the revenues of Tanjore. The Council, always opposed to the President, insulted him violently, he suspended two members of the body, the majority shut up. Pigot in gaol, kept him in close confinement till he died. This—the murder of the President!—went unpunished!

1777-1780. Sir Thomas Rumbold, President of Madras. The intrigues against him (pp. 135-138), he was succeeded by Lord Macartney, who arrived in late 1781.

1783-1785. End of Warren Hastings' Administration. Hastings, persecuted on all sides, made violent displays of temper. The Supreme Court obnoxious, considered itself supreme over all the departments of the Administration, posed as " censor " of the acts of the Government. The Government had passed regulations to treat the zemindars as mere collectors of revenues, liable to arrest and punishment in case of default; the English judges followed this rule with great impetuosity, often seized powerful, so-called zemindari rajas, threw them into prison, and treated them like common felons for some slight defalcation. Thus the zemindars' credit was impaired, ryots often refused to pay them their rents; hence still more arbitrary persecutions and exactions by the zemindars towards the ryots!

<sup>1</sup> Under the Wynch Administration, Tanjore was captured and sacked — nominally by the Nabob of the Carnatic with help from Company troops, but in reality by the Company and British usurers. The greatest part of the booty fell into the hands of the Nabob's private "creditors," which was deeply resented by the Company's Court of Directors in London.

Under charter of George I (1726) and that of George III (1773), appointing the Supreme Court, all the common law of England was now in force in India; the English blockheads adhered rigorously to it, and so the natives (cf. p. 139) were hanged for what under their law was nothing!

The Cossijurah case arose from the English system of demanding bail from accused persons pending their trial; in this case, in a revenue cause brought in the Supreme Court against the Raja (i. e., Zemindar) Cossijurah (pp. 139, 140) (the bailiffs in this case penetrated into the sanctuary of the zenana and actually carried off the family idol as security for his appearance). As Hastings protected Cossijurah, and issued an order that the natives were not to consider themselves amenable to the Supreme Court in civil matters unless they bound themselves of their own free will to abide by its jurisdiction, the Supreme Court took the liberty of summoning the Council and Governor-General for "contempt of Court." Hastings did not care a straw.

New remodelling of the Revenue Administration and "Warren Hastings' Code" (p. 140). (Among other things, he separated revenue from civil administration, calling the former "provisional" and the latter, "district courts, and placed above both, as court of appeal, the "Sadr Divan-i-Adalat,"<sup>1</sup> in which he appointed Sir Elijah Impey Chief Justice.

1784. Case of Chait Singh, whom Hastings had made Raja of Benares (140, 141).

Case of Faizullah Khan. A treaty was made with Asaf-ud-daula, Nabob of Oudh, under which he was to subsidize British force in Oudh; [the force was] reduced and some rights mutually fixed; the 3d article of the treaty referred to Faizullah Khan, nephew of Hafiz Rahmat (the Rohilla); he was bound by treaty to muster contingent of 3,000 men when he became chieftain of the Rohillas in order to swell the ranks of the Company's army;

<sup>1</sup> Supreme Civil Court of Appeal.

Hastings had lately demanded 5,000, which Faizullah Khan declared he could not provide. In his treaty with Oudh, Article 3, Hastings claimed that Rohilkhand, being mere jagir of Faizullah's "feudal lord," the Nabob of Oudh, should be taken [by the latter]; he [Faizullah Khan] regained it later by paying 15 lakhs of rupees; thereupon Hastings returned to Calcutta.

1785. [Hastings went back] to England, having resigned his post at Calcutta. His mishaps in England; Pitt his enemy; hence the declamations of Burke (Pitt's man) (cf. pp. 142, 143). Hastings d. 1818 (86 years old). (One great crime of Hastings', besides his annexation policy which Pitt disliked, was the fact that he had raised the salaries of the Company's servants in India to put an end to the extortions of these "rabble", who looked for fortunes, not in their pay, but in the rupees extorted from the Hindus.)

. . . . .

[The Affairs of the East India Company in Britain]

March 1780. The exclusive privileges of the East India Co., subject to prolongation every three years, expired; they were prolonged by Act of Parliament till 1783; the Company had to pay £400,000 to the public funds in part payment of arrears due to the nation for loans from Government.—A secret (parliamentary) committee was set up to inquire into the war with Haidar Ali; a second, to examine the petitions sent in by the native Bengalese against violent acts of the Supreme Council of Calcutta.

April 9, 1782. Mr. Henry Dundas, member of the Board of the East India Directors (the dirty fellow who later, in 1806, was as Earl of Melville prosecuted in Parliament on a charge of corruption, first a man of North and Fox, then of Pitt), violently denounced the conduct of affairs in India; in May 1782, he moved for recall of Warren Hastings, which was passed by Parliament, but Court of Proprietors in a general meeting refused to permit the Directors to send out the order for recall.

1782. Lord North's Ministry had fallen; succeeded by that of Shelbourne; overthrown by coalition of Fox and North in April 1783.

1783. (Coalition ministry of North and Fox.) Fox's "India Bill" brought forward. The Company handed in petition for another loan (the first granted by Parliament in 1772); this second profession of poverty stirred up great noise in the country. In his bill, Fox proposed the following: The Company's charter to be suspended for four years; in the meantime the government of India to be carried on by seven commissioners, parliamentary nominees; all matters of trade to be managed by nine assistant commissioners, nominated by the Court of Proprietors; the zemindars to be recognized as hereditary landowners; in all matters of war and treaties, the Government of India to be subordinate to a Board of Control in England. (The latter [stipulation] was later embodied in Pitt's bill. Lord Wellesley did not give a damn for it during his Indian administration.) Fox's bill passed the Lower House; George III ordered the Peers to throw out the bill, whereupon—

January 1784—George III dismissed Fox and Co.; Pitt became head of the new ministry; he was friendly to the Company and in many ways benefited their trade.

August 13, 1784. Pitt's "India Bill", a body of six members of the Privy Council appointed to act as a Board of Commissioners for the control of revenue matters and a Committee of Secrecy of three Directors to receive and issue the orders of this Board. The Court of Proprietors to have no power of government. All war matters and treaties to be conducted and concluded under the orders of the Board of Commissioners. Annexation policy to be repudiated. Every officer under the Government of India to deliver a schedule of his property on his return to England, with a notice of the manner in which it was acquired. The bill passed by great majority in 1784; henceforth the President of the Board of Commissioners was the real despotic Governor of India. Scamp Dundas (Melville) was first to hold this office.

First case brought before the scamp Dundas: the debts of the Nabob of Arcot (alias Mohammed Ali, of the Car-natic). This Mohammed Ali, a libertine and reveller and debauchee of the worst kind, borrowed large sums from private individuals, whom he repaid by assigning to them the revenues of considerable tracts of land. The lenders (alias English swindler usurers) found this "very advantageous"; it established the "vermin" at once in the position of large landowners and enabled them to amass immense fortunes by oppressing the ryots; hence tyranny—the most unscrupulous, too—towards the native peasants of these upstart European (i. e., English) zemindars! Entire Carnatic ruined by them and the Nabob.

1785. Louse Dundas (and the Board of Commissioners headed by him) took the matter in hand and settled it to the best interest of the blood-sucking English scoundrels. On the pretext of releasing the country (Carnatic) from the money-lenders' clutches, they proposed appropriating £480,000 to the payment of the Nabob's debts, so that the private usurers who had ruined the Nabob should be paid off before the East India Co., who had done him great services. It was pointed out to the miserable Dundas in the House of Commons that the plan would bring immense sums to the Benfields and others who had formed a perfectly unscrupulous crew, and had fraudulently plundered the Carnatic of its lawful revenues. The wretched Pitt Ministry triumphantly passed the bill—even then!—through the House, and Paul Benfield alone thereby received £600,000 out of the revenues of the Carnatic! (This was the handiwork of the very same Dundas-Melville who later ended in the filthy business of 1806!<sup>1</sup>) Dundas, the corruption man, divided the debts into three classes, the largest being the consolidated loan of 1777. The plan submitted by Warren Hastings would have paid this off for  $1\frac{1}{2}$  million, while Dundas's scheme occasioned a payment of 5 millions! And 20 years later (in 1805), when the last of the old debts had been paid off, it transpired, as was to be expected, that Mohammed Ali meanwhile had contracted a new debt amounting to 30 millions! Then came a new inquiry which lasted 50 years, and cost £1 million before the affairs of the Nabob were finally settled. That was how the British Government—for it was they and not the Company who had held sway [in India] since Pitt's bill—treated the poor Indian people!

<sup>1</sup> In 1806, Dundas (Melville) was tried in the House of Lords on a charge of embezzling large government sums appropriated to the Navy when he was First Lord of the Admiralty (1804-1805).

[VI.] LORD CORNWALLIS' ADMINISTRATION, 1785-1793

- 1785-1786. After Warren Hastings' retirement, Sir John Macpherson, the senior member of the Council at Calcutta, became Governor-General pro tem.; through financial reform he reduced the government debt by £1 million. Lord Macartney was to have been nominated Governor-General, but was at once shelved because of opposition to Dundas in Parliament.
1786. Cornwallis arrived in Calcutta.—Asaf-ud-daula, Nabob of Oudh, begged for reduction of the expenses imposed on him for maintenance of a British contingent in his territories; Cornwallis reduced them from 74 lakhs to 50 against the advice of the Resident, who said that Asaf would spend the surplus on dancing girls and hunting expeditions.—Nana Pharnavis made alliance with Nizam and prepared openly for war against Tipu, who appeased him by paying 45 lakhs.
1788. British troops annexed the Guntur Circars. The fact is that, under Treaty of 1768, Nizam had promised the Guntur Circars to the Company on death of the Governor of that province, Basalat Jang, who died in 1782.—Nizam now demanded that the English should fulfil the other part of the treaty as well, that is, conquer the Carnatic Balaghat from Haidar Ali's family, so that he could pay chauth to the Marathas out of its revenues! But none other than the English had in two successive treaties recognized Haidar and Tipu as sovereigns of the Carnatic Balaghat! Cornwallis—
- 1788—promised the Nizam aid of British troops against any Power not in alliance with England, and transfer of the Carnatic Balaghat as soon as it became English! Tipu Sultan's fury at "this double-dealing" by Cornwallis!

The Raja of Travancore, ally of the East India Co., had bought two towns from the Dutch at Cochin and fortified them; the Chief of Cochin, vassal of Tipu, declared on the latter's order that the two towns belonged to him. The Raja appealed to the English, and the Chief of Cochin, to Tipu; the latter attacked the lines of Travancore, but was defeated by the Raja.—Declaration of war between Tipu and the English.

1790. Cornwallis' "Tripartite Treaty," namely, offensive and defensive alliance with Nana Pharnavis and the Nizam.

1790-1792. Third Mysore War (in 1791, Cornwallis himself was in command). After the outwalls of Seringapatam had been stormed (February 1792), Tipu submitted; he had to cede half his territory, to pay the allies £ 3 million for war expenses, put two of his sons under British protection as hostages, and pay 30 lakhs of rupees to the Marathas. The Company took for themselves Dindigul and Baramahal with country round and some land about Bombay; of the remainder of Tipu's territory, Peshwa received one-third (including the Carnatic Balaghat) and the Nizam, another third. Charge in the House of Commons against Cornwallis over his annexation policy fell through; moreover, he was created Marquis.

September 1793. Pondicherry, last and most important possession of the French, taken by Colonel Brathwaite. . . . Cornwallis returned to England.—His judicial reforms (pp. 156-158).

1784-1794. Career of Sindhia. He acquired great power in southern India through the Treaty of Salbai (in Gwalior) of 1782 (see p. 93).<sup>1</sup>

1784. Sindhia went to Delhi, made the puppet Emperor, Shah Alam (the once gallant Shah Zada, son of Alamgir II), give him the title of "Executor-General of the Empire" and chief command of the royal forces, and to present him with the provinces of Agra and Delhi.—[He] attacked the Rajputs, was terribly defeated; his "royal" forces deserted en masse to the enemy.

<sup>1</sup> P. 86 of this edition.

1787. Sindhia attacked by Ismail Beg (nephew of Mohammed Beg, the former Executor-General); Ismail took Agra, was reinforced with strong band of Rohillas under Ghulam Kadir (son of Zabita Khan). Sindhia marched from Delhi; attacked the allies, was defeated; the Rohillas marched north; Sindhia beat Ismail Beg's little army. But meanwhile the Rohillas—wild marauders—had taken and sacked Delhi, raged and plundered for two months, and finally blinded Alam Shah, taken prisoner by them; Ismail Beg now allied himself with Sindhia.
1788. These two allies jointly took Delhi; Alam Shah was restored to throne, Ghulam Kadir tortured to death, Ismail Beg put off with valuable jagir. Sindhia—virtual ruler in Delhi—formed splendid sepoy army under French, English, and some Irish officers, established large foundries, cast innumerable guns, etc., etc.
1791. Successful campaign by Sindhia against the Rajputs.—
- 1792—In order to transfer the Mogul Empire to Marathas—he made Shah Alam transfer the title of Hereditary Deputies to himself and his heirs and the title of Wakil-ul-Mutlak (Regent of the Empire), to the Peshwa; he himself went to Poona, invested with this dignity the Peshwa, who in his own state made him equal in dignity to his Vizier, Nana Pharnavis. From then on, intrigues between this “deepest politician of the age” and Sindhia and his descendants were the point round which the subsequent history of the Marathas turned.
1793. Holkar, second in power of the Maratha nobility, defeated by Sindhia in war; the latter now became absolute master of Hindustan.
1794. Mahdaji Sindhia died suddenly; succeeded in all his titles and offices by his grand-nephew, Daulat Rao Sindhia.
- . . . . .
- 1786-1793. Parliamentary Proceedings: 1786, bill passed, empowering the Governor-General to legislate personally without consulting his Council; Wellesley, who later became Governor-General, found that "comme il faut"; act passed in order to spare [the Governor-General] the hamperings which had harassed Warren Hastings.

1788. Declaratory Act, prompted by collision between the Board of Directors of the Company and the Board of Commissioners representing the Crown; Ministry ordered enrolment of four new regiments for special service in India, Company refused to pay for their embarkation and maintenance. Board of Commissioners ordered the Company to provide the fund, Directors declared they held chief governing power in matters of finance. As early as 1784, Pitt had stated (and now did so again) that the intention of the Cabinet was at some future date to transfer the whole of the governing power in India to the hands of the nation. Turbulent debates in the House. The Declaratory Act enforced only the Act of 1784, and gave the Board of Commissioners power to direct the conduct of the Company in all matters of state. In 1793, privileges of the Company were extended for 20 years by a new charter.
- . . . . .

[Confiscation of Ryot Lands in Favour of the Zemindars, 1793]<sup>1</sup>

Bengal's land was recognized as private property of the zemindars during the first—

- 1793—cadastral survey ordered by the Governor-General of Bengal, Lord Cornwallis (his administration, 1786-1793). (In 1765, the English found the zemindars—"collectors of public revenue"—claiming the position of zemindari rajas, which power they had gradually assumed during the decay of the Mogul Empire.) (The hereditary nature of their tenures was due to the fact that the Great Moguls did not care for the mode of

<sup>1</sup> The passage which appears under this subheading—from here to the dotted line on p. 101—is from the same note-book of Marx's (pp. 68 and 70), the section entitled "(E) British Domination and Its Influence on Indian Public Property."

- tenure, so long as the annual tax was handed in; the latter was a certain fixed sum, considered as the annual produce of the district above its own exigencies. All that the zemindar made over and above this belonged to himself, therefore he fleeced the ryots.) Their [the zemindars'] claim to be considered rajās was due to the wealth of land and money they had amassed by looting, their maintenance of troops, and assumption of state. The English Government ([from], 1765) treated them as mere subordinate tax-collectors, placed them under legal responsibility, and made them liable to be thrown into prison or deposed from office on the slightest failure of regular payment. On the other hand, the condition of the ryots was not raised; indeed, they were humbled and oppressed still more, and the whole revenue system was thrown out of order.
1786. The Directors, as a matter of policy, ordered a new engagement to be entered into with the zemindars under distinct understanding that whatever benefits they were granted, they had them, not by right, but only through favour of the Governor in Council; Commission appointed to inquire into, and report on, the condition of the zemindars; ryots refused to testify, fearing the vengeance of the zemindars; the latter evaded all inquiries, and the work of the commissioners was at a deadlock.
1793. Lord Cornwallis gave up the Commission and suddenly, without warning, passed a motion in the Council, which at once assumed the force of law, that the zemindars were to be henceforth considered as possessing all [the territory] they claimed . . . as hereditary owners of all the soil of the district, paying annually, not their quota of public taxes which they collected for the Government, but a sort of tribute into the Treasury! Mr. Shore, subsequently Sir John Shore, the scamp Cornwallis' successor in office, spoke strenuously in Council against the wholesale destruction of Indian tradition; and when he saw that the majority of the Council was determined (just to get rid of the burden of constant legislation and of perpetual disputes concerning the status of the Hindus) to proclaim the ze- mindars owners of the land, he proposed decennial settlements, but Council declared for permanency. The Board of Commissioners applauded their resolution and—1793—under the Premiership of Pitt passed the Bill for the “permanent establishment of the zemindars of India as hereditary landowners.” This decision was promulgated at Calcutta in March 1793 to the utter delight of the amazed zemindars! The measure was as illegal as it was sudden and unexpected, for the English were supposed to be legislating for the Hindus as a race and, as far as possible, administering to them their own laws. Simultaneously the English Government passed several laws giving the ryots remedies in the civil court against the zemindars, and protecting them from increase of rent. Those were nugatory, dead-letter [laws], considering the state of the country; for the ryots were so absolutely at the mercy of their landlords that they seldom dared to raise a finger in self-defence.—One of the measures mentioned above was a regulation fixing the rents of the lands for ever. It enacted that a written pottah, being a document containing the conditions of tenure and the amount of the sum to be paid annually as rent, should be given to the ryot. This regulation allowed the zemindar to increase the value of the estate by the cultivation of fresh lands and to increase the rental on fields cultivated with the higher-priced kinds of grain.

1793. Thus Cornwallis and Pitt artificially expropriated the rural population of Bengal (p. 161).

1784. The British legislature decisively interfered to regulate “the affairs of the East India Co.” and of the British “possessions in India.” To this end, Act of the 24th George III. c. 25 was passed, which became the groundwork of the Constitution of British India. The Act established the Board of Commissioners for the Affairs of India, commonly called the Board of Control, to superintend and control the East India Co. in the exercise of the political part of their functions. Under Section 29 of the Act, the Company were required to investigate the truth of certain complaints, which had prevailed, of oppressions inflicted on divers rajas, zemindars, poligars, and other landholders in British India, and to establish, "upon principles of moderation and justice, according to the laws and Constitution of India," permanent rules for the future collection of the territorial revenue.

1786. Marquis Cornwallis [came] to India as Governor-General; this fellow at once effected, conformably to the instruction of the Court of Directors and Board of Control (brought by him from England)—
- 1787—reunion of the functions of civil justice and criminal police with those of financial management in the person of the collector, by making him both the magistrate and the judge of the provincial civil court (Mufassal Divan-i-Adalat), but the proper court of the collector as judge of revenue cases—remained separated from the Divani<sup>1</sup> Court, over which he presided; appeal from the latter court went to the Sadr Divan-i-Adalat, and from his [the collector's] revenue court, only to the Board of Revenue sitting at Calcutta.
1793. According to Cornwallis' permanent settlement for the three provinces of Bengal, Bihar, and Orissa, where the amount of territorial revenues to be yielded by the three provinces was settled in perpetuity on an average of the past collections, a default of payment was to be supplied by a proportionate sale of land, while the zemindar "could recover his own dues from the renter only by means of a legal process." The landholders complained that they were thus thrown on the mercy of the inferior renters, since the Government annually demanded from them, on pain of a privation of their land, what they could recover from their renters only by a tardy process of law. New rules were therefore established under which, in certain specified cases and with forms very carefully prescribed, a power was granted to the zemindar of enforcing payment on his tenants by arrest, while the collector, in similar way, was invested with the same authority over the zemindar. This [was done] in 1812.<sup>1</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> Civil.

Results of the "settlement": First product of this plunder of "communal and private property" of the ryots: whole series of local risings of the ryots against the "landlords" [conferred on them], involving: in some cases, expulsion of the zemindars and stepping of the East India Co. into their place as owner; in other cases, impoverishment of the zemindars and compulsory or voluntary sale of their estates to pay tax arrears and private debts. Hence greater part of the province's land holdings fell rapidly into the hands of a few city capitalists who had spare capital and readily invested it in land.<sup>2</sup>

VII. SIR JOHN SHORE'S ADMINISTRATION, 1793-1798

(He succeeded per interim at Cornwallis' retirement as senior member of the Council, and the Board of Commissioners confirmed him as Governor-General for five years.)

1793. At the instance of the Governor-General, the signers of the Tripartite Treaty of 1790 (against Tipu Sahib) were to sign a Guarantee Treaty as well, with the codicil that if one of the three Powers went to war against Tipu Sultan for an illegal object, the others should not be bound by the treaty. Nana Pharnavis refused to sign, Nizam accepted.
1794. The Peshwa, and the Marathas generally, made war of plunder against the Nizam; on the strength of Tripartite Treaty, he turned to Sir John Shore [for help], which the latter, afraid of the immense Maratha army, refused. The Nizam then enlisted the good offices of the French, who sent him two battalions in aid; besides,

<sup>1</sup> Cf. Harrington, Elementary Analysis of the Bengal Laws and Regulations; Colebrooke, Supplement to the Digest of Bengal Laws and Regulations.—Author's note.

<sup>2</sup> This paragraph has been taken from Marx's abstract of Kovalevsky's book. The abstract immediately follows Marx's chronological notes.

[he] raised body of 18,000 sepoys, officered by French adventurers.

November 1794. Under Peshwa, the young Madhu Rao II, the Marathas, with 150 guns and 130,000 men, marched into Central India. (Daulat Rao Sidhia contributed to that army 25,000 men under General De Boigne; the Raja of Berar, 15,000; Holkar, 10,000; the Pindaris, 10,000; Govind Rao, the Gaekwar, 5,000; the Peshwa, 65,000.) Armies met at Harda.

November 1794. Nizam Ali sustained great defeat, gave way, committed himself to pay at once £3 million; to deliver over lands to the value of £35,000 per annum, and to surrender his ablest minister as hostage in the Marathas' hands.—Rightly enraged by the "wanton neutrality" of the English, Nizam disbanded all British troops in his pay, recruited [a few] more French battalions, made Raymond their chief, assigned the French, by way of payment for a French contingent to be kept at Hyderabad, the lucrative province of Kurpa. Shore interfered because of the piece of land on the borders of the Company's territory. After some incidents the matter was left at that.

October 1795. Suicide of Madhu Rao II; he was succeeded by his cousin, clever and unscrupulous Baji Rao (son of Raghoba).—Intrigues between Baji Rao, Nana Pharnavis, and Sindhia (Daulat Rao) (cf. pp. 164-168) ended—

December 4, 1796—in Baji Rao, for some time displaced by his brother Chimnaji, being reinstated at Poona with help from the Nizam, Pharnavis, etc.; he now dismissed Nana Pharnavis and threw him into deepest dungeon of his palace; now he had to get rid of Sindhia; he publicly refused him the promised jagir, stirred up, through Sarji Rao Ghatke (treacherous officer of Sindhia), a gruesome rebellion of Sindhia's troops at Poona (of which Sindhia knew nothing), thus set the people of Poona against Sindhia, and sent him back north.

1796. Mutiny of the Company's (not the royal British) officers in Calcutta; they were paid less than the Company's civil service; they demanded increase of pay, etc. (see p. 168). This was eliminated through

Sir Robert Abercromby's (commander at Cawnpore) intervention. (It was second émeute<sup>1</sup> since the one under Clive in 1766.)

1797. The Mayor's Court at Madras (established by George I in 1726) abolished by Act 36 George III; replaced by Recorder's Court on model of the city of London Quarter Sessions. (Mayor nominal, recorder real judge.) (See p. 169, n. 1.)

1797. Death of Asaf-ud-daula, Nabob of Oudh (after a life of indolence and debauchery). A reputed son of his, Wazir Ali by name, placed on throne by the English. He was later deposed and replaced by the English themselves with Asaf's brother Saadat Ali; the English made treaty with the latter: 10,000 British troops to garrison Oudh; to be maintained [by the Nabob] by annual payment of 76 lakhs of rupees, with the fortress of Allahabad for their headquarters; the Nabob to make no treaties without the permission of the Governor-General.

March 1798. Sir John Shore returned to England, and was made Lord Teignmouth.

. . . . .

[VIII.] LORD WELLESLEY'S ADMINISTRATION,
1798-1805

On his arrival in Calcutta, Tipu Sahib was breathing revenge; Nizam had at Hyderabad army of 14,000 French under Raymond and 36 guns; Sindhia ruled at Delhi, with army of 40,000 sepoys, officered by Frenchmen under De Boigne, with 460 guns. Treasury empty.

1799. Fourth and Last Mysore War. (Tipu Sahib had demanded and obtained French contingent from Mauritius, whereupon Wellesley declared war.) Wellesley secured from Nizam replacement of the French troops at Hyderabad by British. Peshwa, as well as Nizam, fulfilled their treaty obligations; Sindhia and Raja of

<sup>1</sup> Mutiny.

Nagpur refused Wellesley aid and alliance; English Board of Commissioners consented to war against Tipu.

February 5, 1799. Wellesley commenced his march on Mysore with 20,000 English, 100 guns, 20,000 sepoys and native cavalry; Harris, Commander-in-Chief.—In the battle at Malavelli (in Mysore), where Tipu was defeated, Colonel Wellesley (who later became Duke of Wellington) appeared for the first time on Indian soil.

May 3,<sup>1</sup> 1799. Seringapatam taken. Tipu Sahib's corpse (shot through the head, etc.) found near the breach. (Wellesley was created marquis). Wellesley gave up Mysore to child of five years, sprung from the old Hindu Dynasty of Mysore (which Tipu had ousted), with Purnaiya for his minister. (That infant lived till 1868, and was succeeded by his adopted son, four years old.) Treaty made with Purnaiya practically placed Mysore under English supremacy; Mysore had to keep a military force under English discipline and orders; raj to be considered as gift of the English Government; in case of maladministration, or non-payment of the annual subsidy for the military force, the Company was entitled to occupy as much territory as it deemed necessary for payment of the subsidy; [Mysore] to pay the Company an annual £310,000, out of which the Company gave annuity of £96,000 to Tipu's heirs, and out of the £240,000 annuity [paid by Mysore] to Nizam £28,000 was to be paid to the Chief Commander of the Mysore army (for that fellow had surrendered unconditionally) and £92,000, to Peshwa, who declined it. Hence the land was portioned between the Nizam and the Company.—Afterwards there [was] only one serious rebellion in Mysore, that of Dhundia Wagh; it was suppressed a few months later and he himself killed.—Nizam demanded more British troops to be sent to Hyderabad, and ceded for their maintenance what is still known as "ceded districts."

<sup>1</sup> May 4, according to Wilks, Historical Sketches of the South of India in an Attempt to Trace the History of Mysoor, Vol. III, London, 1817.

1799. Annexation of Tanjore (see p. 175), founded 120 years earlier by Venkoji, brother of Shivaji.
Annexation of the Carnatic (pp. 176, 177).—In 1795, spendthrift Mohammed Ali, “the Company’s Nabob,” died; 1799 saw death of his successor and son, the spendthrift Umdat-ul-Umara; his nephew, Azim-ul-Umara, was made Nabob by Wellesley, consented to annexation of Carnatic on promise of annuity of one-fifth of the revenues for his maintenance.
- 1799-1801. Shameless annexation of part of Oudh.
1800. Wellesley ordered the Nabob of Oudh, Saadat Ali, to disband his troops, replace them by English troops or sepoys, commanded by English officers, and to shell out for these British regiments! Meaning was: to transfer the whole military command in Oudh to the Company, and to pay for its own enslavement into the bargain! Saadat wrote in a despatch to Wellesley that he would resign in favour of one of his sons rather than sacrifice the independence of the country in that way! In despatch written in answer, Wellesley told a lie, [saying] that Saadat Ali had realiter<sup>1</sup> abdicated, that the whole royal treasure must now be surrendered and the whole country proclaimed English, and that each subsequent Nabob would possess throne only as gift from the English Governor-General. Thereupon Saadat Ali withdrew the abdication mentioned in his despatch only as an intention. Wellesley sent troops, Nabob was compelled to give in; he disbanded large part of his own troops and replaced them by British.
- November 1800. Wellesley demanded disbandment of the rest of the native troops and, in view of their replacement by new British regiments, increase of the subsidy from 55 to 76 lakhs of rupees. Nabob protested in vain his “inability” to pay so high a tribute! Thereupon he freed himself from the tribute by ceding [to the British] Allahabad, Azamgarh, Gorakhpur, and Southern Doab, with some others, all together being of the annual value of £1,352,347. Commission superintended by Henry

---

<sup>1</sup> In fact.

Wellesley, the Governor-General's brother (afterwards Lord Cowley), settled the country.

1800. Ruler of Kabul was Zaman (son of Timur Shah, son of Ahmad Khan Abdali, who in 1757 took Delhi and in 1761, after the Battle of Panipat, [re-] conquered Kabul<sup>1</sup> and [re-] established a Durani Dynasty there); he had been negotiating with Tipu Sultan, and the Company feared attack on his part; this was main reason why Wellesley annexed Oudh as check against hostile advance. Several times Zaman brought armies to the frontier, appealed as "champion of Islam" to Mohammedans in India, and even received promises from various Hindu rajas. Napoleon was plotting in the East as well; Calcutta's "office-boys" trembled at the combination: France, Persia, and Afghanistan. Hence the embassy to Persia under Captain Malcolm! [It] cost a mint of money; he "bought" everything from "the Shah to the camel-driver"; brought about the following treaty, signed at Teheran: King of Persia to eject every Frenchman from Persia; to discountenance all attacks on India, and oppose them by arms, if necessary; to give all his patronage of foreign commerce to the English.

1802. Wellesley tendered his resignation to Board of Commissioners, but at their insistence stayed [in India] till 1805. The fact is that he had quarrelled with Company because he wanted to extend the private traders' rights to India.

Beginning of the Century. Besides the English, [there was] only one great power [in India], that of the Marathas; these were divided into five principal parties, mostly at loggerheads with each other. (1) Peshwa, nominal supreme chief of the Marathas, was Baji Rao, reigning at Poona; the smaller states, not listed here, were half independent, half owing feudal submission to the Peshwa as their hereditary sovereign; (2) Daulat Rao Sindhia, [representing] strongest of the Maratha families, was at Gwalior and in possession of Delhi, etc.; (3) Jaswant Rao Holkar, at Indore, mortal enemy of Sindhia; (4) Raghoji Bhonslay, Raja of Nagpur, willing to fight anybody for a consideration; (5) Fateh Singh, Gaekwar of Gujarat, who seldom joined in Maratha politics.

<sup>1</sup> Here the book used by Marx contains an error, for the city in question was Kandahar and not Kabul. A number of British authors, such as James Mill, for some reason consider Kabul to have been the capital of Ahmad Shah, whereas he ruled and died in Kandahar.

1800. Nana Pharnavis died in prison.—Sindhia left Poona because of Holkar's plundering of city of Sagar (in Indore, belonging to Sindhia) and, in company with Amir Khan, Rohilla chieftain, devastated Malwa, also belonging to Sindhia.—Sindhia's and Holkar's forces met at Ujjain (in Malwa), Sindhia was defeated; sent for aid to Poona and—

1801—received from there forces under Sarji Rao Ghatke; the allied forces on October 14 defeated Holkar, marched on his capital, Indore, sacked it, Holkar fled to Khandesh, devastated the surrounding country; advanced to Chandor, and thence announced to the Peshwa that he was coming with all his forces, claiming his protection against Sindhia.

1802. Baji Rao, who had atrociously murdered the young robber chieftain Vittaji, Holkar's brother, whom he had captured shortly before, saw this message merely as a screen to an open declaration of war. Offer of the Company's arms against Holkar by Colonel Close, the British Resident at Poona, was obstinately refused by the Peshwa; Sindhia moved up quickly, and encamped near Poona.

October 25, 1802, great battle. Holkar won; the Peshwa fled to Singar, about 50 miles from Ahmadnagar, thence to Bassein (belonging to the Company). During his two months' sojourn at Poona, Holkar set Amrit Rao, the Peshwa's brother, on the throne, while Sindhia [went] north.

1802. Treaty of Bassein between Baji Rao and Colonel Close: Peshwa to maintain 6,000 British infantry with guns; for their support to assign to the Company certain districts in the Deccan, yielding annual revenue of 25 lakhs<sup>1</sup> of rupees; to keep no non-British Europeans

<sup>1</sup> 26 lakhs, according to Smith, The Oxford History of India, 1923.

in his service; to refer all his claims against the Nizam and the Gaekwar to Governor-General as arbitrator; to make no political changes without his concurrence; both parties to consider themselves as mutually bound in a defensive alliance.—Indignation of all the Marathas at this "subsidiary treaty," which would unmake their independence, acknowledging the English as a superior power.—Hence Sindhia's measures; he [formed]—

1803—Maratha confederation against the English; it consisted of Sindhia, Amrit Rao, Bhonslay (Raja of Nagpur); Holkar consented to join, but later failed to keep his promise; the Gaekwar remained neutral.

GREAT MARATHA WAR, 1803-1805

April 17, 1803. Sindhia and Bhonslay met at Nagpur, marched at once to Poona to join Amrit Rao.—Lord Wellesley ordered up troops, and General Wellesley (Wellington), for the first time in actual command of armies, advanced with the Mysore army (about 12,000 men), by forced marches, to Poona, allegedly in order to restore Baji Rao to throne. Holkar returned to Chandor, Wellesley took Poona, Amrit Rao fled to Sindhia's camp.—The allied Marathas marched on Poona; conferences yielded nothing, but some months passed in the meantime. After giving all the necessary orders, General Wellesley recalled Colonel Collins from the allies' camp, and the war began.

On General Wellesley's orders, General Lake to attack at Gwalior Sindhia's reserve force commanded by Perron, while two corps d'armée were to take possession of Sindhia's dominions in Bharoch and of Holkar's in Cuttack (Bengal Presidency). About 3,000 men were left for the defence of Hyderabad and the ceded districts; main army with Wellesley, 17,000 men.

August 1803. Wellesley took Ahmadnagar, Colonel Woodington ditto Bharoch; General Lake launched attack on the fortress of Aligarh (Delhi Province) and on September 2 captured fort; on September 4, the place capitulated.

- September 3,<sup>1</sup> 1803. Great battle of Assaye; the Marathas beaten by General Wellesley.
Almost simultaneously, Harcourt took Cuttack (in the Bay of Bengal), and Stephenson, the fort of Burhanpur and Asirgarh in the Satpura Hills. Sindhia made a truce with Wellesley, who, joining Stephenson's force from Bharoch, marched against Bhonslay's strong fortress of Gawilgarh.
- November 28,<sup>2</sup> 1803. Battle at Argaon (near Ellichpur). Wellesley won, Bhonslay fled, Colonel Stephenson was sent on march against Nagpur (capital of Berar); Bhonslay begged for terms, hence—
- December 18,<sup>3</sup> 1803—Treaty of Deogaon between Bhonslay and Mountstuart Elphinstone on behalf of the East India Co.: English spared the territories of Berar; the Raja ceded Cuttack to the Company; gave several districts to the Nizam; excluded all Frenchmen and Europeans at war with England; [committed himself] to refer all differences to the Governor-General for arbitration.
- September 14, Lake, who after taking Aligarh marched straight on Delhi, met, six miles from the city, Sindhia's troops under French officers, defeated the French, that same evening took Delhi, and replaced the blinded Shah Alam (83 years old) on the throne under British protection.
- October 17, Agra, held by the Raja of Bharatpur, capitulated vis-à-vis Lake.—Lake marched out against large body of the enemy from the Deccan and Delhi; after terrible battle, Lake was victorious—at Laswari (village 128 miles south of Delhi); Sindhia down.
- December 4,<sup>4</sup> 1803. Treaty of Anjangaon between Lake (acting on behalf of Company) and Sindhia; Sindhia ceded all his territories north of Jaipur and Jodhpur; ditto Bharoch and Ahmadnagar; gave up all claims on the Nizam, the Peshwa, the Gaekwar, and the Company; had to acknowledge the independence of those

<sup>1</sup> September 23, according to Burgess.

<sup>2</sup> November 29, according to Burgess.

<sup>3</sup> December 17, according to Burgess.

<sup>4</sup> December 30, according to Burgess.

states recognized by the Company as independent; undertook to dismiss all foreigners, and to submit in all disputes to the arbitration of the Company.—The Governor-General, Wellesley, gave Berar to the Nizam, Ahmadnagar to the Peshwa, and reserved Cuttack for the Company; simultaneously he made treaties with the rajās of Bharatpur, Jaipur, and Jodhpur with the Raja of Gohad (in Sindhia's territory of Gwalior), to whom he [promised to give] the city of Gwalior, and with Ambaji Ingliā, Sindhia's general.

Early 1804. Holkar (instead of joining the Maratha confederation in keeping with his promise, he had with 60,000 cavalry plundered Sindhia's possessions), began to invade the territory of the Raja of Jaipur, ally of the Britishers; hence the victorious armies of Wellesley and Lake drew near; Holkar retreated from Jaipur beyond the River Chambal, where he gave Colonel Monson, sent with small force in his pursuit, so sound a thrashing that Monson, having lost guns, baggage, camp equipage, and stores of the division, and lost almost five battalions of infantry, finally arrived at Agra with the miserable survivors.—Holkar now attacked—ineffectually—Delhi, and ravaged the country round; General Lake followed him in all haste and came up with his army.

November 13, 1804, battle of Dig (in territory of Bharatpur); Holkar beaten, fled to Muttra (on the River Jumna, north of Agra); Fort Dig, which belonged to the Raja of Bharatpur and had fired on the English during the battle, taken by storm after the victory.

1805. Lake attacked Bharatpur without success; nevertheless, the Raja came to terms with the English.—Holkar joined Sindhia who was now at the head of a new combination of his own forces with those of Holkar, the Raja of Bharatpur, and Amir Khan the Rohilla. The fact is that, when the Governor-General, Wellesley, had given the Raja of Gohad his old family seat of Gwalior<sup>1</sup>, <sup>1</sup> Here the book used by Marx contains an error. Wellesley promised to give Gwalior to the Raja of Gohad, but he did not intend to do so, and kept a British force there.

Sindhia protested that his General, Ambaji Inglia, had concluded treaty with the English and transferred the city to them without reference to Sindhia. General Wellesley declared Sindhia was in the right, but Governor-General Wellesley refused Sindhia demand to give him back Gwalior, and administered him a severe rebuke. This led to a new confederation under Sindhia, who again took the field with 40,000 men against the English, but Wellesley's successor, Sir George Barlow, gave back Gwalior to Sindhia and made new treaty with him.

July 20, 1805. Governor-General Wellesley, his tenure of office having elapsed, sailed to England.

Administrative reforms of Wellesley. In place of the Sadr Divan-i-Adalat, a court established by Lord Cornwallis in 1793 (in lieu of the Supreme Court), over which Governor-General and the members of the Council presided with closed doors, Wellesley—1801—established a separate court open to the public and presided over by regularly appointed chief justices; the first of them was Colebroke. In the same year, a Supreme Court [was established] at Madras in place of the Sadr Divan-i-Adalat, on the principle extant in Calcutta previous to Cornwallis. This court lasted till 1862, when it was superseded by the High Court. The Recorder's Court, introduced by George III, was abolished, and its powers were assumed by the new chief justices and puisne judges (by Act 39 and 40 George III c. 79). The same Act gave the new court power to deal with insolvent debtors, a sort of delinquents that till then had received no particular attention in India). The same Act extended vice-admiralty jurisdiction to the chief courts at the presidency towns in India. Thus new European (English) element increased everywhere.

Lord Wellesley established great college at Calcutta, named College of Fort William; it was to serve (1) as educational institution for ignorant young civilians sent out from England; (2) as hall for discussions amongst the natives upon matters of law and religion. The Directors of the East India Co. confined the agency of the college to the educational department. Simultaneously Company established the College of Hailebury, in England, for instruction of writers previous to their departure for India.

[IX.] LORD CORNWALLIS' SECOND ADMINISTRATION, 1805
(He arrived at Calcutta on July 20)

August 1, Cornwallis assumed the insignia of office; his principle, he declared, was that of non-annexation; said he would give up all lands west of the Jumna; Lake (who was created Baron and then, in 1807, Viscount) remonstrated.

October 5, old Cornwallis died; he was succeeded by the senior member of the Council, Sir George Barlow, rigid anti-annexationist.

. . . . .

[X.] SIR GEORGE BARLOW'S ADMINISTRATION, 1805-1806

Late 1805. Treaty with Sindhia: Sindhia received Gohad and Gwalior on condition of keeping the Treaty of Anjangaon; Barlow guaranteed that the British Government would make no treaty with any of Sindhia's tributary states in the Rajput territory without Sindhia's consent. After Sindhia's submission, Holkar left his camp and began, with his usual ruthless cruelty, to ravage the country near the Sutlej; Lake pursued him with aid of Ranjit Singh, the great trans-Sutlej chieftain; Holkar was utterly defeated, and fled, suing for a treaty.

January 1806. Lord Lake signed treaty with Holkar, under which this fellow had to renounce all claims to Rampra, Tonk, Bundi, and all places north of the Bundi Hills. Sir George Barlow refused to ratify the treaty which conferred Bundi—annexation!—to the Company; ordered the English troops to withdraw from beyond the Chambal River, whereupon Holkar at once ravaged the dominions of the Raja of Bundi again.—In the same way, Barlow left the Raja of Jaipur, English ally, a prey of the Maratha soldiery.—Thereupon Lord Lake resigned all civil powers in the hands of Barlow, declaring that he would never again sign treaty if immediately negatived afterwards at headquarters.

Holkar had mental alienation as a result of having murdered, in a fit of passion, his brother and his nephew; died at Indore in 1811 in a state of insanity.

1807. Barlow superseded by Lord Minto, who came to India, also pledged to non-intervention; Minto arrived at Calcutta on July 31, 1807; Barlow was transferred to the Government of Madras.

. . . . .

[XI.] LORD MINTO'S ADMINISTRATION, 1807-1813

July 1807. Mutiny at Vellore (Madras Presidency), in fort of which Tipu's sons [were held] captive; mutiny in their behalf by their Mysorean suite; they hoisted Tipu's standard; Colonel Gillespie, with dragoon regiment of Arcot, quelled them, killing many.—Lord Minto, however, gave them "genteel" treatment.

1808. Ranjit Singh, a Sikh, Raja of all the country west of the Sutlej (he had commenced as Raja of Lahore, district given him by the victorious Afghan, Zaman Shah), crossed Sutlej into territory of Sirhind, [which was] under British protection, and attacked the province of the Raja of Patiala; Minto sent Colonel Metcalfe against him. The latter signed first treaty with Ranjit Singh, who retired beyond Sutlej, consented to restore the land he had taken south of that river, but the English were bound not to touch Sikh territory on north bank of Sutlej. Ranjit Singh faithfully performed his promises.

1809. Amir Khan, now the recognized chief of the robber tribe of the Pathans, plundered territories of Bhonslay, Raja of Berar, who as an English ally appealed to Minto; but he pushed enemy back over the Satpura

Hills before the tardily sent English force arrived at Nagpur.

Second embassy to Persia: embarras de richesse (for animal fear of Napoleon) Sir Harford Jones was sent to Teheran [1808] as ambassador from London and Sir John Malcolm, from Calcutta; their quarrel for precedence, etc. (p. 194). Both were afterwards superseded by Sir Gore Ouseley, sent from England as resident ambassador at Teheran; simultaneously—

Third mission to Kabul, sent by Lord Minto; Shah Shuja, brother and successor of Zaman Shah, was on throne at that time; the envoy was Mountstuart Elphinstone; [he] failed because Shah Shuja was overthrown through rebellion; his successor, Mahmud, accepted the protection of the French and the Russians.

Madras Presidency: here, too, constant alarm because of France.—For a while there was in force a réglement under which commanding officers had right of providing tents used by their own regiments; it was nice source of “gain.” Sir George Barlow, now President of Madras, roughly did away with this nuisance; he also dismissed General Macdowall, the Commander-in-Chief, for arresting Colonel Munro, the Quartermaster-General, who under orders of Barlow had in a report denounced the tent custom as something akin to cheating, and soon afterwards suspended four officers of high rank. All army now in a blaze of mutiny, [and the officers] sent insolent protest to the Governor. Barlow, calling upon the native soldiers, soon brought the officers to submit.

1810. Expedition against Persian Pirates. From early 1810 on, there had been a horde of pirates in the Persian Gulf, who were damaging English trade, then seized a ship—Minerva—belonging to the Company. Minto sent expedition from Bombay, it captured the pirates' headquarters at Mallia (in Gujarat) and, with support from Imam of Muscat, stormed and burnt their stronghold at Shiraz in Persia, whereby the robbers' “confederation” was broken up.

Expedition to Macao. Under influence of the Company fired with commercial rivalry, Minto sent ship to Macao

- to destroy the Portuguese settlement there, which was under protection of the Emperor of China; the regiment sent thither came back to Bengal without success; Emperor of China at once abolished English trade at Macao.
- Seizure of Mauritius and Bourbon.*—During the French war with England, the Company's trade had suffered a great deal from French attacks on the islands of Mauritius and Bourbon. To put an end to this, Minto sent expedition under command of Colonel Keating, who first took Isle of Rodrigues, 200 miles from Mauritius.
- May 1810, he made Rodrigues his base of operations; first attack on Isle of Bourbon, troops landed, attacked city and harbour of St. Paul, four batteries stormed, the place taken after three hours' fighting; the enemy's fleet, blockaded by the English one, surrendered.
- July. After several other French stations had been taken in Isle of Bourbon, the capital, Saint-Denis, fell, and the whole French force surrendered. Colonel Willoughby was left in command, the arsenal was turned into an English storehouse, where preparations were made for attack on Mauritius, alias Île de France.—At sea, 11 English ships taken by the French.
- October 29, 1810, expedition against Mauritius landed 1,000 men there; on October 30,<sup>1</sup> the French commander surrendered Mauritius; English have kept it till now, but Isle of Bourbon was restored to the French in 1814.
1811. Minto sent expedition against Java. First to be taken was spice island of Amboina, where in 1623 the terrible massacre by the Dutch had taken place; soon after, five smaller Molucca isles were taken; soon after, Banda Neira was taken (ditto Molucca isle). (The whole expedition was due to the East India Co.'s greedy eye on Dutch trade.)
- August 4, 1811. English landed during night at Batavia (capital of Java). Dutch force concentrated for defence in Fort Cornelis.
- August 5, action, and reduction of Batavia, by Colonel Gillespie. Soon afterwards, Sir Samuel Auchmuty, commander of the expedition, took all strong places of Java; French and Dutch submitted; Sir Stamford Raffles was appointed Governor of Java.

<sup>1</sup> December 9, according to Burgess.

Rise of the Pindaris: mounted robbers, thieves by profession. (Pindaris—mountaineers, peuplade<sup>1</sup> in Malwa, in the états<sup>2</sup> of Holkar, Sindhia, and Bhopal—Vindhya Hills=ramas<sup>3</sup> of robbers, escaped criminals, déserteurs, aventuriers; they first appeared in 1761, during battle at Panipat, on the Maratha side.) Under Peshwa Baji Rao, they always emerged on the side which paid best.

1808. Two brothers, Heran and Baran, headed them as leaders; on their death, a Jat named Chitu took the command, and styled himself Raja; for his assistance, Sindhia gave him a small tract of country, and in same way other Pindari chiefs became possessors of small jagirs; two years later, Chitu joined Amir Khan the Rohilla, and with army of 60,000 they began plundering Central India. Lord Minto was refused permission to attack them by the Board of Control, whose refusal was based on Cornwallis' doctrine of non-intervention.

Ryotwari System in Madras, established by Sir Thomas Munro; first recognized as basis of the revenue administration of the Madras Presidency; not permanently ordained till 1820. It functioned as follows: Revenue officers of the Government made an annual settlement early in year, when crops were sufficiently advanced to judge of their abundance and quality; at this time, the government tax equalled one-third of the produce; the cultivator was held responsible for this tax, as assessed and inscribed in the pottah, or lease, annually granted to him. If failure occurred owing to accidents of climate, the whole village was ordered to be ratably assessed, to bear the burden of the tax upon the land which had failed; if such a failure [was believed to have come about] by the wilful obstinacy of a ryot who, after having accepted the pottah, refused to cultivate his land, the collector had power to punish him by fine or even by corporal chastisement. The collector, with his absolute power to withhold or grant the pottah, had during each year absolute control over each district.

<sup>1</sup> Tribe.

<sup>2</sup> Possessions.

<sup>3</sup> Gangs.

October 1813. Lord Minto went back to England; [appointed] in his place [was] the Marquis of Hastings, then called Earl of Moira.

Proceedings in Parliament. March 1, 1813, charter of the East India Co. expired again.

March 22, 1813. House of Commons resolved itself into a committee to consider the questions in detail. The Board of Directors at the India House pleaded that the conquered country belonged by right to the Company, not to the Crown; their [the Company's] monopoly [of trade] was ditto necessary; they claimed new charter again for a period of 20 years, on same basis as the previous one.—The President of the Board of Commissioners, Earl of Buckinghamshire, opposed all these arguments. India belonged to England, not to the Company, [he said]; free Indian trade for all British subjects and down with the monopoly of the Company; in fact, it would be better if the Crown were to take government of India completely into its hands.

March 23, Lord Castlereagh moved on behalf of the Ministry: charter of the Company to be extended for 20 years; Company to have monopoly in Chinese trade, but Indian trade to be thrown open to the world on certain restrictions, preventing injury to the Company; Company to retain command of the army and power of appointing their own civil and other servants.

Late July, this—Castlereagh's—bill* was passed with very slight alterations (see p. 200 for more). Lord Grenville urged the Government to take the whole of India absolutely into its hands and appoint to the civil service by open competition.

In the same year, Christianity was openly introduced in India through appointment of a bishop to the See of Calcutta.

. . . . .

[XII.] LORD HASTINGS' ADMINISTRATION, 1813-1822

- October 1813. Lord Hastings arrived at Calcutta.—In 1811, Jaswant Rao Holkar died; his widow, Tulsi Bai, after many other favourites, etc., lived for four years with Gafur Khan, chief of the robber Pathans; government of Indore [was] fully in his power.—In 1813, Sindhia plundered the country round, [but] desisted on slightest threat of English Government.—The Rohilla chief, Amir Khan, [was] at head of one of the best armies in India, consisting of his own bodies of adventurers and the forces of Holkar, of which Amir Khan became Commander-in-Chief in 1811, after his breach with Pindari chief, Chitu.—The Peshwa, Baji Rao, was fretting under the English yoke. His position [had become] even “humbler” through energetic conduct of Mountstuart Elphinstone, the Resident at his court. There were disputes with the Gaekwar over the territory of Ahmadabad; in keeping with the treaty, the English were called upon to arbitrate. The Gaekwar therefore sent to Poona—and this was approved by Bombay President, Gangadhar Shastri; the latter was plotted against by the Peshwa's vicious favourite, Trimbakji Danglia, who had him cruelly murdered on return to Gujarat by his accomplices—at Pandharpur. Despite the Peshwa's resistance, etc. (see p. 202), Elphinstone forced him to deliver Danglia to him, and the latter was thrown into prison for further inquiry. This was state of things at the time of Hastings' assumption of government; he found treasury empty.
1814. The Gurkhas of Nepal; a race of Rajputs; came originally from Rajputana, and conquered and settled in the tarai, at the base of the Himalayas, in Nepal. Passing through various changes of government, they [were], in the middle of the 18th century, under dominion of one chief styling himself “Raja of Nepal.” He extended the boundaries, which sometimes brought him into contact with Ranjit Singh, and sometimes with princes under British protection; hence he already had quarrels with Sir George Barlow and Lord Minto.—Late in 1813, Gurkhas had seized a district of 200 vil- lages under British protection in the annexed territory of Oudh. Lord Hastings demanded their restitution within 25 days; thereupon the Gurkhas murdered a British magistrate in Butwal. Thereupon—

- (October) 1814—declaration of war against the Gurkhas: General Gillespie was to attack the Gurkha army, under command of Amar Singh, on the Sutlej; a second division, under General Wood, was to march on Butwal; a third, under General Ochterlony, on Simla; fourth division, under General Marley, was to advance straight on the capital, Khatmandu. A loan of two millions was obtained from the Nabob of Oudh for the expenses of war.
- October 29. Gillespie attacked Fort of Kalanga, defended by 500 Gurkhas; he ordered immediate assault, and led it; was shot himself; after loss of 700 officers and men, division returned to its camp. Command was now assumed by General Martindale, who wasted months in useless blockade; after breach had been made and fort at last captured, it was [found] already evacuated, its defenders having, on the night previous to the assault, left it with all their stores.
- General Wood*, after victory over a force far inferior to his own, became funky, retreated to British frontier, and remained inactive throughout the rest of the campaign.
1815. General Marley, having marched to the frontier, stayed there till early 1815, awaiting battering-train for attack on Khatmandu; he broke up his division on march into two feeble parties, each was attacked and defeated by the Gurkhas; Marley marched to and fro, and on February 10, 1815, took to his heels all alone across the frontier!
- May 15, after several months of successful engagements and sieges, Amar Singh having retired to Malon (strong hill-fort on left bank of Sutlej), General Ochterlony bombarded Malon for a month, it fell on May 15, Amar Singh<sup>1</sup> was killed during the siege.—Meanwhile Almora had fallen, in district of Kumaon, whereby all supplies were cut off from the Gurkhas opposing Ochterlony; they came to terms.

<sup>1</sup> Bhakti Singh, Amar Singh's general, according to Mill, Vol. 8.

- 1816. After lengthy negotiations, fresh campaign. Sir David Ochterlony effected very difficult passage through the mountains to Makwanpur, and repulsed the Gurkhas with heavy loss; he then concluded treaty with them, which they kept faithfully; they were bound to their own territory and had to cede most of the land conquered by them. — This war opened up communications between England and Nepal; many Gurkhas joined the English army, were forced into Gurkha regiments, of highest service to the English during the sepoy mutiny of 1857. The Company's numerous early reverses during the Gurkha war occasioned disturbance amongst the native princes, in particular, émeutes in Hathras and Bareili (both in Delhi provinces).
- 1816-1818. The Pindaris. In 1815, 50,000-60,000 of these freebooters ravaged Central India, while Amir Khan threatened the frontier and the Maratha princes, in hostile attitude, were collecting armies. Hastings' attempts to form, by means of alliances, a strong confederation against Amir Khan proved futile (206).
- October 14, 1815. A large body of Pindaris attacked and plundered the Nizam's dominions.
- February 1816. Nearly half of the Pindari forces invaded the Guntur Circars (Company's dominion), made desert of the country, and disappeared before regular attack could be made on them by Madras army. Raghoji Bhonslay, Raja of Berar, died; succeeded by his cousin Appa Sahib, who murdered Bhonslay's son and bought the Company by a treaty under which a subsidiary force of 8,000 English [was to be] garrisoned in Nagpur.
- November 1816. New Pindari inroad into the Company's territory; when Nagpur force took field, they disappeared into their own country in detached bodies.
- 1817. Early in year, Hastings took field in person, with army of 120,000 men (largest army assembled [in India] under British flag). He made alliances with the Rajas of Bundi, Jodhpur, Udaipur, Jaipur and Kotah, and Sindhia was forced to sign a treaty of neutrality.

Extinction of the Maratha Powers. Trimbakji Danglia, having slipped away from prison, became again chief adviser of Baji Rao at Poona; the latter made hostile preparations against English under pretext of "defence against the Pindaris." Elphinstone ordered troops from Bombay and told him categorically to decide for war or peace in 24 hours, and to surrender three of his principal fortresses and Trimbakji Danglia. Baji Rao hesitated; Bombay troops appeared; Peshwa submitted, gave over all the forts to the Company, and promised to catch Danglia. Now a treaty was signed, under which Peshwa consented never to receive the wakils<sup>1</sup> of any other Power, Maratha or foreign, at his court and to remain entirely at the orders of the British Resident. Thereby Maratha sovereignty [became] extinct, court at Poona was reduced to the level of that at Nagpur or Indore. Besides, he [the Peshwa] had to cede Sagar, Bundelkhand, and other places to the Company. Elphinstone then removed for safety to the British camp, two miles [from Poona], and the troops remained stationary there. About a month later, Peshwa was caught in the act of raising levies of horsemen and troops to act against the English.

November 5, 1817. With a tolerably large native army encamped close to the British regiments, the (British) Residency at Poona was attacked and burnt. In the following action, the Peshwa's raw levies were beaten; he himself—Baji Rao—

November 17, 1817, surrendered. End of the sovereignty of the Maratha State begun in 1669 with Shivaji.

Fall of the Raja of Nagpur. Appa Sahib proceeded in same way—levying army, etc.—as Baji Rao; the British Resident, Mr. Jenkins, caught him.

September 1817. Appa Sahib openly received a Pindari legate at court.

November 1817. He informed Jenkins that Peshwa had made him (Appa Sahib) Commander-in-Chief of the Maratha forces; Jenkins replied that since Peshwa was at war with Company, the appointment would involve Nagpur in a war with the Company. Thereupon Appa Sahib attacked (British) Residency.—Action in the Sitabaldi Hills. English won after bad outset (for them) of the action. Nagpur occupied; Appa Sahib deposed, died as fugitive at Jodhpur. This state administered by the English till 1826, when they placed a youth, who had been nominated, because he had now come of age, on the throne under British protection.

<sup>1</sup> Ambassadors.

Fall of the House of Holkar. Tulsi Bai had made her lover, Gafur Khan, chief of the Pathans and an arch-enemy of the Company, the real Governor. Sir John Malcolm and Sir Thomas Hislop demanded his removal. She—the Rani—prepared war, but one night was seized at Indore by the party hostile to her, beheaded, and her body thrown into the river.

1817. Young Malhar Rao Holkar was at once proclaimed sovereign, army marched out, nominally under his leadership, really under that of Gafur Khan.

December 21, 1817. English crossed River Sipra under terrible fire of the Marathas, and captured their cannons. Decisive fight at Mahidpur; English, after hard struggle, victors. Malhar Rao's sister, Buna Bai, captured and sent to her brother.—Soon after, treaty: Malhar Rao Holkar, son of Jaswant Rao, acknowledged Raja, but his power curtailed and his territory reduced.

Till about end of 1817, the Pindaris had hovered about without coming to decisive action. In view of the fall of the Maratha princes befriended to them, their three chiefs—Karim Khan, Chitu, and Wasil Muhammad—decided to go about the matter in good earnest; they concentrated their troops, which was what Hastings wanted; he ordered the various armies of the Presidency to close round the robber strongholds in Malwa, and threw regular cordon round them; the three leaders fled, and their three divisions, which tried to do the same, were attacked [by the British] while in flight. Karim Khan's division destroyed by General Donkin; Chitu's force dispersed by General Brown; their third division fled in all directions before they were assailed; their chief, Wasil Muhammad, committed suicide;

Chitu was found dead in a jungle after the battle; Karim Khan was permitted to retire and settle on a small estate, on promise of keeping peace. The Pindaris were disbanded, never again to unite; the Pathans under Amir Khan and Gafur Khan were likewise crushed.

Sindhia now the only chieftain with an army or the smallest pretence to independence; but left completely dependent on the Company.—India now English.

August 1817. First outbreak of cholera with terrible vehemence in India; at first it appeared in Zillah of Jessore, near Calcutta, advanced across Asia to European continent, which it decimated, from there on to England, and thence to America. In November 1817, the army of Hastings was attacked by it, the contagion having been brought by arrival of a new detachment from Calcutta, and it raged while Hastings' army was passing through the lowland of Bundelkhand, and for weeks the track was strewn with dead and dying.

January 1, 1818. Peshwa (he had fled from Poona in southern direction) joined by Trimbakji Danglia. At head of about 20,000 men, they battled against a detachment of English under Captain Staunton; the latter won after terrible struggle; Marathas were broken, and fled. General Smith then assumed command and marched on Satara, which surrendered at once. Baji Rao fled, surrendered finally to Sir John Malcolm, who proclaimed him dethroned. Lord Hastings made the Raja of Satara, of the actual Maratha rulers (who had been ousted by their ministers, the peshwas), the lineal descendant of Shivaji, the rightful monarch, the Peshwa becoming a government pensioner; thus tables turned since 1708, when Sahu, Raja of Satara, had made Balaji Viswanath his Peshwa. (Nana Sahib, of 1857 insurrection, was adopted son of Baji Rao, at whose death the annuity paid him by the British Government was stopped.) Besides, some important forts—Talneir, Maligaon, and Asirgarh—were captured in that last war show.—Lord Hastings proclaimed liberty of the press in India.

1819. Sir Stamford Raffles obtained cession of Singapore from Tumangoy, or Governor, of Johore.

1820. Nizam in heavy debts, owing to the heavy expenses incurred in the maintenance of the Hyderabad contingent and the scandalous mismanagement of his Minister, Chander Lal. The house of Messrs. Palmer & Co. eagerly offered him loans at any amount, until the sum owed became hopelessly large. The partners of the Palmer House obtained a very undue influence at Hyderabad; Mr. Metcalfe, then Resident there, called upon Hastings to interfere; the latter forbade Palmer & Co. to make more advances, and directed that the rents of the Northern Circars should be at once capitalized; the funds so obtained were directed to the payment of the debt. Palmer & Co. failed soon after; Hastings was damaged by the fact that he had been connected with the House (it was said by friendship with one of its members); that he had sanctioned many of their previous proceedings of a very questionable character and interfered only when the matter had, as the result of steps taken by Metcalfe, received a publicity no longer allowing Hastings "to countenance" the Palmers.
- Late 1822. Hastings resigned his post. Returned to England on January 1, 1823. He had come to India pledged to a policy of non-annexation!
- . . . . .

LAST PERIOD, 1823-1858
(EXTINCTION OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY)

(1) LORD AMHERST'S ADMINISTRATION, 1823-1828

January 1823. After Hastings' departure, Mr. Adam, senior member of the Council, [became Governor-General] per interim.—Board of Control made Lord Amherst Viceroy.

August 1823. Amherst in Calcutta; presently involved in war with the Burmese.—The Burmese of Ava originally were mere dependents of the Kingdom of Pegu; afterwards they became free; at their head [was] Alompra, an adventurer, who had always led their armies victoriously; they conquered Tenasserim from Siam, defeated the Chinese on several occasions, reduced all Arakan, subjugated their own feudal superiors at Pegu, became monarchs of the whole peninsula, with capital in Ava. The King of Burma styled himself "Lord of the White Elephants, Monarch of the Sea and the Earth."

In 1818, it was already believed at Court of Ava that the English, victorious against the prostrate Hindus, would fall before the invincible Burmese, and their King wrote to Calcutta, demanding from East India Co. the cession of Chittagong and certain other districts because, he said, these were parts of the territory of Arakan belonging to him. However, he kept quiet on receiving Hastings' courteous reply as to his "error."

1822. The Burmese troops, under their Maha Bandula (Commander-in-Chief), conquered and annexed Assam.

1823. They seized the English island of Shahpuri, on the coast of Arakan, and slaughtered the little garrison

- there. Amherst sent a force to dislodge the Burmese, wrote courteously to King at Ava, asking him to punish the offenders, whom he treated as mere pirates.
- January 1824. The Burmese, seeing therein sign of weakness, invaded province of Kachar, [which was] under British protection; English troops defeated them and drove them to Manipur.—Two expeditions were now sent from Calcutta, one to take Assam, the other to capture Rangoon and the other seaports of Burma.
- 1824. Rangoon taken without a blow, garrison fleeing into the interior. Sir Archibald Campbell, the commander of this expedition, took ditto a few neighbouring entrenchments and, after prolonged resistance, Kemmendine (four miles from Rangoon); then, because of hot weather, his troops were placed in cantonments at Rangoon; failing provisions, outbreak of cholera among his troops.
- December 1824. Maha Bandula, with 60,000 men, came down on Campbell's army; English defeated him twice; he retreated to Donabyu, followed by the English, who closely besieged the town.
- April 1825. Maha Bandula killed by a rocket, the garrison of Donabyu surrendered. Campbell pushed on, took the city of Prome (alias Pri) without firing a shot; rested here, awaiting the result of the expedition of Assam; the force sent thither under Colonel Richards took Rangpur and Sylhet, expelled the Burmese from Assam and, under General Macbean's command, advanced—
- March 1825—into Arakan, where it passed through the bravely defended hills; English, victorious, debouched into the plains, and appeared before capital of Arakan. Negotiations with Ava Court led to nothing.
- November 1825. Campbell marched forth on Ava; enemy fled before him.
- February 1826. Two decisive actions, Burmese defeated; English reached Yandabo, two days' march from Ava; Burmese King submitted.
- 1826. Treaty with Burma: King of Burma ceded Assam, Yeh (a province of Tenasserim). Tenasserim, and part of the Arakan, to the Company; promised non-inter- ference with province of Kachar, to pay £1 million for war expenses, and to receive a British Resident at Ava.

This first Burmese war (1824-1826) cost the British Government £13 million; was unpopular in England.

October 1824 (during the war), 47th Bengal Native Infantry, quartered at Barrackpore, under orders to Rangoon, broke out in open mutiny (cf. p. 218).

1826. At the end of the war, another mutiny at the same place (cf. p. 218).

January 18, 1826. Army under Lord Combermere stormed Bharatpur, considered impregnable. This State of Bharatpur was founded by the Jats, the aboriginal inhabitants of the country, at the time of the disintegration of the Mogul Empire. At that time [1826] it was ruled by Durjan Sal; the latter had wrested the "kingdom" from the rightful heir, Baldeo Singh (infant), whose supporters called on the English for aid; hence Combermere was sent against him, etc. After the fall of Bharatpur, Durjan Sal was sent to Benares as British prisoner and Baldeo Singh installed as Raja under British protection.

1827. Amherst received thanks from Parliament for Burmese war, was created Earl, and returned to England in February 1828.

. . . . .

(2) LORD WILLIAM BENTINCK'S ADMINISTRATION, 1828-1835

(Cf. p. 219 for selection of Bentinck against Company's wishes.)

July 4, 1828. Bentinck in Calcutta.—In the Rajput State of Jodhpur, the Raja, Man Singh, was reinstated by the English against the will of his rebel chieftains.

Gwalior, 1827. Daulat Rao Sindhia died without issue or adopted son. Bentinck ordered his wife—the Rani—to adopt a son, she chose the nearest male relative, Ali Jah Jankoji Sindhia, and in 1833 the latter engaged in warfare with the Rani; she was ordered by Bentinck completely to transfer the government to him.

At Jaipur, the Vizier had poisoned the Raja and his mother, the Rani, and seized government. The British Resident interfered; placed on throne an infant, the only representative of the royal family. The Resident assumed charge of the country during his minority.

Oudh, 1834. Mr. Maddock inquired into the maladministration of the Raja of Oudh, who devoured all revenues; the Raja received severe warning from Governor-General.

Bhopal, 1820. Raja of Bhopal died, his widow, Sikandar Begum, was left to govern the country; the rightful heir, her nephew, having appealed to British Government in 1835, Bentinck interfered, placed him on the throne (reigning now is Begum, daughter of this Raja).

Kurg, 1834. Bentinck annexed Kurg (southern Malabar coast). In 1820, Vira Raja had succeeded, and begun by wholesale slaughter of his relatives. In 1834, Vira Raja declared war to the Company, Madras army occupied his capital, he renounced everything; [the state] annexed because there was no other royal prince.

Kachar. Annexed in 1830; was under British protection during the Burmese war; but in 1830 Raja Govind Chandra died heirless.

Mysore, 1811. The young Raja (of the ancient royal family, whom Wellesley had reinstated on the throne of Mysore in 1799—as infant of five years—under Purnaiya's direction during his minority) came of age, dismissed Purnaiya, wasted treasury, ran into debt, cruelly oppressed the ryots, so that, in 1830, half the raj in a state of insurrection; British force quelled the rising; Bentinck annexed Mysore; the Raja was pensioned with annuity of £ 40,000 and one-fifth of the revenues of the country; the increase of the revenues had made this latter “bit” exceedingly valuable. (Thus, in their pensioning off—at their annexations—the English burdened the poor Hindus in favour of the dispossessed princes and princelings.)

Insurrections—among the wild tribes of the Kolis, Dhangars, and Santals in the south-west of Bengal, in the territories of Ramghur, Palamau, and Chhota Nagpur, and among the Choars in country near Bankura—quelled with much slaughter.—Also, formidable disturbance at Barasat, near Calcutta, where bloody fight broke out between Moslem fanatics under Titu Mir and Hindus. British regiment put the rioters down.

1827. Lord Amherst's flirting with Ranjit Singh (the "Lion Sikhs of Lahore"); ditto of Lord Bentinck in 1831 (darbar on the Sutlej) (cf. p. 222).

1832. Commercial treaty with the amirs of Sind, under which the Sutlej and the Indus were opened for traffic for the first time, with co-operation of Ranjit Singh.

Quarrel between Bentinck and officers at Calcutta, because of reducing bonus from "single" to "half-batta" (p. 223). Abolition of suttee (l. c.). Law reforms, abolition of thuggee (p. 224).—Law and justice (223-224). In 1835, Bentinck founded a Medical College for the natives at Calcutta.

1833. North-Western Provinces created a separate presidency; gave them a new [Supreme] Court and Board of Revenues at Allahabad. Land settlement of these provinces for 30 years (framer and controller of this work, Robert Bird.)

Peninsular and Oriental Company, opening up steam communication by way of Red Sea, brought India two months nearer to England; the Company, established in 1842, received support from home and Calcutta governments.

1833. (Parliamentary Proceedings.) Charter had expired again, old debates were resumed over same points, but [this time] free trade party was in ascendancy. Trade with China was opened to all traders; last of the Company's trade monopoly against private trade was thus swept away.—The new, fourth presidency—the North-Western Provinces—created by Act of Parliament.—Another Act gave Governor-General in Council increased power of interference with the local governments of the several provinces; the local governors were to have no councils and no powers of legislation. Governor-General to legislate for all persons, European or native, and for all courts. Commission appointed to inquire into possibility of a single code of laws for all India.

(3) SIR CHARLES METCALFE, PROVISIONARY
GOVERNOR-GENERAL, 1835-1836

He had been Governor of Agra, named per interim. Court of Directors wanted Parliament to make him definitely Governor-General, but Ministry wanted absolutely to keep appointment in their hands; they conferred the post on Lord Heytesbury, but before he started, the Tories were displaced by Whigs; and their new President of the Board of Control, Sir John Hobhouse, revoked Heytesbury's appointment, and nominated Lord Auckland.

1835. Metcalf proclaimed liberty of the press in India. The enraged Directors of the India House at London (the Court) treated him, one of the best Indian functionaries, so rudely that he resigned his post in civil service on Auckland's arrival, and returned to England.
- . . . . .

(4) LORD AUCKLAND'S ADMINISTRATION, 1836-1842

March 20, 1836. Auckland assumed government in Calcutta. He began the Afghan war (under Palmerston's inspiration).

Afghan dynasties. In 1757, Ahmad Shah Durani conquered Delhi; in 1761, [he] fought the terrible Battle of Panipat against the Marathas. (He was chieftain of the Afghan tribe of the Abdalis or Duranis.) In 1761, back in Afghanistan, Ahmad Shah Durani reigned in Kabul.<sup>1</sup> On his death (1773), he was succeeded by his son Timur Shah (1773-1792<sup>2</sup>); under him, the family of Barakzais rose, whose head, Payandah Khan, [was] Vizier of the weak Timur; this last in a fit of rage mortally offended the Barakzais; they raised insurrection, whereupon Timur captured and killed Payandah Khan; the Barakzais swore vendetta on the Sadozais (as the royal family were called);<sup>1</sup> throne went to Timur's son—

<sup>1</sup> The book used by Marx is in error on this point, for Ahmad Shah ruled and died in Kandahar.

<sup>2</sup> 1793, according to The Cambridge History of India, Vol. 5, 1929.

1792-1802—Zaman Shah. He annoyed the Company a great deal by war demonstrations on the Indian border; his intentions with regard to Hindustan frustrated by the Barakzais and his own brothers, of whom four played [a certain] role: Shuja-ul-Mulk, Mahmud, Firuz, and Kaisar.—Payandah Khan was followed in headship of the Barakzai clan by his son, Fateh Khan.

1801, when Zaman [Shah] was at Peshawar, upon great expedition on his way to Hindustan, Fateh Khan won over Zaman's brother Mahmud to conspire with him, raised his standard, and seized Kandahar; Zaman hurried back, was captured, blinded, imprisoned, lived for a long time as miserable dependent. Shuja-ul-Mulk, rightful successor, marched at once on Kabul, but Fateh defeated him, and placed on throne—

1802<sup>2</sup>-1818—Mahmud Shah, while Firuz seized on the Sadozai dominions of Herat and Kaisar, on those of Kandahar.

1808.<sup>3</sup> At instigation of many of the Durani nobles at Kabul, Shah Shuja returned, defeated the usurpers, pardoned all, left his brothers as governors of Herat and Kandahar. Fateh Khan fled, plotted first with Kaisar and in the latter's name raised new revolt, was beaten, Kaisar pardoned.—Fateh Khan then made rebellion in name of Kamran, Shah Mahmud's eldest son, and treacherously took Kandahar from Kaisar. Revolt quelled again, and once more Shah Shuja pardoned the rebels.—Fateh Khan persuaded Kaisar to head a rebellion, they seized Peshawar, rebels again defeated, again forgiven.—New rebellion by Fateh Khan, this time victorious, Shah Shuja compelled to flee [in 1810]; caught in Kashmir, whose Governor tried to extort the Koh-i-noor diamond from him; Shuja fled to Ranjit Singh in Lahore, who at first pretended friendship and then mistreated him, and grabbed the Koh-i-noor diamond; Shuja slipped away to Ludhiana, where he found a new friend in Raja Kistawar. Shuja launched ineffectual attack on Kashmir, and returned to Ludhiana.

<sup>1</sup> The book used by Marx is in error on this point. Payandah Khan placed Zaman on the throne after Timur's death, and was murdered by Zaman, who wanted to get rid of too influential a vizier. It was then that enmity flared up between the Barakzais and Sadozais. See History of the Afghans by Ferrier, The Cambridge History of India, Vol. 5, etc.

<sup>2</sup> 1800, according to Burgess.

<sup>3</sup> 1803, according to Burgess.

1816. Mahmud Shah weak and inept ruler; all real power in hands of Fateh Khan and the Barakzais.—Dost Mohammed, a younger brother of Fateh Khan, planned with him to raise the Barakzais to the throne, but first they wanted to bring all Afghanistan under one man; they marched on Herat (governed by Firuz); Herat was seized by them and Firuz fled, while his nephew, Prince Kamran, swore vengeance on the Barakzais, particularly Fateh Khan; he went to Kabul, persuaded his half-imbecile father, Shah Mahmud, that Fateh Khan's movement was insurrection, obtained his permission to seize the latter and bring him to Kabul; did so; in presence of Mahmud and his son Kamran, Fateh Khan was butchered in the most cannibalistic manner (cf. p. 230). Then Dost Mohammed came up with large army, all Barakzais supporting him, took Kabul, sent Mahmud and Kamran into exile; they fled to Firuz in Herat.—The Barakzais seized the Kingdom of Afghanistan. Besides Dost Mohammed, Fateh Khan had the following brothers: Mohammed, who seized Peshawar; Azim Khan (the eldest brother), who marched on Kabul, claiming it as head of the family of Dost Mohammed; while Pur Dil Khan, Kohan Dil Khan, and Sher Ali Khan seized on Kandahar and the country of the Khiljies. Dost Mohammed surrendered Kabul to Azim Khan and withdrew to Ghazni.—Azim Khan set up a puppet sovereign, Prince Ayub, a representative of the ancient Sadozai Dynasty, as nominal Shah at Kabul; but Dost Mohammed set up another representative [of the same dynasty], Sultan Ali, who was killed by Ayub. Soon after, when Dost Mohammed and Azim Khan had launched an expedition against the Sikhs, Azim Khan learnt that his brother Dost was leagued against him with

Ranjit Singh, fled in terror to Jalalabad, where he died in 1823; Ranjit Singh gave Dost Mohammed Peshawar, and Dost became actual head of Afghanistan; the Kandahar Barakzais seized Kabul in a moment of confusion, and it was not until—1826—that Dost Mohammed [became] master of Kabul by driving out the other claimants. He reigned well and with moderation, sought as much as possible to crush the Durani tribes.

1834. Shah Shuja, raising army in Sind, made new attempt to regain his kingdom, had co-operation of various brothers of Dost, who were jealous of the latter.

1834. Shuja did not obtain from Lord Bentinck the support he had hoped for, and Ranjit Singh offered his own at so high a price that Shuja refused it; Shuja marched into Afghanistan, invested Kandahar, but city defended itself bravely; Dost Mohammed moved up with army from Kabul in the rear of Shuja, who, after one feeble battle, fled back to India.—Ranjit Singh on this occasion annexed Peshawar; Dost Mohammed proclaimed a religious war against the Sikhs, marched with enormous army into the Punjab; but his expedition was frustrated by General Harlan, an American in the pay of Ranjit Singh, entering the Afghan camp as an ambassador and intriguing there so well that army was disaffected, half of it broke up and marched off again by different routes; Dost returned to Kabul.

1837.<sup>1</sup> Ranjit Singh took Kashmir and Multan; Dost's son, Akbar Khan, distinguished himself in the unsuccessful expedition against him.

Persia. Agha Mohammad and his [nephew] Fateh Ali had raised Persia as successive shahs. Fateh Ali had two sons: Abbas Mirza the Shah Zada and Mohammad.

1834.<sup>2</sup> Abbas Mirza prevailed upon old Fateh Ali to undertake expedition to Herat, but Fateh died that year [1834]; Abbas Mirza [killed]; Mohammad acceded to throne and, under inspiration of Count Simonich, the

<sup>1</sup> According to The Cambridge History of India, Vol. 5, Kashmir was taken in 1819 and Multan, in 1818.

<sup>2</sup> 1833. according to Sykes, A History of Persia, Vol. 2, London, 1921.

Russian Ambassador at Teheran, undertook, against wish of the English—

1837—siege of Herat. Pretext: some tribute, asked by Mohammad Shah and refused by Kamran, now called Shah of Herat.

September 1838. Persians withdrew, nominally at the request of the English, in fact because they could not do anything against the Afghan garrison of Herat. One Eldred Pottinger, then a young lieutenant still, distinguished himself in the garrison of Herat during the siege.

1836. The British Minister at the Court of Persia warned Auckland of the Persian expedition to Herat, describing it as Russian manoeuvre, etc.; therefore—

1837—Auckland sent Captain Alexander Burnes to Kabul to secure commercial treaty and more intimate relations with Afghanistan: [Burnes] found on his arrival that the Kandahar chiefs had asked Russian aid against Ranjit Singh and that (!?) Dost Mohammed seemed inclined to follow their example. During Burnes's residence at Kabul, the Barakzais actually made a treaty with Persia under Russian dictation; and Mr. McNeill, the English Ambassador at Teheran, was treated with "indignity." Burnes's mission a failure, Dost Mohammed demanding that whichever party he treated with should procure him Peshawar from Ranjit Singh. The Russian Ambassador promised it; Burnes was unable to do so; thereupon Dost Mohammed declared for Russia, and Burnes left Afghanistan.

June 26, 1838. Lahore tripartite treaty between Lord Auckland, Ranjit Singh, and Shah Shuja; the latter absolutely to renounce Peshawar and the states on the Indus in favour of Ranjit Singh; between Afghans and Sikhs, mutual support; Shuja to be replaced on throne of Afghanistan, to relinquish all claims on Sind for payment to be fixed by Governor-General; to leave Herat untouched in hands of his nephew Kamran; to prevent all other foreigners from invasion of British or Sikh territory.

October 1, 1838. Simla Proclamation by Auckland of war against Afghanistan for the restoration of the English

- ally, Shuja, to throne. Futile opposition in British Parliament, baffled by Pam,<sup>1</sup> the real instigator of the whole farce, avowedly "anti-Russian." (Pam had in the meantime—"to overawe Persia," while he was in most intimate relation with the Russian, Simonich, at Teheran Court—seized the island of Karrak, in the Persian Gulf). Council of war held under Auckland's auspices: main [English] army to join Ranjit Singh's force at Firuzpur; the Bombay contingent sailed to the mouth of the Indus; the three divisions to meet at Shikarpur in Sind and to march jointly to Afghanistan. Co-operation of the amirs of Sind required to this end.
1786. These amirs—Baluchis, chieftains of the Talpura tribe—had conquered Sind from the Afghans, portioned out the country among themselves, and established feudal system.
1831. (When on way to the Court of Ranjit Singh with his troop of dray horses [intended as a gift]) Captain Burnes had treated with the amirs, and in 1832, Lord William Bentinck had concluded a formal treaty with them, whereby the trade of the Indus was opened for British merchants.
1835. Ranjit Singh commenced a war with the amirs, but (East India) Company made him desist.
1838. The tripartite treaty ensured the amirs of Sind peaceable possession [of their lands] on condition of payment, to be fixed by Governor-General, to be made to Shah Shuja.
- Early 1839, Pottinger was sent [to Sind] to demand a large payment of the amirs under the absurdly shameless-pretext of feudal tribute owed by the amirs to Shuja as Shah of Afghanistan. They pleaded: Shuja, while in exile, had granted them a release from that tribute for an immediate payment they had made for him in 1833, [but] Pottinger insisted on the "funds," saying that otherwise they [the amirs] would be displaced; they paid with just rage.
- November 1838. Bengal army reached the Sutlej, the force of Ranjit Singh joined them there.

<sup>1</sup> Palmerston.

- December 10, 1838. The united armies under command of Sir Willoughby Cotton marched from Firuzpur, en route for the rendezvous at Shikarpur (in Sind), (after the Commander-in-Chief, Sir Henry Fane, had resigned in indignation at the whole proceedings); they reached—
- January 14, 1839—Sind territory*, and heard that Sir John Keane had safely arrived at Tatta with his troops from Bombay.
- January 29, 1839. Sir Alexander Burnes was sent to demand from the amirs (of Sind) cession of the fort of Bakar, on the Indus, as depot for the British troops. They were compelled to do so. Army pushed on along the left (eastern) bank of the Indus to Hyderabad; simultaneously the Bombay contingent marched along the right bank and halted opposite Hyderabad, and Karachi was taken by a British ship with some reserve forces on board, who turned the city into an English fort. The amirs submitted in everything to the Company, and the main army marched to Shikarpur, where they arrived—
- At end of February 1839; without awaiting the Bombay contingent under Sir John Keane and Shah Shuja accompanying him, Sir Willoughby Cotton pushed on to Bolan Pass; he had to cross a parched desert 146 miles in extent, suffered, baggage-animals dying by scores.
- March 10, 1839, the column reached Dadar, at the mouth of the pass; Cotton rested a few days, found that Mehrab Khan, of Khelat, was hostile; no supplies to be obtained.
- March 1839. Bolan Pass traversed without opposition in six days; Cotton halted at Quetta to await Sir John Keane's arrival; made favourable treaty with Mehrab Khan.
- April 1839. Sir John Keane with his staff joined at Quetta, where the whole expedition was now massed, with Shah Shuja in camp. Much privation and sickness on further march, the allies soon reached Kandahar, which surrendered without fighting.
- Early in May 1839, Shuja was crowned Shah of Afghanistan at Kandahar.

- Late in June 1839, army marched to Ghazni; strong fort, but its gates were blown down by engineers under Captain Thompson, and in one morning the city was carried and garrison put to flight. Dost Mohammed fled to Hindu Kush from Kabul, against which the English were marching; they took it without fighting, and—
- August 7—Shah Shuja was installed at Kabul, in his fathers' palace at the immensely strong Bala Hissar.—Shuja's son, Prince Timur, and a fresh Sikh contingent came through Khyber Pass, joined soon after the main army at Kabul.
- (June 27, Ranjit Singh died; had left his Sikh kingdom to his eldest son, Kharak Singh, and bequeathed Koh-i-noor to the temple of Jagannath.) It was decided for the present to leave large British force and the Sikhs in Kabul, where they remained undisturbed from 1839 to 1841; they felt so safe that Sir William Macnaghten, the political agent, had his wife and daughter come to Kabul from Hindustan, and other ladies closely related to the officers in the army, because of the pleasant fresh climate of Afghanistan.
- October 15, 1839. On its southward march back to Sind, the Bombay force took Khelat, killed Mehrab Khan, and ravaged his country.
- Early 1840, Macnaghten and Cotton were such asses that they ceded the immense stronghold of Bala Hissar at Kabul to Shah Shuja for his harem (!) removing the troops from there into cantonments. Thus the strongest fort in the country was converted into a zenana. Then began a series of revolts against Shah Shuja in Kabul itself; it lasted throughout 1840.
- November 1840. Dost Mohammed, with a small troop of horse-men, came to Kabul to surrender.—(He had earlier fled to Bokhara, where he was accorded a poor reception, and had returned to Afganistan, was joined by a large number of Uzbeks and Afghans, defeated, and put to flight by Brigadier Dennie.)
- During remainder of 1840 and summer of 1841, serious insurrections at Kandahar, put down severely; people of Herat openly declared against the British. The whole country roused to indignation against the "British usurpers."

October 1841, most serious revolt among the Khilji tribes of the great Khyber Pass; cost many lives to the troops returning through that pass to Hindustan; suppressed with difficulty.

November 2, 1841. After secret conspiracy organized at Kabul, house of Burnes attacked by insurgents, he himself with numerous other officers fouly murdered. Several regiments sent to quell the insurrection, but blocked by mistake in the narrow streets of Kabul; for several days the frantic mob thus left unopposed; they attacked a fort used for commissariat stores and so poorly supported by General Elphinstone (now Commander-in-Chief in Afghanistan in place of Cotton) that the officer in charge with his small garrison was forced to clear the fort.—Macnaghten sent urgent messages to General Sale, then near the Khyber Pass, and to General Nott at Kandahar to relieve the garrison at Kabul, but snow lying thick on ground made any communication hopeless; troops were in two divisions, one at the Bala Hissar under able Brigadier Shelton, the other in cantonments under General Elphinstone. Nothing was done because of quarrels between the two.

November 1841, Afghans commenced regular attacks, seized some hills near; ineffectual attempts to dislodge them.

November 23, 1841. General action, English completely beaten, returned to cantonments; negotiations in vain; a few days later, Akbar Khan, Dost's fiery son, arrived [in Kabul].

December 11, 1841. Provisions ran out; with one voice the inhabitants of the country round refused to supply them; Macnaghten had to conclude a treaty with the insurgents: British and Sikh troops to quit the country; Dost Mohammed to be released; Shah Shuja to reside crownless, but unmolested, in Afghanistan or India; Afghans guaranteed to assist the safe retreat of the British army by money, protection, and provisions. Thereupon the 15,000 British troops began their miserable retreat from Afghanistan; the Afghans on every occasion despoiled (quite so!) the soldiers and seized their stores; before the troops had started from Kabul, Akbar Khan sent in fresh treaty to Macnaghten, invited him to private audience.

December 23, 1841. Macnaghten accepted, to secure better terms for the army; Akbar put a pistol shot through his heart.

January 1842. Major Pottinger stepped in Macnaghten's place; was unable to urge some decided course on the despairing generals; made a final treaty for securing a safe retreat to the army, left Kabul, but Akbar Khan had sworn the annihilation of the British. The troops had scarcely left cantonments when heavy snow came; the soldiers' suffering terrible; after three days' march, the head of the column entered a pass in the mountains; Akbar Khan appeared with troop of horse, demanded surrender of all the ladies and children (including Lady Macnaghten and Lady Sale) with several officers, as hostages for the safe retreat of the force; they were given up. In the defile, the natives shot the "British dogs" dead from the heights above, hundreds fell thus until the end of the pass was cleared, where only 500-600 starving and wounded men were left to continue their retreat. They, too, were slaughtered like sheep during their struggling march to the frontier.

January 13, 1842. On the walls of Jalalabad (near Shahjahanpur, North-Western Provinces), the sentries espied a man in a tattered English uniform, on miserable pony, horse and man desperately wounded; it was Dr. Brydon, the sole survivor of the 15,000 who had left Kabul three weeks before. He was dying of starvation.

Lord Auckland ordered the advance of a fresh brigade, to relieve the brigade of General Sale in Jalalabad, harassed by the Afghans. Auckland returned disgraced to England; he was succeeded by the big-mouthed elephant, Lord Ellenborough, who was sent out pledged to a peace policy, but during the two years of his office, the sword was never sheathed (duce<sup>1</sup> Pam).

---

<sup>1</sup> Led by.

(5) LORD ELLENBOROUGH'S (ELEPHANT'S) ADMINISTRATION,
1842-1844

Early 1842. On landing, the "Elephant" heard that the brigade under General Wild, sent off by Auckland to relieve Jalalabad, had been disastrously beaten in Khyber Pass; that Sikh army refused to co-operate any longer with English and that the sepoys in Wild's brigade were likewise in a state of panic.

On his death (June 27, 1839), Ranjit Singh was succeeded by his eldest son, Kharak Singh, as ruler of the Punjab; the latter made one Chait Singh his Vizier; he was murdered by ex-Vizier Dian Singh, who also deposed Kharak and replaced him by his son, Nao Nihal.

In 1840, Kharak Singh died in prison, and Nao Nihal was accidentally killed; Dian sent for Sher Singh, Ranjit Singh's brave son, who seemed to declare for the English.

1842. New brigade under General Pollock was sent in assistance of Wild; with the liberated Wild it had to penetrate Khyber Pass and replace General Sale at Jalalabad.

April 5, 1842. Pollock had two brigades scale the heights on both sides of (Khyber) Pass, so as to clear the way for advance of the main body; it was done; the Khyberis, defeated on their own ground, fled to the Afghan end of the defile. Army marched through pass unopposed, reached Jalalabad in 10 days (April 15?), where they learnt that siege of the city under Akbar Khan's personal command [had been] beaten off in sortie and that Akbar Khan had retired.

In January 1842, General Nott had concentrated his small force at Kandahar, defeated the Afghans on several occasions; afterwards he was besieged, defended the city with great ability; but Ghazni had surrendered to the enemy, and General England, commanding a convoy from Quetta, intended to join Nott's force, had been repulsed and forced to retreat.

Elephant Ellenborough—now singing small—ordered Pollock to remain at Jalalabad till October and then to withdraw altogether from Afghanistan; Nott was also to destroy Kandahar and then retire to the Indus.—Cry of rage among all Anglo-Indians; hence—

- July 1842—the Elephant permitted the military in Afghanistan to take Kabul.—At Kabul, Akbar Khan had installed himself as Shah of Afghanistan, Shah Shuja having been barbarously murdered after the retreat of the English. Akbar sent the English ladies, officers, and other prisoners to a fort at Tegeen, where they were well treated. There General Elphinstone died.
- August 1842. The two armies of Kandahar and Jalalabad marched in different directions on Kabul, Pollock beating the Khiljies several times.
- September 1842. The two divisions joined at Tegeen (Tezin, near Jalalabad); Akbar Khan defeated.
- September 15, 1842. Kabul in English hands again.—As Pollock advanced, the British prisoners were sent to Bami-an in Hindu Kush, in charge of officer Sala Mohammed; the latter, hearing of defeat of Akbar, offered Pottinger to release the whole party and to accompany them to Kabul, provided he was guaranteed personal safety and money reward; Pottinger granted this; hence—
- September 20—the prisoners were restored at Kabul to their countrymen.
- October 1842. Having destroyed most of the fortifications of Kabul, the British army proceeded unhampered through Khyber Pass into the Peshawar territories; at Firuzpur, the Sikh Commander-in-Chief played host to Pottinger.
- Late 1842. Army under Sir Charles Napier advanced against amirs of Sind (the army was formed partly of the Kandahar regiments and partly of fresh troops sent from Bengal and Bombay). Depot, Sukkur on the Indus (in Sind).—Desperate attack by the Baluchi cavalry on residence of Colonel Outram political agent at Hyderabad; Outram barely escaped to camp of Napier, who by then had advanced as far as Halla.
- February 17, 1843, battle at Miani, near Hyderabad. Amirs with 20,000 men, Napier with about 3,000; after about three hours' terrible fight, Napier won, enemy fled in disorder, six amirs surrendered as prisoners, Hyderabad at once occupied and plundered (!), and the English garrisoned the city.

March 1843, the British garrison was reinforced with some "native" regiments from Bengal, so that Napier had about 6,000 men.

March 24, 1843. Napier beat Sher Mohammed, Amir of Mirpur, in action near the capital; then city of Mirpur seized and sacked! Next to be taken was Umarkot, a strong fort in the desert; the (Baluchi) garrison surrendered the city without drawing the sword.

June 1843, Colonel Jacob of the Sind Horse defeated Sher Mohammed, and thereby subjugation of Sind was completed. Since then Sind British province, costs the Government annually more than it yields.

Gwalior, December 1843. The English troops there fighting with their ancient enemies. This is how it came about:

1827, after advantageous treaty with Lord Hastings (1814), Daulat Rao Sindhia died without issue. He was succeeded—

1827-1843 (year of his death)—by the only heir that could be found, Mugat Rao, under the name of Ali Jah Jankoji Sindhia; left no children, only widow 13 years old—Tara Bai; she adopted as successor Bhagerat Rao, an eight-year-old child, who received the title of Ali Jah Jyaji Sindhia; of the two claimants to the regency—Jankoji Sindhia, called Mama Sahib (cf. notes on p. 245: mama=maternal uncle, sahib=lord), and the steward of the household, Wala (a distant relation of the deceased Maharaja), known as Dada Khasji (dada=a paternal grandfather, or an elder brother—russice<sup>1</sup> дядя<sup>2</sup>=uncle—and khasji=steward of the household), Ellenborough had the Resident appoint Mama Sahib [Regent], while Tara Bai was for Dada; hence two parties formed at court; after much confusion and some bloodshed, Mama was dismissed and Dada appointed by the Maharani, Tara Bai; but the Elephant insisted on his Mama, ordered the Resident to leave Gwalior. Dada prepared troops to oppose the Elephant. Ellenborough (the Elephant) ordered Sir Hugh Gough to assume command of the Gwalior expedition and—1843—to cross the Chambal River into Sindhia territory; the Rani and Dada thereupon offered submission, but their army of 60,000 men and 200 guns marched out, and drove the English beyond the Chambal [which they had crossed].

<sup>1</sup> In Russian.

<sup>2</sup> Written in Russian by Marx.

December 29, 1843, near Maharajpur (in Gwalior), Sir Hugh Gough was attacked by 14,000 picked (Maratha) soldiers with numerous batteries of perfectly served artillery; Marathas fought with utmost gallantry; the English won after heavy losses.

December 31, 1843 The Maharani and young Sindhia came into British camp and submitted humbly; State of Gwalior was retained for Sindhia, the Rani pensioned off, the Maratha army reduced to 6,000 men, the British force subsidized [by Gwalior] increased to 10,000 men; Sindhia to succeed at his majority; meanwhile council appointed to manage the state affairs.

Soon after, early in 1844, the Elephant was revoked—before expiry of his term—by Court of Directors, because of his “war urge”; Sir Henry Hardinge was sent out to supersede the Elephant.

. . . . .

(6) LORD HARDINGE'S ADMINISTRATION, 1844-1848

June 1844. Hardinge arrived at Calcutta. (He came, not as “Lord,” but as Sir Henry Hardinge.)

1842. Sher Singh, one of Ranjit Singh's sons, sovereign of the Punjab; his Vizier, Dian Singh, induced one Ajit Singh to murder Sher Singh; but Ajit also murdered Sher's eldest son, Pratap Singh, ditto Dian Singh himself; the latter's brother, Suchat, and [son] Hira Singh, surrounded Lahore with troops, seized the rebels (headed by Ajit Singh), and killed them all. Thereupon Hira Singh, who had made himself Vizier, proclaimed [Raja] the only surviving son of Sher Singh's, viz., Dhuleep Singh (10 years old, gifted, the last Maharaja of Lahore). The most difficult problem for Hira Singh was curtailing the number or curbing the power of the Sikh, or Khalsa,<sup>1</sup> army, which indeed was the dominant power in the state; Hira fell (done in) as victim of a conspiracy of its officers.—A favourite of the Rani, the Brahmin Lal Singh, became Vizier; after various minor military expeditions, he found that the only way to pacify the Khalsa was war against England.

Spring 1845. The war preparations in Lahore so marked that Sir Henry Hardinge concentrated 50,000 men on eastern bank of Sutlej.

First Sikh War, 1845, 1846. At end of November, 60,000 Sikhs crossed the Sutlej and encamped on English territory near Firuzpur. Governor-General Hardinge and Sir Hugh Gough, his Commander-in-Chief, at once marched to oppose them. To be noted that the mishaps of the English were mostly due, besides the Sikhs' bravery, to the asinine stupidity of Gough, who imagined he could do anything to the Sikhs, in the same way as to the easily frightened Hindus of the South, by charging them with the bayonet.

December 18, 1845. Battle of Mudki, village about 20 miles from Firuzpur. English victory ([though] several of their "native regiments" had already given way), Lal Singh retired with his army during the night.

December 21, 1845. Battle of Firuzshah, where Sikhs had their camp. English repulsed on all sides with heavy losses.

December 22, 1845. Resumption of battle. English won, although with heavy losses because the Sikhs had not expected that after their "defeat", which to most Oriental nations means a panic and general flight, English should attack again next morning. Sikhs retreated, English too exhausted for pursuit. For the attack on Lahore, the English awaited siege battery, reported to be on the route in the middle of December; to forestall attack on the convoy by the Sikhs encamped at Aliwal, small village near Ludhiana—

<sup>1</sup> "Community," the original name of the brotherhood of Sikhs, and later the Sikh State, as well as of the soldiers' organizations, which exerted a democratic influence on the policies of the Sikh Government. Hence the Sikh feudal lords were intent on breaking the power of the Khalsa.

January 28, 1846— battle of Aliwal; after stubborn resistance, Sikhs driven into the river.—A few days later, the convoy arrived from Delhi in English camp.—Meanwhile the Sikhs had built very strong fortifications, garrisoned with nearly 40,000 men at Sobraon, etc., for the defence of Lahore.

February 10, 1846, battle of Sobraon. The Sikh army completely shattered after excellent, most courageous resistance, with great loss on part of English. (Much hand-to-hand fighting, one of the hottest actions in which the English ever engaged.) After the English had crossed the Sutlej unopposed, and occupied the strong fort of Kasur (not far from Lahore), Dhuleep Singh (the young Raja) arrived at the latter place to submit, with influential chieftains headed by Gulab Singh (this fellow was a Rajput, known to the English to be at heart great enemy of the Sikhs). Treaty, under which country between the rivers Bias and Sutlej to be ceded to the Company; £1,500,000 to be paid as indemnity; Lahore for the present to be garrisoned by the English troops.

February 20, 1846. English army entered Lahore in triumph. As there was no money in treasury for the payment of the £1,500,000, Hardinge declared Kashmir annexed to Company, but Gulab Singh offered the money, and Kashmir was therefore made over to him. That was how Hardinge paid his war expenses. The troops of the Khalsa army were paid off and disbanded; Dhuleep Singh was recognized as independent. Major Henry Lawrence left with English garrison at Lahore; the main army with the captured guns withdrew to Ludhiana.—Hardinge and Gough received thanks of Parliament, and were raised to peerage.—In March 1848, Hardinge returned to England, was succeeded as Governor-General by Lord Dalhousie.

. . . . .

(7) LORD DALHOUSIE'S ADMINISTRATION, 1848-1856

April 1848. Mulraj, who had succeeded his father (Sawan) in 1844, was deposed as Governor of Multan by Dhuleep Singh, and Sirdar Khan, accompanied by Vans Agnew

(a civilian) and Lieutenant Anderson, was sent to take his place.

April 20, 1848. Mulraj handed over the keys of the city; three days after, the garrison opened the gates, Sikhs rushed in, murdered Anderson and Vans Agnew.—Young Lieutenant Edwards, stationed near Lahore with a regiment of Sikhs who began to desert, sent to Raja of Bhawalpur for aid, and obtained it.

May 20, 1848, he joined Colonel Courtlandt at Dera Ghazi Khan on the Indus; Courtlandt had 4,000 men; they were joined by two bodies of Baluchis, and having altogether 7,000 men, they decided to take Multan; after several fortunate engagements, [the English] remained before Multan till September 1848, when they were joined by large English force under General Whish; they summoned Multan to surrender, were refused; at the same time, Sher Singh (he had arrived from Lahore two months before, allegedly as ally) deserted to enemy. Whole Punjab now in a state of revolt. Lahore Cabinet secured alliance of Dost Mohammed by promising Peshawar. Sir George Lawrence, brother of Sir Henry, Resident at Peshawar; on October 24, 1848, Residency taken by the Sikhs, English kept close prisoners.

Second Sikh War. October 1848, Dalhousie joined the army assembled at Firuzpur. End of October, Gough crossed the Sutlej, joined by General Wheeler at Jalandhar. The Sikhs massed in the Doab, between rivers Ravi and Chenab.

November 22, 1848, battle at Ramnagar. (Sikhs under Sher Singh.) Sikhs retired beyond the Chenab; Gough marched north to effect a passage not in the face of the Sikh batteries.

December 2, 1848, battle at village of Sadullapur. (Sikhs under Sher Singh retreated towards Jhelum River, entrenched themselves there strongly; for six weeks, the English army inactive.

January 14,<sup>1</sup> 1849, battle of Chilianwala, village near River Jhelum; disastrous for English, who lost 2,300 men, three regiments lost their colours; they rested at Chilianwala; Sikhs retired, took up new position.

<sup>1</sup> January 13, according to Smith, The Oxford History of India.

January 22, 1849, capture of Multan by General Whish and Lieutenant Edwards (Mulraj allowed to march out). English army marched to join Gough, while Lieutenant Edwards stayed at Multan with a British garrison.

January 26, 1849, Gough's army heard of capture of Multan; a few days later, Sher Singh offered to submit, [but English] refused.

February 12, 1849, Sher Singh made clever flank march in order to rush down on Lahore while whole British army in the North. Gough overtook him at Gujrat, village near the Chenab.

February 20, 1849, battle of Gujrat (British army 24,000 strong). Comparatively bloodless victory of the English.

March 12, 1849. Sher Singh and his generals submitted—Dalhousie annexed Punjab after having occupied Lahore. Dhuleep Singh had to place himself under British protection; Khalsa army to be disbanded; Koh-i-noor (diamond, cf. p. 256, n. 1) to be delivered to the fair Victoria; the Sikh leaders' private landed possessions confiscated; they had to regard themselves as prisoners in radius of four miles from their places of residence. Mulraj sentenced to life imprisonment.—Settlement of the Punjab left to commission headed by Sir Henry Lawrence, with assistance of his brother Sir John Lawrence (later Governor-General).—A small Sikh army, officered by English on the sepoy principle, was formed; roads made.

May 1849, Gough replaced by Sir Charles Napier. Quarrels between him and Dalhousie, which ended in his resignation.

1848. Annexation of Satara. The Raja from House of Shivaji, placed on throne by Hastings in 1818, died; he was childless, had on deathbed adopted a son and appointed him his heir. Dalhousie refused to recognize him; annexed [Satara].

1849-1851. Outbreaks of several hill tribes put down by Sir Colin Campbell, Colonel Campbell, Mr. Strange, etc. (p. 257).—A general war was declared against dacoity, thuggee, infanticide, human sacrifices, suttee, etc.

Second Burmese War, 1852-1853 (commenced April 12, 1852, ended as result of fights of March 17 and 18, 1853, at Donabyu). Annexation of Pegu under Proclamation of December 20, 1853.

1853. Annexation of Berar, where Raja of Nagpur, raised to throne by Auckland (1840), died without natural issue or adopted son.

Final Annexation of the Carnatic. In 1801, "the Company's Nabob" had retired into private life. In 1819, at his death, his son was put on throne, d. 1825; his infant son then proclaimed Nabob, d. 1853,<sup>1</sup> and now his uncle, Azim Jah, claimed the title, was pensioned off, had precedence of all the other nobles in Madras, Victoria lately had given him the title of Prince of Arcot, fellow lives at ease in his palace at Madras.

1854.<sup>2</sup> Annexation of Jhansi (in Bundelkhand). The Raja of Jhansi, originally tributary of the Peshwa, recognized in 1832 as independent raja, died without natural issue, but adopted son living. Monsieur Dalhousie again refused to recognize him; hence rage of the dispossessed Rani, who later the most prominent leader in the sepoy mutiny.

Dandhu Panth, alias Nana Sahib, was the adopted son of the dismissed and pensioned Peshwa Baji Rao, who d. 1853; Nana Sahib claimed the annual pension of his adoptive father—£100,000; refused. Nana submitted, later wreaked revenge on the "English dogs."

1855-1856. Outbreak of the Santals, a half-savage tribe, in the Rajmahal Hills in Bengal; put down, after seven months' guerrilla warfare, in February 1856.

Early 1856, Dalhousie declined the "humble" request of the deposed Raja of Mysore to restore him in his former government.

<sup>1</sup> 1855, according to Burgess.

<sup>2</sup> 1853, according to Burgess.

1856. Annexation of Oudh because of bad government on the part of the Nabob.—Maharaja Dhuleep Singh of the Punjab adopted Christianity. Dalhousie withdrew, leaving a boastful "farewell minute"; among other things, canals, railways, electric telegraph built; increase in the revenue of £4 million, exclusive of annexation of Oudh; tonnage of ships trading to Calcutta, nearly doubled; in fact, deficiency in the public accounts, but this due to heavy expenditure for public works.—Answer to this rodomontade, the Sepoy Revolution (1857-1859).

. . . . .

(8) LORD CANNING'S ADMINISTRATION, 1856-1858

February 29, 1856. Canning assumed power. (His Penal Code, alike applicable to Hindus, Mohammedans, and Europeans, not completed until 1861.)

August 1856, cholera; ravaged Central India; in Agra alone, 15,000 deaths.

Persian War, 1856-1857. (Pam!): in 1855, British Commissioner left Teheran because of "contemptuous treatment" he had met with.

1856, Persian Government seized Herat from the Afghan Isa Khan.

November 1, 1856. Canning declared war; November 13, several ships sailed from Bombay to attack Muscat.

Early December 1856, Bushire (Abu Shahr) in the Persian Gulf taken.

Meanwhile negotiations opened between Sir John Lawrence (now Chief Commissioner of Punjab in place of his brother Sir Henry) and Dost Mohammed, Amir of Kabul. Early 1857, reconciliation, alliance, was kept.

January 1857, Sir James Outram joined the army at Bushire as Commander-in-Chief of the expedition.

February 7, 1857, battle of Khushab; about 8,000 Persians completely routed by column under Outram.

February 8, 1857, Outram with his column returned to headquarters at Bushire.

April 1857, capture of Mohammera.—Thereupon Treaty of Peace: Persians to withdraw for ever from Herat and Afghanistan, to treat the British Commissioner at Teheran "with all distinction."

. . . . .

1857. The Sepoy Revolt. For some years Sepoy Army very disorganized; 40,000 soldiers from Oudh in it, bound together by caste and nationality; one common pulse in army, insult to a regiment on the part of its superiors felt as grievance by all the rest; officers powerless; laxity of discipline; open acts of mutiny frequent, suppressed with more or less difficulty; downright refusal of the Bengal army to cross the sea for the attack of Rangoon, necessitating the substitution of Sikh regiments (1852). (All this since *annexation of Punjab—1849—*became worse since annexation of Oudh—1856.) Lord Canning began his administration with arbitrary act; until then, the sepoys of Madras and Bombay enlisted by regulation for service all over the world, the Bengalese only for service in India; Canning made "general service enlistment" the rule in Bengal. The "fakirs" denounced this as attempt to abolish caste, etc.

Early 1857, (Pam's) cartridges, lately issued, greased with the fat of pigs and cows, expressly, said the fakirs, in order to cause every sepoy to break his caste.

Hence, sepoy émeutes at Barrackpore (near Calcutta) and Raniganj (near Bankura).

February 26, sepoy émeute at Berhampore (on the Hooghly, south of Murshidabad); in March, sepoy insurrection at Barrackpore; all this in Bengal (forcibly quelled).

March and April. Sepoys of Ambala and Meerut set constantly and secretly their barracks on fire; in districts of Oudh and North-West, fakirs inflamed the people against England. Nana Sahib, Raja of Bithur (on Ganges), plotted with Russia, Persia, the princes of Delhi, and the ex-King of Oudh, took advantage of the sepoy disturbances consequent upon the greased cartridges.

- April 24.<sup>1</sup> Rising at Lucknow of 48th Bengalese (Regiment), 3rd Native Cavalry, 7th Oudh Irregulars, quelled by Sir Henry Lawrence bringing up English troops. At Meerut (north-east of Delhi), 11th and 20th Native Infantry attacked the English, shot their officers, fired the town, slew all English ladies and children, went off to Delhi. At Delhi, in night, some of the mutineers galloped into Delhi, sepoys there rose (54th, 74th, 38th Native Infantry); the English Commissioner, chaplain, officers, murdered; nine English officers defended the magazine, blew it up (two<sup>2</sup> perished); the other Englishmen in the city fled to jungles, most killed by natives or severe weather; some arrived safely at Meerut, now deserted of troops. But Delhi in insurgent hands. At Firuzpur, 45th and 57th Native attempted to seize the fort, driven off by the 61st English; but they plundered town, set it on fire, were next day driven off by cavalry turning off the fort. At Lahore, on news of the events at Meerut and Delhi, the sepoys on general parade, ordered by General Corbett, disarmed (surrounded by English troops with artillery).
- May 20. 64th, 55th, 39th Native Infantry disarmed at Peshawar (as at Lahore); then the remainder of available English and faithful Sikhs cleared the beleaguered stations of Noushera and Mardan, and at end of May, the large station of Ambala, garrisoned by several European regiments assembled from the near-by stations; collected here, nucleus of an army under General Anson.... The hill station of Simla, crowded with English families resident there for the hot season, was not attacked.
- May 25. Anson with his little army marched on Delhi; he died on May 27, replaced by Sir Henry Barnard; the latter on June 7 joined by English troops under General Wilson (coming from Meerut; some fighting with the sepoys had taken place on the route). Rebellion spread throughout Hindustan; in 20 different places simultaneously, sepoy risings and murder of the English; chief scenes: Agra, Bareilly, Moradabad. Sindhia loyal to the "English dogs," not so his "troopers"; Raja of Patiala—for shame!—sent large body of soldiers in aid of the English! At Mainpuri (North-Western Provinces), a young brute of a lieutenant, one De Kantzow, saved treasury and fort.

<sup>1</sup>May 3, according to Kaye and Malleon, History of the Indian Mutiny, Vol. 3, London, 189-1892.

<sup>2</sup>Five, according to Kaye and Malleon, Vol. 2.

At Cawnpore, June 6, 1857, Nana Sahib (had taken command of three sepoy regiments and three regiments of native cavalry, who had risen in Cawnpore, while Sir Hugh Wheeler, commander of Cawnpore troops, had only one battalion of European infantry, and had obtained a slight reinforcement from without; he held the fort and the barracks, whither all English people, women, children, had fled) beleaguered Sir Hugh Wheeler.

June 26, 1857. Nana Sahib offered safe retreat for all Europeans if Cawnpore delivered up; June 27 (Wheeler having accepted), 400 of the survivors allowed to embark in boats and proceed down the Ganges; Nana opened fire on them from both sides; one boat escaped, attacked lower down, scuttled, only four men of the whole garrison escaped. A boat, which had stuck fast on a sand-bank, filled with women and children, seized, marched to Cawnpore, there shut up closely as prisoners; 14 days later (in July), more English prisoners dragged there by the insurgent sepoys from Fatehgarh (military station three miles from Farrukhabad).

Upon orders from Canning, troops moved from Madras, Bombay, Ceylon. On May 23, Madras reinforcement under Neill landed, and Bombay contingent up the Indus, proceeded to Lahore.

June 17, Sir Patrick Grant (succeeding Anson as Commander-in-Chief in Bengal) and General Havelock, the Adjutant General, arrived at Calcutta, started at once thence.

June 6, at Allahabad, sepoys mutinied, butchered the (English) officers with their wives and children, attempted to seize the fort, defended by Colonel Simpson, who on June 11 received aid from Colonel Neill coming up with the Madras fusiliers from Calcutta; the latter turned out all Sikhs, occupied the fort, garrisoned the place only with Britishers. (On the way he had occupied Benares and defeated 37th Native Infantry in first stage of mutiny; sepoys fled); (English) troops flowed from all sides into Allahabad.

- June 30, General Havelock, arriving at Allahabad, took command, marched with some 1,000 Britishers on Cawnpore; July 12, at Fatehpur, repulsed the sepoys, etc., some more actions.
- July 16, Havelock's army on the outskirts of Cawnpore; defeated the Indians, but was too late to enter the citadel; in the night, Nana butchered all English prisoners—officers, ladies, children; then blew up the magazine and abandoned the town.—July 17, English troops entered the place.—Havelock marched into Nana's nest, Bithur, took it unresisted, destroyed the palace, blew up the fort, then marched back to Cawnpore; there he left Neill to garrison and hold the station, while Havelock off to relieve Lucknow; there, despite the efforts of Sir Henry Lawrence, the whole city, save the Residency, fell into insurgent hands.
- June 30, whole garrison marched out against body of rebels in vicinity; repulsed; sheltered again in Residency; this place besieged.
- July 4, Sir Henry Lawrence died (consequent to explosion of shell wounding him on July 2); Colonel Inglis took command; they held out, with occasional sorties against the besiegers, for three months.—Operations by Havelock (p. 271). After the latter back to Cawnpore, Sir James Outram joined him with large bodies of troops, and he ditto moved up reinforcements of many detached regiments from various mutinous districts.
- September 19, the whole force crossed the Ganges under Havelock, Outram, and Neill. On 23d, they stormed the Alambagh, the summer palace of the Kings of Oudh, eight miles from Lucknow.
- September 25, final rush made on Lucknow, reached the Residency, where the united force had to stay, closely blockaded, for two months more. (General Neill fell during the fighting in town; Outram received severe wound in arm.)

- September 20. Delhi captured, after six days of actual fighting, under General Wilson. (Cf. pp. 272, 273 for details.) Hodson at the head of his body of horse broke into palace, seized old King and Queen (Zeenat Mahal); they were thrown in prison, while Hodson with his own hand killed (by shooting) the princes. Delhi garrisoned and quieted. Immediately after, Colonel Greathed went from Delhi to Agra, near which he defeated a strong body of mutineers from Holkar's capital, Indore;
- October 10, he took Agra, then proceeded to Cawnpore, where he arrived on October 26; meanwhile mutineers defeated at Azamgarh, Chattna (near Hazaribagh), Khajwah, and in country round Delhi, under Captain Boileau, Major English, Peel (the latter with naval brigade; also, about to enter the scene of action, Probyn's and Fane's Horse, reinforcements from home; also, regiments of volunteers raised), and Showers. Sir Colin Campbell in August took command of Calcutta, prepared to carry war on larger scale.
- November 19, 1857, Sir Colin Campbell delivered the besieged garrison in the Residency at Lucknow. (Sir Henry Havelock died on November 24); from Lucknow—
- November 25, 1857—Colin Campbell proceeded to Cawnpore, which town had fallen into insurgent hands again.
- December 6, 1857. Victorious battle by Colin Campbell at Cawnpore; the rebels fled, leaving the town deserted, were pursued and severely cut up by Sir Hope Grant. In Patiala, Mainpuri, rebels defeated by Colonel Seaton, Major Hodson, respectively; and in many other places.
- January 27, 1858, King of Delhi [brought] to court-martial under Dawes, etc.; sentenced to death as "felon" (representative of the Mogul dynasty, dating from 1526!) sentence commuted to transportation for life to Rangoon. Conveyed at end of the year.
- Sir Colin Campbell's Campaign of 1858*. On January 2, he took Farrukhabad and Fatehgarh, established himself at Cawnpore, whither he ordered all available troops, stores, and guns from every quarter.—Rebels were massed about Lucknow, where Sir James Outram held them at bay.—After many other incidents (cf. pp. 276, 277),

Lucknow recaptured on March 15<sup>1</sup> (under Colin Campbell, Sir James Outram, etc.); looting of the town, where treasures of Oriental art stored up; fighting over on March 21; last gun fired on the 23d.—Flight of the insurgents to Bareili, headed by Prince Firuz, [son of] Shah of Delhi, Nana Sahib of Bithur, the Maulavi of Fyzabad, and Hazrat Mahal, the Begum of Oudh.

April 25,<sup>2</sup> 1858. Campbell took Shahjahanpur; Mogs beat back attack by rebels near Bareili; on May 6, siege guns opened on Bareili, while General Jones came up by appointment after having seized Moradabad; Nana and his followers fled, Bareili taken without resistance. Shahjahanpur, meanwhile closely invested by the rebels, relieved by General Jones; Lugard's division, marching from Lucknow, attacked, suffered severely at the hands of mutineers under Kunar Singh; the Maulavi of Fyzabad killed soon afterwards, after Sir Hope Grant defeated the Begum, who fled to the Gogra River to rally new forces.

By mid-June 1858, mutineers defeated on all points; incapable of joint action; broken up into bands of marauders pressing hard the divided forces of the English. Centres of action: the standards of the Begum, the Prince of Delhi, and Nana Sahib.

Finishing stroke dealt to insurrection by Sir Hugh Rose's two months' (May and June) campaign in Central India.

January 1858, Rose took Rathgarh, in February, Sangur and Garrakota, marched on Jhansi, where the Rani had taken her stand.

April 1, 1858, severe action against Tantia Topi, cousin of Nana Sahib, who advanced from Kalpi to protect Jhansi; Tantia defeated.

April 4,<sup>3</sup> Jhansi taken; the Rani and Tantia Topi escaped, awaited the English at Kalpi; while marching thither—

<sup>1</sup> March 14, according to Kaye and Malleon, Vol. 4.

<sup>2</sup> April 30, according to Kaye and Malleon, Vol. 4.

<sup>3</sup> April 5, according to Kaye and Malleon, Vol. 4.

- May 7, 1858—Rose attacked by strong body of the enemy at the town of Kanya; he signally defeated them.
- May 16, 1858, Rose within a few miles of Kalpi, closely invested the mutineers.
- May 22, 1858, desperate sortie by the mutineers from Kalpi; they were worsted, fled;
- May 23, 1858, Rose occupied Kalpi. Remained there few days for rest of his soldiers, who worn out [by campaign] and hot summer.
- June 2, young Sindhia (English dog-man) driven out of Gwalior by his troops after hard fighting, fled for his life to Agra. Rose marched on Gwalior; the Rani of Jhansi<sup>1</sup> and Tantia Topi at head of the rebels gave him—
- June 19—battle at the Loshkar Hill (before Gwalior); Rani killed, her army dispersed after much slaughter. Gwalior in English hands.
- During July, August, and September, 1858, Sir Colin Campbell, Sir Hope Grant, and General Walpole engaged to hunt down the more prominent rebels and take all forts whose possession disputed; the Begum made some final stands, then fled with Nana Sahib across the Rapti River to the territories of the English dog-man, Jang Bahadur of Nepal; he allowed the English to pursue the rebels into his country, thus the "last bands of desperadoes dispersed"; Nana and the Begum fled into the hills, while their followers laid down their arms.
- Early 1859, Tantia Topi's hiding-place detected, he tried and executed.—Nana Sahib is "supposed" to have died in Nepal. Khan of Bareilly was seized and shot; Mammu Khan of Lucknow sentenced to life imprisonment; others transported or imprisoned for various terms; bulk of the rebels—their regiments disbanded—laid down the sword, became ryots. The Begum of Oudh lived at Khatmandu in Nepal.
- Confiscation of the soil of Oudh, which Canning declared to be the property of the Anglo-Indian Government!* Sir Robert Montgomery made Chief Commissioner of Oudh in place of Sir James Outram.

---

<sup>1</sup> Her name was Lakshmi Bai.

Abolition of the East India Company. It was broken even before the war [was] at an end.

December 1857. Palmerston's India Bill; first reading passed despite solemn protest by the Board of Directors in February 1858, but Liberal Ministry replaced by Tory.

February 19, 1858, Disraeli's India Bill (cf. p. 281) fell through.

August 2, 1858, Lord Stanley's India Bill passed, and thereby finis of the East India Co. India a province of the empire of the "great" Victoria!

INDEX<sup>1</sup>

A

- Aachen*, 62
 Abbas, uncle of Mohammed, 13
 Abbas I, Shah of Persia, 40
 Abbas Mirza Kajar, 133
 Abbasid:
 — Harun-al-Rashid, 13
 — Mamun, 13
 Abd-al-Malik, see Samanid
 Abdullah Khan, Governor of Malwa, 34
 Abdullah Khan of Golconda, 41
 Abdullah Sayyid, see Sayyid, Abdullah
 Abdurrahman, 12
 Abercromby, Robert, 103
 Abu Bakr Tughlak, see Tughlak
 Abu Bekr, 12
 Abul Fateh Lodi, see Lodi, Abul Fateh
 Abul Fazl, 35
 Abul Hasan of Ghazni, see Ghaznevid
 Abul Rashid of Ghazni, see Ghaznevid
 Adam, 125
 Adil Shah, 28
 — Muhammad, 40
 — Yusuf, 28
 Adil Sur, see Sur, Muhammad Shah
Afghanistan, 12, 32, 56, 70, 106, 130, 135, 137, 138, 141, 150
 Afzul Khan, 43
 Agha Mohammad Kajar, 133
 Agnew, Vans, 146
Agra, 26, 30, 33, 34, 35, 38, 39, 41, 42, 50, 85, 95, 109, 110, 130, 149, 152, 154, 156
 Ahmad Shah of Delhi, 53, 54, 60, 65
 Ahmad Shah (Khan) Durani (Abdali), 53, 54, 70, 71, 75, 106, 130
Ahmadabad, 42, 85, 118
Ahmadnagar, 28, 37, 38, 39, 40, 46, 107, 108, 109, 110
 Ahmed of Ghazni, see Ghaznevid
 Ajit Singh, 143
Ajmer, 16, 19, 30, 34, 57
 Akbar, 29, 32, 33, 37, 38, 50
 Akbar, Khan of Afghanistan, 133, 138, 139, 140, 141
 Akbar, son of Aurangzeb, 44
Alambagh, 153
 Alamgir I, see Aurangzeb
 Alamgir II, 54, 69, 70, 71, 95
 Ala-uddin Ghurid, see Ghurid
 Ala-uddin Khilji, see Khilji
 Ala-uddin Lodi, see Lodi, Ala-uddin
 Ala-uddin Mas'ud, see Mamelukes of Delhi
 Ala-uddin Sayyid, see Sayyid
 Alexander Magnus (of Macedon), 56, 57
 Aligarh, 108, 109
 Ali Gohar, see Shah Alam
 Ali Ibn Rabia, 17
 Ali Jah Jankoji Sindhia, see Sindhia

<sup>1</sup> Geographical names are italicized—Ed.

Ali Jah Jyaji Sindhia, see
     Sindhia
 Ali Mardan Khan, 40
 Aliverdi Khan, 61, 67, 68
Aliwal, 145
Allahabad, 53, 73, 75, 81, 103,
     105, 129, 152, 153
Almora, 120
Alompra, 125
Alptegin, 13
Altunia, 20
 Amar Singh, 119
 Ambaji Ingliia, 110
Ambala, 150, 151
Amboina, 115
America, 123
 Amherst, 125, 126, 127, 129
 Amir Khan the Rohilla, 107,
     110, 113, 116, 118, 120, 123
 Amr, 12
 Amrit Rao, 107, 108
 Anand Pal, 14, 15
 Anderson, 146
 Andhra, 57
Andhra (state), 58
Anhalwar, 16
Anjangaon, 109, 112
 Anson, 151, 152
 Anwaruddin, 61, 62
 Appa Sahib, see Bhonslay of Berar
Arakan, 42, 125, 126
 Aram, see Mamelukes of Delhi
Arbela, 56
Arcot, 58, 63, 64, 67, 79, 87,
     92, 113, 148
Argaon, 109
Arras, 84
 Arslan of Ghazni, see Ghazne-
     vid
 Asaf Jah (Nizam-ul-Mulk), 51,
     52, 53, 62, 63
 Asaf Khan, 39
 Asaf-ud-daula, 81, 90, 94, 103
Asia, 26, 123
Asirgarh, 109, 123
Assam, 42, 125, 126
Assaye, 109
Astrakhan, 27
Attock, 37
 Auchmuty, Samuel, 115

Auckland, 130, 134, 135, 139,
     140, 148
Aurangabad, 38, 44, 65
 Aurangzeb (Alamgir I), 40, 41,
     42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 48, 49,
     51, 54
Ava, 125, 126, 127
 Ayub Sadozai, 132
Azamgarh, 105, 154
 Azim, son of Aurangzeb, 49
 Azim Jah I, Nabob of Carnatic
     (1819-1825), 148
 Azim Jah II, Prince of Arcot, 148
 Azim Khan Barakzai, 132
 Azim-ul-Umara, Nabob of Carnatic, 105, 148

B

Baber, 26-32
Badakhshan, 33
Baghdad, 13
 Bahadur Shah II (Great Mogul),
     153, 154
 Bahadur Shah (Muazzam), 44,
     45, 49, 50
 Bahadur Shah of Gujarat, 29,
     31
 Bahlol Khan Lodi, see Lodi,
     Bahlol
 Bahmanid, 28
     —Gangu Bahmani, 28
 Bahram Khan, 33, 34
 Bahram of Ghazni, see Ghaznevid
 Baillie, 86, 87
 Baji Rao, 51, 52, 53, 67
 Baji Rao II, 102, 106, 107,
     108, 116, 118, 121, 123, 148
Bakar, 136
 Bakarra Khan, see Mamelukes of Delhi
Bala Hissar, 137, 138
 Bala Sahib Bhonslay, see Bhonslay of Berar
 Balaji Rao, 53, 55, 65, 66, 68,
     70, 78, 82
 Balaji Viswanath, 51, 123
Balapur, 51
 Baldeo Singh, 127
Balkh, 16, 40

- Baluchistan*, 12
Bamian, 141
Banda Neira, 115
Bangalore, 57, 79
Banki Zabar, 60
Bankura, 129, 150
Baramahal, 95
Baran, 116
Barasat, 129
Bareilly, 120, 152, 155, 156
Barlow, George, 111, 112, 113, 114, 118
Barnard, Henry, 151
Baroda, 84
Barrackpore, 127, 150
Barwell, Richard, 80, 82
Basalat Jang, 66, 79, 86, 94
Basra, 12
Bassein, 83, 107
Batavia, 70, 115
Bay of Bengal, 109
Bednore, 77, 88
Begum of Oudh, see Hazrat Mahal
Belala Dynasty, 58
Bellary, 86
Benares, 19, 26, 81, 90, 127, 153
Benfield, Paul, 89, 93
Bengal (Presidency), 19, 21, 23, 24, 31, 32, 33, 35, 37, 42, 47, 50, 55, 56, 60, 61, 67, 68, 69, 71, 73-75, 80, 83, 97, 99, 100, 108, 115, 128, 141, 142, 148, 150, 152
Bentinck, William, 127, 128, 129, 133, 135
Berar, 29, 37, 44, 78, 86, 102, 109, 110, 113, 120, 148,
Berhampore, 150
Bernadotte, 88
Bhagerat Roa Sindhia, see Sindhia, Ali Jah Jyaji
Bhao, Sadasheo, see Sadasheo, Bhao
Bharatpur, 109, 110, 127
Bharoch, 45, 84, 108, 109
Bhaskar, 68
Bhatia, 15
Bhatinda, 14, 20
Bhawalpur, 146
Bhonslay:
     — Maloji, 42
     — Shahji, 42, 43, 62
Bhonslay of Berar:
     — Appa Sahib, 120, 121, 122
     — Bala Sahib, 120
     — Madhoji, 86
     — Raghoji I, 55, 67, 68, 78
     — Raghoji II, 103, 104, 107, 108, 109, 113, 120
Bhopal, 52, 116, 128
Biana, 30
Bias, 145
Bidar, 29, 58
Bihar, 19, 20, 26, 31, 32, 35, 37, 41, 49, 55, 60, 61, 67, 69, 71, 74, 100
Bijapur, 28, 40, 43-45
Bikaner, 29
Bir Bal, 37
Bird, Robert, 129
Bithur, 150, 153, 155
Boigne, De, 102, 103
Boileau, 154
Bokhara, 13-15, 26, 27, 137
Bolan Pass, 136
Bombay (presidency), 47, 48, 76, 77, 79, 83, 84, 86, 87, 95, 114, 121, 136, 141, 149, 151, 152
Boscawen, 62
Bourbon, 61, 115
Brathwaite, 95
Bristow, 81
Brown, 122
Brydon, 139
Buckinghamshire, Earl of, 117
Budaun, 26
Buna Bai, see Holkar
Bundelkhand, 26, 39, 40, 52, 68, 121, 123, 148
Bundi, 112, 120
Burdwan, 71
Burhanpur, 39, 45, 51, 83, 109
Burke, Edmund, 91
Burma, 125, 126, 127
Burnes, Alexander, 31, 134, 135, 136, 138
Bushire (Abu Shahr), 149
Bussy, 64, 65, 66, 67, 88
Butwal, 119
Buxar, 73
Buyaid (the Deilemites), 13, 16

C

Cachar, see Kachar
 Caillaud, 70, 77.
Calcutta (Fort William), 47, 48,
 60, 68, 69, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75,
 76, 80, 81, 85, 86, 87, 91,
 94, 99, 100, 102, 103, 106, 111,
 112, 113, 114, 117, 118, 123,
 125, 126, 127, 129, 130, 143,
 149, 150, 152, 154
Calicut, 47, 57, 58, 78
 Campbell, Archibald, 126
 Campbell, Colin, 147, 154, 155
 Campbell, Colonel, 147
 Canning, 149, 150, 152, 156
Cape of Good Hope, 46, 76, 88
 Carnac, 73, 85, 86
Carnata, 22, 24, 58
Carnatic, 28, 55, 58, 61, 62,
 63, 64, 65, 67, 77, 79, 86, 87,
 89, 92, 93, 94, 95, 105, 148
Caspian Sea, 26, 27
 Castlereagh, 117
Cawnpore, 103, 152-154
Ceylon, 47, 58, 87, 152
 Chait Singh of Benares, 90
 Chait Singh, Vizier of Kharak
 Singh, 140
 Chalukyias of Calinga, 58
 Chalukyias of Carnata, 58
Chambal, 39, 52, 110, 112, 143
Champanir, 31
 Chand, Sultana, 37
 Chandara Sahib, 62-64
 Chander Lal, 124
Chanderi (Chendari, Sindhia), 30
 Chandernagor, 60, 61, 69
Chandor, 107, 108
 Chandragupta (Sandracottus), 57
Chanpur, see Jaurpur
 Charles II, King of England,
 47, 48
Charmal, 66
 Charnock, 48
Chattna, 154
Chenab, 146
Chengama, 79, 86
Chera, 58
Chhota Nagpur, 129
Chilianwala, 146, 147

Chimnaji, 102
China, 23, 27, 115, 117, 129
 Chin Kilich Khan, see Asaf Jah
Chinsurah, 60
Chitor, 22, 29, 33, 34
Chittagong, 71, 125
 Chitu, 116, 118, 122, 123
Chola, 58
Chutternutty, 48
 Clavering, 80, 82
 Clive, Robert, 63, 64, 69, 70,
 71, 73, 74, 76, 77, 80, 103
 Close, 107
Cochin, 95
Coimbatore, 57, 58, 87, 88
 Colebrooke, 111
Coleroon, 63
 Collins, 108
 Combermere, 127
Comorin, Cape, 22, 24
 Conflans, 69
Conjeeveram, 28, 58
 Coote, Eyre, 55, 67, 87, 88
 Corbett, 151
Cornelis, 115
 Cornwallis, 94, 95, 97-101, 111,
 112, 116
Coromandel Coast, 24
 Cossijurah, 90
 Cotton, Willoughby, 136-137
 Courtlandt, 146
Cuddalore, 87, 88
Cuddapah, 45
Cutch, 42
Cuttack, 58, 108, 110

D

Dacca, 42
 Dada Khasji, see Sindhia
Dadar, 136
 Dalhousie, 146, 147, 148, 149
 Damaji Gaekwar, see Gaekwars of Gujjarat
 Danaji, 46
 Daniyal, 37
 Dara Shikoh, 40, 41, 42
 Darius Codomanus, 56
 Dataji Sindhia, see Sindhia
 Daud, Governor of Deccan, 50
 Daud, ruler of Bengal, 35

Daulat Rao Sindhia, see Sindhia
Daulatabad (Deogiri), 21, 22, 66
 Dawes, 154
Deccan, 21, 23, 24, 28, 37-40,
 43, 44, 45, 50, 51, 52, 55, 57,
 58, 61, 62, 63, 65, 66, 71,
 75, 77, 80, 107
 Deilemites, see Buyaid
 De Kantzow, 152
Delhi, 14, 17, 19-23, 24, 25,
 26, 28-36, 38-42, 44, 47, 49,
 50-55, 56, 70, 71, 75, 77,
 95, 96, 103, 106, 107, 109,
 110, 120, 130, 145, 150, 151,
 154, 155
 Dennie, 137
Deogaon, 109
Deogiri, see Daulatabad
Dera Ghazi Khan, 146
Devikota, 63
Dharvas, 86
 Dhuleep Singh, 143, 145, 147, 149
 Dhundia Wagh, 104
 Dian Singh, 140, 143
Dig, 110
Dindigul, 78, 95
 Disraeli, 157
Doab, 75, 105, 146
Donabyu, 126, 148
 Donkin, 122
 Dost Ali, Nabob of Carnatic, 62
 Dost Mohammed, 132-134, 137,
 138, 146, 149
 Drake, 68
Dravira, 57
 Dulub Ram, 69
 Dundas, Henry, Earl of Melville,
 91, 92, 93
 Dupleix, 61-65, 67
 Durga Das, 44
 Durjan Sal, 127

E

Edward's, 146, 147
 Egerton, 85
Egypt, 12
 Elizabeth, Queen of England, 47
 Ellenborough, the "Elephant",
 139, 140, 141, 142, 143
Ellichpur, 21, 109

Ellis, 72
 Elphinstone, Mountstuart, 12, 24,
 109, 114, 118, 121, 138, 141
England, 48, 60, 62, 74, 75, 76,
 82, 86, 88, 90, 91, 92, 93,
 94, 95, 100, 103, 109, 111,
 112, 114, 115, 117, 120, 123,
 124, 126, 129, 130, 139, 140
 144, 145, 154
 English, 154
 Erskine, 28
Europe, 61, 64, 70
 Eyre, Charles, 48

F

Faizi, 35
 Faizullah Khan the Rohilla,
 90, 91
 Fane, Henry, 136, 154
Farrukhabad, 152, 154
 Farrukhsheer, 49, 50, 51, 71
 Farrukhzad of Ghazni, see Ghaz-nevid
 Fateh Ali Kajar, 133
 Fatehgarh, 152, 154
 Fateh Khan (in Ahmadnagar), 40
 Fateh Khan Barakzai, 131, 132
 Fateh Mohammed, 77
 Fateh Singh Gaekwar, see Gaek-wars of Gujarat
 Fateh Singh Gaekwar, Regent,
 see Gaekwars of Gujarat
Fatehpur, 153
 Fatima, sister of Mohammed, 13
Fergana, 28
 Ferishtah, 22
 Firdausi, 16
 Firuz, brother of Zaman Shah,
 131, 132
 Firuz, son of Bahadur Shah II,
 155
 Firuz Tughlak, see Tughlak
Firuzpur, 135, 136, 141, 144,
 146, 151
 Firuzshah, 144
 Fletcher, Robert, 74
 Forde, 69, 75
Fort St. David, 62, 66
Fort St. George, see Madras

Fort St. William, see Calcutta
 Fox, Charles James, 91, 92
France, 61, 65, 67, 86, 88, 106, 114
 Francis, Philip, 80, 81, 82, 84
 Fullarton, 88

G

Gaekwars of Gujarat,
 — Damaji, 55, 66, 83
 — Fateh Singh, 83, 84, 85
 — Fateh Singh, Regent, 107, 118
 — Govind Rao, 83, 102, 108
 — Pilaji, 83
 — Sayaji, 83
 Gafur Khan, 118, 122, 123
Galle, Ceylon, 47, 87
 Ganapati, Andhra Dynasty, 58
 Ganga Vansa, Orissa Dynasty, 59
 Gangadhar, Shastri, see Shastri, Gangadhar
 Ganges, 17, 32, 53, 70, 71, 73, 150, 152, 153
 Gangu Bahmani, see Bahmani
 Ganjam, 28
Garrakota, 155
Gawilgarh, 109
 Genghis Khan, 20, 25, 27
 George I, King of England, 60, 90, 103
 George II, King of England, 64
 George III, King of England, 80, 90, 92, 99, 103, 111
 Ghatke, Sarji Rao, 102, 107
Ghats, 45, 57, 80
 Ghazi-uddin, father of Asaf Jah, 65
 Ghazi-uddin, grandson of Asaf Jah, 53, 70, 71
 Ghazi-uddin, son of Asaf Jah, 65
Ghazni, 13-19, 132, 136, 140
 Chaznevid, 13-18
 —Abul Hasan, 17
 —Abul Rashid, 16, 17
 —Ahmed, 16
 —Arslan, 17, 18

— Bahram, 18
 — Farrukhzad, 17
 — Ibrahim ("the Pious"), 17
 — Khusrau II, 19
 — Mahmud, 14, 15, 16, 18, 57
 — Mas'ud I, 16, 18
 — Mas'ud II, 17
 — Maudud, 16, 17
 — Muhammad, 16
Gheria, 72
 Ghiyasuddin Balkan, see Mamelukes of Delhi
 Ghiyasuddin Ghurid, see Ghurid
 Ghiyasuddin Tughlak I, see Tughlak
 Ghiyasuddin Tughlak II, see Tughlak
 Ghulam Kadir, 96
 Ghulam Muhammad, Nabob of Carnatic ("the Company's Nabob") (1825-1855), 148
Ghur, 15, 17, 18
 Ghurid, 18, 19, 29, 31, 56, 57
 — Ala-uddin, 18
 — Ghiyasuddin, 18, 57
 — Mahmud, 19
 — Saifuddin, brother of Alaud-din, 18
 — Saifuddin, son of Ala-uddin, 18
 — Shehabuddin, 18, 19, 57
 Gillespie, 113, 115, 119
 Goa, 35, 47
Godavari, 37, 59, 84
 Goddard, 85
 Godeheu, 65
Gogra, 31, 53, 155
Gohad, 110, 112
Golconda, 29, 41, 42, 45
Gorakhpur, 105
 Gough, Hugh, 143-147
 Govind Chandra of Kachar, 128
 Govind, Guru, 50
Govindpur, 48
 Govind Rao Gaekwar, see Gaekwars of Gujarat
 Grady, 64
 Grant, Hope, 154, 155, 156
 Grant, Patrick, 152
 Greathed, 154
 Grenville, 117

Griffin, 62
Gujarat, 16, 19, 21, 24, 25, 29,
 31, 35, 38, 41, 51, 55, 56, 83,
 84, 85, 114, 118
Gujrat, 147
 Gulab Singh, 145
Gulbarga, 28
Guntur Circars (Guntur), 79,
 86, 94, 120
Gwalior, 19, 25, 34, 41, 85-86,
 95, 107, 108-112, 142, 143,
 156

H

Hafiz Rahmat, 75, 81, 90
 Haidar Ali, 55, 77, 78, 79, 80,
 86-88, 91, 94
Hailebury, 112
 Hajaj, 12
 Hakim, 34, 35
Halla, Sind, 141
 Hamida, 32
 Hamilton, 51
 Harcourt, 109
Harda, 102
 Hardinge, Henry, 143-145
 Harlan, 133
 Harris, 104
 Hartley, 85
 Harun-al-Rashid, see Abbasid
Hastinapuram, 59
Hastings, 30
 Hastings, Earl of Moira, 117,
 118, 119, 120, 123-125,
 142, 147
 Hastings, Warren, 74, 76, 80,
 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 89-91,
 93, 94, 97
Hathras, 120
Hazaribagh, 154
 Hazrat Mahal, Begum of Oudh,
 155, 156
Havelock, 153, 154
 Hay, 72
 Hemu, 34
 Heran, 116
Herat, 32, 131-134, 137, 149
Heytesbury, 130
Himalayas, 23, 26, 27, 53,
 118

Himalayas, Rohilla (north-west Himalayas), 53
 Hindal, 31, 32
Hindu-Kush, 137, 141
Hindustan, 19, 20, 22, 38, 54,
 56, 59, 73, 96, 131, 137, 138,
 152
 Hira Singh, 143, 144
 Hislop, Thomas, 145
 Hobhouse, John, 154
 Hodson, 154
 Holkar, 116, 122
 — Buna Bai, 122
 — Jaswant Rao, 107-110, 112, 113, 118, 122
 — Malhar, 52, 53, 55, 67
 — Malhar Rao, 71, 122
 — Tukaji, 83, 84, 85, 96,
 102
 — Tukaji II, 154
 — Tulsai Bai, 118, 122
 Holwell, 68
Hooghly, 60, 61, 68, 69, 70, 150
 Hughes, 87, 88
 Humayun, 30-33, 37
 Humayun Tughlak, see Tughlak
 Husain Sayyid, see Sayyid, Hu-sain
Hydaspes, see Jhelum
Hyderabad, 28, 41, 45, 51, 62,
 64, 66, 77, 79, 102-104, 108,
 124
Hyderabad, (on the Indus), 136,
 142

I

Ibrahim Lodi, see Lodi, Ibrahim
 Ibrahim of Ghazni, see Ghaznevid
 Ibrahim Sur, see Sur
 Iconium, 27
Ile de France (Mauritius), 61,
 67, 103, 115
 Ilek Khan, 14, 15
 Impey, Elijah, 90
Indian Ocean, 27
Indore, 107, 113, 118, 121, 122,
 154
Indus, 20, 56, 129, 134, 135,
 136, 141, 146, 152

Inglia, Ambaji, see Ambaji,
Inglia

Inglis, 153

Iran, 27

Iraq, 16

Isa Khan of Afghanistan, 149

Ismail, son of Sabuktegin, 14

Ismail Beg, 96

Itimad Khan, 35

J

Jacob, 142

Jadu Rao, 42

Jagatai, 27

Jahangir, 38, 39, 47

Jaipal, 13, 14

Jaipur, 29, 30, 34, 50, 57, 110,
113, 120, 128

Jaisalmer, 29, 32, 57

Jalal Khan, see Sur, Selim Shah

Jalal of Khwarezm, 20

Jalalabad, 133, 139, 140, 141

Jalaluddin, see Khilji

Jalandhar, 146

James I, King of England, 38, 47

Jang Bahadur of Nepal, 156

Jankoji Sindhia, see Sindhia

Jaswant Rao Holkar, see Holkar

Jaswant Singh, 42, 44

Jaunpur, 26, 31

Java, 115

Jehandar Shah, 50

Jenkins, 121

Jessore, 123

Jhansi, 148, 155, 156

Jhansi, Rani of, 148, 155, 156

Jhelum, 39, 56, 146

Jinji, 45, 46, 63

Jodhpur (Rajpur state), see Marwar

Jodhpur (town), 57

Johore, 123

Jones, General, 155

Jones, Harford, 114

Jumna, 15, 26, 52, 54, 110, 112

Jun, 42

Juna Khan, see Tughlak, Muhammad

K

Kabul, 12, 25, 31, 32-37, 39,
40, 52, 53, 106, 114, 130-
134, 137-141, 149

Kachar, 126, 127, 128

Kaikhusräu, see Mamelukes of Delhi

Kaikobad, see Mamelukes of Delhi

Kaisar, brother of Zaman Shah,
131

Kalanga, 119

Kalinjar, 14, 24

Kalpi, 155

Kalyan, 42, 58

Kambakhsh, 46, 50

Kamran, son of Baber, 31, 32

Kamran, son of Mahmud, Shah of Afghanistan, 131-134

Kanara, 57, 58, 77

Kanauj, 14, 15, 19, 32, 56

Kandahar, 32, 37, 38-42, 52,
130-133, 136 137, 138, 140,
141

Kanya, 156

Karachi, 135

Karikal, 66

Karim Khan, 122, 123

Karnal, 52

Karrack, 135

Kashmir, 15, 36, 41, 57, 131, 132, 133, 145

Kasur, 145

Katwa, 68

Kazan, 27

Keane, John, 136

Keating, 84, 115

Kemmendine, 126

Kerala, 58

Kesari, Orissa Dynasty, 59

Kesh, 27

Khajwah, 42, 154

Kande Rao, 78

Khandesh, 24, 29, 37, 44, 107

Kharak Singh, 137, 140

Khatmandu, 119, 156

Khelat, 136, 137

Khilji, 21-23

— Ala-uddin, 21, 22, 25, 26,
56, 58

- Jalaluddin, 21, 22
 — Mubarak, 22, 23
 — Suleiman, 22
 Khizr Khan Sayyid, see Sayyid
Khorassan, 13, 14, 15, 18, 27
 Khurram, see Shah Jahan
Khushab, 149
 Khusrau, 38
 Khusrau Khan, 23
 Khusrau II of Ghazni, see Ghaznevid
Khwarezm, 19, 20
Khyber Pass, 137, 138, 140, 141
Kipchak, 27
Kistawar, 132
Kistna, 24, 78, 86
 Knox, 70
 Kohan Dil Khan, 132
Kokand, 28
Kolar, 79
Kolhapur, 45
Konkan, (the Konkans), 42, 43, 44
Kora, 73, 75, 81
Kotah, 120
 Krishna, 56
Kumaon, 120
 Kunar Singh, 155
Kurdistan, Mountains of, 56
Kurg, 86, 128
Kurnul, 45
Kurpa, 102
 Kutbuddin, see Mamelukes of Delhi
- L
- Labourdonnais, 61, 64, 67
Laghman, 16
Lahore, 13-18, 31, 32, 33, 38, 39, 41, 52, 54, 71, 113, 129, 132, 159, 143-147, 151, 152
 Lake, 108-113
 Lal Singh, 144
 Lally, 66, 67
Laswari, 109
 Lawrence, George, 146
 Lawrence, Henry, 145, 146, 147, 149, 151, 153
 Lawrence, John, 147, 149
 Lawrence Stringer, 63, 64, 67
 Leyden, 28
 Lindsay, John, 80
 Lodi, Abul Fateh, 15
 Lodi, 26, 31
 —Ala-uddin, 26
 —Bahlol, 25, 26
 —Ibrahim, 26, 30
 —Khan Jahan, 39
 —Mahmud, 31, 32
 —Sikandar, 26
London, 73, 81, 82, 114, 130
Loshkar, 156
 Louis XI, 78
 Louis XV, 66
Lucknow, 34, 151, 153, 155, 156,
Ludhiana, 132, 144
 Lugard, 155
- M
- Macao*, 114
 Macartney, 87, 88, 89, 94
 Macbean, 126
 Macdowall, 114
 Macnaghten, Lady, 139
 Macnaghten, William, 137, 138, 139
 McNeill, 134
 Macpherson, John, 94
 Maddock, 128
 Madhoji Bhonslay, see Bhonslay of Berar
 Madhu Rao I, 74, 78, 80, 84
 Madhu Rao II, 84, 85, 102
Madras (Fort St. George, Madras Presidency), 43, 45, 47, 48, 55, 62-69, 71, 74, 76, 77, 83, 86, 87, 88, 111, 113, 114, 116, 148, 152
Madura, 58, 79
Magadha, 57
 Maha Bandula, 125
 Mahabbat Khan, 39, 40, 44
Maharajpur, 143
Mahawan, 15
 Mahdaji Sindhia, see Sindhia
Mahé, 86
Mahidpur, 122
 Mahmud, Shah of Afghanistan, 114, 131, 132

- Mahmud Ghurid, see Ghurid
 Mahmud Lodi, see Lodi, Mahmud
 Mahmud of Ghazni, see Ghazne-
   vid
 Mahmud Tughlak, see Tughlak
Mahnपुरi, 152, 154
Makwanpur, 120
Malabar (Malabar coast), 23,
   58, 78, 87, 88, 128
Malavelli, 104
 Malcolm, John, 106, 114, 122, 123
 Malhar Holkar, see Holkar
 Malhar Rao Holkar, see Holkar
Maligaon, 123
 Malik Amber, 38, 39, 42
 Malik Kafur, 22
Mallia, 114
 Maloji Bhonslay, see Bhonslay
Malon, 119
Matwa, 20, 21, 24, 25, 29-34,
   40, 51, 52, 53, 56, 57, 107,
   116, 122
 Mama Sahib, see Sindhia, Jankoji Mamelukes of Delhi:
   — Ala-uddin Mas'ud, 20
   — Aram, 19
   — Bakarra Khan, 21
   — Ghiyasuddin Balban, 20, 21, 23
   — Kaikhusrau, 21
   — Kaikobad, 21
   — Kutbuddin, 19
   — Muhammad Balban, 21
   — Muizzuddin Bahram, 20
   — Naziruddin Mahmud, 20, 23
   — Razia, 20
   — Rukneddin, 20
   — Shamsuddin Altamsh, 20,
   56
 Mammu Khan of Lucknow, 156
 Mamun Abbasid, see Abbasid
Manchuria, 27
Mangalore, 79, 88, 89
Manipur, 126
 Man Singh of Marwar (Jodhpur),
   127
 Mansur Samanid, see Samanid
Mardan, 151
 Marley, 119
 Maroba Pharnavis, see Pharnavis
 Martindale, 119
Marwar (Jodhpur), 19, 29, 30,
   32-34, 38, 42, 44, 50, 57,
   109, 120, 122, 127
 Mas'ud I of Ghazni, see Ghazne-
   vid
 Mas'ud II of Ghazni, see Ghazne-
   vid
Masulipatam, 28, 63, 66, 69
 Maudud of Ghazni, see Ghazne-
   vid
 Maulavi of Fyzabad, 155
Mauritius, see Ile de France
Meerut, 25, 150, 151
 Mehrab Khan of Khelat, 136
Merv, 16
 Metcalfe, 113, 124, 130
Mewar, 22, 30, 44, 57
Mewat, 31
Mhye, 84
Miani, 141
Midnapore, 69, 71
 Mill, James, 47
 Minto, 113-117, 118
 Mir Jafar (1702-1725), see Mur-shid Kuli Khan
 Mir Jafar (1757-1760, 1763-1765), 69-73
 Mir Jumla, 41, 42
 Mir Kasim, 71, 72
Mirpur, 142
 Mirza Askari, 31, 32
 Mirza Khan, 37
 Mirza Suleiman, 33
Mogs, 155
Mogul Empire, 30, 49, 52, 55, 70, 96, 97, 127
 Mohammad Kajar, 133
 Mohammed, 12, 13, 25
 Mohammed Ali, called "the Company's Nabob," 63, 64, 65, 77,
   89, 92, 93, 105
 Mohammed Barakzai, 132
 Mohammed Beg, 96
 Mohammed Shah, 51, 52, 53,
   60, 62
Mohammera, 150
Molucca isles, 115
Monghyr, 72

- Mongolia*, 27
 Monson, Colonel, 110
 Monson, member of the Calcutta Council, 80, 82
 Montgomery, Robert, 156
Moradabad, 152, 155
 Morari Rao, 64, 65, 86
 Muazzam, see Bahadur Shah
 Mubarak Khilji, see Khilji
 Mubarak Sayyid, see Sayyid
 Mubariz, 51
Mudki, 144
 Mugat Rao, see Sindhia
 Muhallab, 12
 Muhammad Adil Shah, see Adil Shah
 Muhammad Amin, 42
 Muhammad Balban, see Mamelukes of Delhi
 Muhammad Kasim, 12
 Muhammad of Ghazni, see Ghaznevid
 Muhammad Sayyid, see Sayyid
 Muhammad Shah Sur, see Sur
 Muhammad Sultan, 42
 Muhammad Tughlak, see Tughlak
 Muizzuddin Bahram, see Mamelukes of Delhi
Multan, 12, 15, 16, 19, 21, 25, 133, 145, 147
 Mulraj, 145, 147
Munj, 15
 Munro, Hector, 72, 86
 Munro, John, 114
 Munro, Thomas, 116
 Murad, son of Akbar, 37
 Murad, son of Shah Jahan, 40, 41, 42
Murshidabad, 61, 68, 70, 80, 150
 Murshid Kuli Khan (Mir Jafar), 49, 50, 60
Muscat, 114, 149
Muttra, 15, 59, 110
 Muzaffar Jang, 63
 Muzaffar Shah of Gujarat, 29
Mysore, 45, 55, 57, 64, 65, 78, 79, 86, 88, 103, 104, 128
- N
- Nadir Shah, 53
Nagar, 34
Nagarkot, 15, 17
 Najib-ud-daula the Rohilla, 71, 75
 Najm-ud-daula, 73
Nagpur, 55, 86, 87, 104, 107, 108, 109, 114, 120, 122, 148
 Nanak, 50
 Nana Pharnavis see Pharnavis
 Nana Sahib (Dandhu Panth), 123, 148, 150, 152, 153, 155, 156
 Nanjaraj, 78
 Nao Nihal, 140
 Napier, Charles, 141, 147
 Napoleon I, 106, 114
 Narayan Rao, 82, 86
Narbada, 37, 52, 54, 84, 85
 Nazir Jang, 63, 65
 Naziruddin Mahmud, see Mamelukes of Delhi
 Naziruddin of Multan, 19
 Naziruddin Tughlak, see Tughlak
 Nearchus, 56
Negapatam, 87
 Neill, 152, 153
Nepal, 118, 120, 156
 Nizam Ali, 55, 66, 76, 78, 79, 101-104, 109
 Nizamuddin, 21
 Nizam-ul-Mulk, see Asaf Jah
 Norris, William, 48
 North, 92
Northern Circars, 28, 65, 66, 77, 79, 124
North-Western Provinces, 129, 139, 150, 152
 Nott, 138, 140, 141
Noushera, 151
 Nuh, 14
 Nunkomar (Nanda-Kumar), 82
 Nur Jahan, 38, 39
- O
- Ochterlony, David, 119
 Omar Sheik Mirza, 28
Omercote (Umarkot), 32, 142

Onore, 79
Orissa, 35, 49, 55, 57-61, 67, 69, 73, 87, 100
Oudh, 19, 24, 30, 37, 53, 55, 58, 69, 73, 75, 80, 81, 90, 91, 94, 103, 105, 106, 119, 128, 149, 150, 156
Ouseley, Gore, 114
Outram, James, 141, 149, 153-156
Oxus (Amu Darya), 12, 13, 14, 15, 16

P

Palamau, 129
Palghat, 87
Palmer, 124
Palmerston ("Pam"), 130, 135, 139, 149, 150, 157
Panchala, 59
Pandharpur, 118
Pandya, 58
Panipat, 26, 34, 49, 54, 70, 74, 106, 116, 130
Paris, 67, 77
Parviz, 38
Patiala, 113, 152, 154
Patna, 69-72
Payandah Khan, 131
Pearse, 87
Peel, 154
Pegu, 125, 148
Peking, 27
Perron, 108
Persia, 12, 16, 23, 25, 27, 32, 38, 106, 114, 133, 134, 135, 149, 150
Persian Gulf, 12, 56, 114, 135, 149
Peshawar, 14, 15, 37, 131-134, 141, 146, 151
Peyton, 62
Pharnavis,
 — Maroba, 55
 — Nana, 83-86, 94, 95, 96, 101, 102, 107
Phrygia, 27
Pigot, 89
Pilaji, Gaekwar, see Geakwars of Gujarat

Pir Muhammad, 25, 27
Pitt, William (the Younger), 91-94, 97, 99
Plassey, 69
Plithana, 59
Pollilore, 87
Pollock, 140, 141
Pondicherry, 55, 61-63, 66, 67, 86, 87, 95
Poona, 43, 44, 66, 71, 75, 78, 83, 84, 85, 86, 96, 102, 106, 107, 108, 118, 121, 123
Popham, 85, 86
Porto Novo, 87
Porus, 56
Pottinger, Eldred, 134, 135, 139, 141
Pratap Singh of Tanjore, 63
Pratap Singh, son of Sher Singh, 143
Prithwi, 19
Prome (Pri), 126
Puar, Udaji, 52, 67
Pulicat, 28, 87
Punjab, 14, 15, 20, 23, 24, 25, 26, 33, 34, 35, 39, 50, 53, 54, 70, 77, 133, 140, 143, 150
Purandhar, 84, 86
Pur Dil Khan, 132
Purnaiya, 88, 104, 128
Purnea, 69, 70
Puru, see Porus

Q

Quetta, 136, 140

R

Raffles, Stamford, 116, 123
Raghoba (Raghunath Rao), 54, 66, 68, 70, 78, 82-86, 102
Raghoji Bhonslay I, see Bhonslay of Berar
Raghoji Bhonslay II, see Bhonslay of Berar
Raghunath Rao, see Raghoba
Raguji Khan, 53
Raisin, 33
Rajahmundry, 28
Rajah Ram (the Elder), 46, 53

- Rajah Ram (the Younger), 53, 66
Rajmahal Hills, 148
Rajputana, 29, 34, 75, 118
Ramghur, 129
Ramnagar, 46
 Ram Narayan, 69, 70, 71, 72
Rampra, 112
 Ranaji Sindhia, see Sindhia
Rangoon, 126, 127, 150, 154
Rangpur, 126
Raniganj, 150
Ranjit, Singh, 112, 113, 118, 133-137, 140, 143
Rantambhor, 31, 34
Rapti, 156
Rathgarh, 155
Ravi, 146
 Raymond, 102, 103
 Razia, see Mamelukes of Delhi
Red Sea, 129
 Richards, 126
Rodrigues, 115
 Roe, Thomas, 38, 47
Rohilkhand, 25, 53, 75, 81, 91
 Rose, Hugh, 155, 156
 Rukneddin, see Mamelukes of Delhi
 Rumbold, Thomas, 87, 89
Russia, 26, 134-135, 150
- S
- Saadat Ali, Nabob of Oudh, 103, 105
 Sabuktegin, 14, 17, 18,
 Sadasheo (Sadashiv) Bhao, 54, 70, 71
Sadullapur, 146
 Safavid Dynasty, 32
 Safdar Jang, 53
 Saffarid, 13
   — Yakub, 13
Sagar, 107, 121
 Sahu, see Sahu
 Sahu, 45, 51, 53, 66, 123
 Sahuji of Tanjore, 62, 63
 Saifuddin, see Ghurid
 Saifuddin Ghurid, see Ghurid
 Saifuddin of Kesh, 27
St. Denis, 115
St. Paul, 115
 Sakkaram Bapu, 83, 84
 Salabat Jang, 64, 65, 66, 77
 Sala Mohammed, 141
Salbai, 86, 95
 Sale, 138, 139, 140
 Sale, Lady, 139
Salimgarh, 41
Salsette, 84
 Samanid, 13, 16
   —abd-al-Malik, 13
   —Mansur, 14, 16
Samarkand, 13, 15, 27,
 Sambhaji, 45
Sambhal, 31, 35
 Sumner, 73
Samagarh, 41
 Sanders, 65
 Sangram, 30, 31
Sangur, 155
 Sanjar, 18
 Santaji, 46
Satara, 46, 51, 53, 123, 147
Satpura Hills, 57, 109, 113-114
Savanur, 86
 Sawan, 145
 Sayaji Gaekwar, see Gaekwars of Gujarat
 Sayyid, Abdullah, 50, 51
 Sayyid, Husain, 50, 51
 Sayyid 25
   —Ala-uddin, 25
   —Khizr Khan, 25
   —Mubarak, 25
   —Muhammad, 25
Scotland, 79
 Scrafton, 75
 Seaton, 154
 Selim, see Jahangir
 Selim Shah Sur, see Sur
 Sena, 6th dynasty of Bengal, 56
Seringapatam, 80, 88, 95, 104
 Setts, Hindu bankers of Calcutta, 72
 Sewell, Robert, 26
 Shah Alam (Ali Gohar), 55, 69-72, 75, 95, 109
 Shah Jahan (Khurram), 38-34, 47
Shahjahanpur, 139, 155

- Shahji Bhonslay, father of Shivaji, see Bhonslay
Shahpuri, 125
 Shaista Khan, 43
 Shamsher Bahadur, 68
 Shamsuddin Altamsh, see Mamelukes of Delhi
 Shastri, Gangadhar, 118
Shatt al Arab, 12
 Shebabuddin Ghurid, see Ghurid
 Shelbourne, 75, 92
 Shelton, 138
 Sher ali Khan, 132
 Sher Khan (Shah) Sur, see Sur
 Sher Mohammed, 142
 Sher Singh, Sikh chieftain, 146
 Sher Singh, son of Ranjit, Singh, 140, 143
Shikarpur, 135, 136
Shiraz, 114
 Shitab Roy, 70
 Shivaji, 43, 44, 52, 63, 105, 121, 147
 Shivaj of Kanauj, 57
 Shore, John, Lord Teignmouth, 98, 101, 103
 Showers, 154
 Shuja, son of Shah Jahan, 41
 Shuja-uddin, Subahdar of Bengal, 60, 61, 67
 Shuja-ud-daula, Nabob of Oudh, 73, 75, 80, 81,
 Shuja-ul-Mulk, Shah of Afghanistan, 114, 131-138, 141
Siam, 125
Siberia, 25, 26
 Sikandar, Begum of Bhopal, 128
 Sikandar Jah (Nizam), 109, 110, 120, 124
 Sikandar Lodi, see Lodi, Sikandar
Sikri, 30
Simla, 119, 134, 151
 Simonich, Count, 133, 135
 Simpson, 152
Sind, 12, 16, 19, 24, 32, 37, 42, 57, 129, 133, 134-137, 141
 Sindhia, 116
 — Ali Jah Jankoji (Mugat Rao), 127, 142
 — Ali Jah Jyaji (Bhagerat Rao), 142, 143, 152, 156
 — Dada Khasji, 142
 — Dataji, 71
 — Daulat Rao, 96, 102-103, 106-112, 116, 118, 121, 123, 127, 142
 — Jankoji (Mama Sahib), 142
 — Mahdaji, 55, 83, 85, 86, 95, 96
 — Ranaji, 52, 53, 67
 — Tara Bai (Maharani), 142, 143
Singapore, 123
Singar, 107
Sipra, 122
 Sirdar Khan, 145
Sirhind, 113
Sitabaldi Hills, 122
 Smith, Joseph, 79
 Smith, Lionel, 123
Sobraon, 145
Solingar, 87
Somnath, 16
 Spencer, 73
Srinagar, 41
 Stanley, 157
 Staunton, 123
 Stephenson, 109
 Strange, 147
 Stuart, 88
 Suchat Singh, 143
 Suffrein, 88
Sukkur, 141
Sulaiman, Mts., 14
 Suleiman, grandson of Shah Jahan, 41
 Suleiman Khilji, see Khilji
 Sullivan, Lawrence, 75
 Sultan Ali Sadozai, 132
 Suraj-ud-daula, 68, 69
 Sur, 31, 33
 — Ibrahim, 33
 — Muhammad Shah, 33
 — Selim Shah, 33, 59
 — Sher Shah, 32, 33, 35
Surat, 41, 44, 47, 83-85
Sutlej, 14, 17, 25, 112, 113, 119, 129, 135, 144, 145, 146
Sweden, 88
 Sykes, 73
Sylhet, 126
Syria, 12, 27

T

Tagara, 59
Tahir, 13
Tahirid, 13
Tahmasp, Shah of Persia (1524-1576), 32
Tahmasp, Shah of Persia (1730-1732), 52
Talneir, 123
Tamerlane (Timur), 25, 27, 28, 35
Tanjore, 45, 58, 62, 64, 66, 77, 89, 105
Tantia Topi, 155, 156
Tara Bai, See Sindhia
Tara Bai, wife of Ram Raja, 53
Tartary, 25
Tatta, 24, 136
Taxila, 56
Tegeen (Tezin), 141
Teheran (Tehran), 106, 114, 134, 135, 149, 150
Telinga (Telingana), 23, 24, 28, 58
Tellichery, 87
Tenasserim, 125, 126
Thanesar, 15, 17
Thompson, 136
Tibet, 27
Timur, see Tamerlane
Timur, Shah of Afghanistan, 70, 106, 130
Timur, son of Shuja-ul-Mulk, 137
Tinnevelly, 58, 79, 80, 86, 87, 88
Tipu Sahib, Sultan, 94, 95, 101, 103, 104, 106, 113,
Titu Mir, 129
Todar Mall, 36
Toghrul, Governor of Delhi, 21
Toghrul, rebel leader at Ghazni, 17
Toghrul Beg, Seljuk leader, 17
Tokarrab Khan, 45
Tonk, 112
Transoxiana (Mawarannahr), 13, 14, 15, 25, 27
Travancore, 58, 95
Trichinopoly, 62, 63, 64, 79
Trimbakji Danglia, 118, 121, 123

Trinkomali, 87
Trivadi, 63
Tughlak, 23-24
   — Abu Bakr, 24
   — Firuz, 24, 29
   — Ghiyasuddin I, 26
   — Ghiyasuddin II, 24
   — Humayun, 23
   — Mahmud, 24
   — Muhammad, 23, 28, 59
   — Naziruddin, 24
Tughlak Timur of Jagatai, 27
Tukaji Holkar, see Holkar
Tukaji II Holkar, see Holkar
Tulsi Bai Holkar, see Holkar
Turan, 20

U

Udaipur, 34, 38, 50, 120
Udaji Puar, see Puar
Udwanullah, 72
Ujjain, 107
Umarkot, see Omercote
Umdat-ul-Umara, 105
Upton, 84

V

Vansittart, 71—73, 75
Vargaon, 85
Vasco da Gama, 46
Vellore, 45, 113
Venkoji, 58, 105
Verelst, 73, 74
Victoria, Queen of England, 147, 148, 157
Vijayanagar, 58
Vikramaditya, 57
Vindhya Hills, 116
Vira Raja, 128
Visal, 57
Vittaji, 107
Vizagapatam, 69

W

Wala, see Sindhia, Dada Khasji
Walid, 12
Walpole, 156
Wandiwash, 67

Warangal, 22, 28, 58
Wardha, 57
Wasil Muhammad, 122
Watson, 69
Wazir Ali, 103
Wellesley, Arthur, Duke of Wellington, 103, 108-111
Wellesley, Henry, Lord Cowley, 106
Wellesley, Richard Colley, Lord Mornington, 92, 96, 103-106, 108, 110, 11, 128
Wheeler, Hugh, 146, 152
Whish, 146
Wild, 140
William and Mary, of England, 48
Willoughby, 115
Wilson, 151, 154
Wood, 119

Woodington, 108
Wynch, 89

Y

Yakub Saffarid, see Saffarid
Yandabo, 126
Yeh, 126
Yildiz, 19
Yusuf Adil, see Adil Shah

Z

Zabita Khan, 75, 96,
Zain Khan, 37
Zaman, Shah of Afghanistan, 106, 113, 114, 131
Zeenat Mahal, 154
Zendegan, (Dandankan), 16
Zulfikar Khan, 46, 50

TO THE READER

The Foreign Languages Publishing House will appreciate any comments you may wish to make on the quality of the translation and design of this book, as well as suggestions for future publications.

Our address is 21, Zubovsky Boulevard, Moscow, U.S.S.R.

Printed in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics

К. МАРКС
ХРОНОЛОГИЧЕСКИЕ ВЫПИСКИ
ПО
ИСТОРИИ ИНДИИ

Date Due

		DEC 20 1976
MAR 26 1975
		NOV 27 1978
APR 1 1975
		APR 1 1978
NOV 15 1976		APR 10 1988
DEC 1 1979		JAN 25 1992
APR 1 1981
		FEB 15 2002
DEC 6 1983
JAN 15 1992

DS 436 .M3

Marx, Karl, 1818-1883.

Notes on Indian history (664-1

010101 000

0 1163 0219904 1

TRENT UNIVERSITY

DS436 .M3
Marx, Karl
Notes on Indian history, 664-
1858

DATE

ISSUED TO

180540

180540

